POETRY.

IF WE WOULD.

If we would but check the speaker
When he speaks his neighbor's name,
If we would but stop the tattler
Ere no other words of blame;
If we would, how many mighty
Tears from paths of sin and shame.

Let us step outside the stronghold
Of our selfishness and pride;
Let us lift our faltering footsteps,
Let us strengthen one we chide;
Let us, ere we linger, help them,
Hold a light to cheer and guide.

Ah, how blessed—ah, how blessed
Earth would be if we'd but try
Thrusts and sigh and thrust the weaker,
Thus to check each brother's sigh.
Thus to ask of duty's pathway
To our better land on high.

In each life, however lowly,
There are souls at mighty good;
Still, we shrink from souls appealing
With a timid, "If we could!"
But a kind word judges all things
Knows the truth is, "if we would."

SELECTED.

The Bitter End,

A passenger by the Jeannette tells of a married pair appearing on shipboard at the moment the gangplank was being pulled in at the dock in New York. A state-room had been procured in some mysterious manner, and some lugg trunks followed, but the owners came not, and the captain was somewhat puzzled to find that the owner on the passenger list and the occupants of the stateroom were not the same. After the ship, however, lost sight of land, the captain was taken into the confidence of the gentleman, and told of an elopement.

The groom was a man about forty years of age, a foreigner and a count, with a cushiony moustache on his face, and a castle on the Rhine. He had the hard, handsome face common to Mississippi gamblers, and dressed himself in the same gorgeous style.

The bride, without being handsome, had large winning blue eyes, tint, in their helpless confiding sort of expression, won the sympathy of all on board.

The Count treated his bride with elaborate courtesy, always getting out of the way when the poor thing suffered from seasickness, and after expressing his concern for exuberance in the choicest phrase.

He expressed himself annoyed terribly with the monotony of the sea, and tried hard to inveigle certain gentlemen into games of chance, only to pass the time, however. He was strongly averse to gambling.

At the end of the voyage the pair disappeared, and two fugitives were heard of no more until months after, when the Australian was on her way back to New York, when the kind-hearted captain learned that a woman, traveling alone, was very ill in the steerage.

Seeking her with the ship's physician, he was astonished to find in the sick steerage passenger the Count's bride of a few months before.

He vacated his state-room to the poor woman in her faded finery, and little by lit the bond her sharing.

It was the old, old story of offended parents, and a cruel husband, who, finding a helpless wife, without money, on his hands, first abused and then deserted her.

She has parted with the few bits of jewelry left her by the brute, and was now getting back as best she could, ruined and brokenhearted, to her old home.

The ship was approaching New York. The weary passengers collected on deck saw the poor creature, with little remaining of her former self but the wistful, confiding look from her blue eyes that from out the pale, shrunken face seemed larger than ever.

Those who watched her more closely saw at times a light gleam in them, as if for a second her poor, bombed faculties were unhinged and crazy.

The vessel, aided by wind and steam, was dashing on, nearing every second the entrance to the bay, when suddenly the startled passengers heard a wild scream, saw a flash of white garments, a splash, and then the wild cry of some one overboard.

The steamer was stopped, the boats lowered, and after an hour's search, the body of the poor woman was recovered, and brought on board.

A Bay county, Mich., Indian girl is now before the people as a claimant to $2,000,000 worth of property in Pittsburgh. She is the daughter of Wm. Mowry by an Indian woman who he married 26 years ago at Sault Ste. Marie. Mowry by his profession of lo by friends instead of by his family, to whom it should have reverted. The property now includes some of the most valuable real estate and finest buildings in Pittsburgh, and to recover it two suits have been brought in Chancery. A commissioner is taking depositions in Bay City, and the testimony makes out a very clear case for the complainant. One of the witnesses who was present at the marriage, testifies Mowry married Mitchigun-wassung, offering Pero her father, a horse, a barrel of flour, a half-barrel of pork, a dog, and a double-barreled shot-gun for her. Pero readily accepted the offer, whereupon Mowry shook hands with Pero, Pero's wife, Pero's daughter, and all in the room. He then kissed the girl and promised to provide for her as long as he lived. They were married according to the Indian custom, and lived together as man and wife. The fruit of the union was one child, a daughter, the present claimant, who is now Mrs. Ke-ne-ta-ga-bink. The probabilities are all in favor of this Indian, who bids fair to become a Chippewa millionaire.

Beecher-Tilton Notes.

An exchange says Henry Ward Beecher is 61 years of age. He has been pastor of Plymouth Church for 27 years, and a preacher of the gospel 40 years. He has done more to smuggle, instruct and educate his race, than any man living on the continent. His eloquent addresses in England in behalf of his country, in the late conflict, should endear him to every American heart. During a long life of usefulness, no charges involving his good name have been preferred against him until lately, after he had become a gray-headed old man, when the fiery process of youth, one would suppose, had subsided. Such a life as Beecher has lived should have established him from calumny and unjust criticism, and certainly he should have been deemed an innocent man until charges against him were proven, and that too by the testimony of respectable witnesses.

When Theodore Tilton, the biographer of Victoria C. Woodhull, and a free love reformer comes forward and brands his wife with infamy, and more especially his children, by charging that Beecher has been guilty of adultery with Mrs. Tilton some four years ago or more, and he knowing it all the time, lives with her and thus in law confirms the offence, and then shifts about as above, he deserves to be branded as a villian, no matter whether Beecher is guilty or not. No man is above a brute, who will thus wantonly brand his children with having a mother who is so adulterous, after so long a time had elapsed since the offence had been committed. Tilton well knows that for all time in the future, his daughters, now verging upon womanhood, will have the glowing recollection that their father has branded their mother as a fallen woman, and that those among whom they may live will perhaps attach a consequence thereof, unjust odium to them.

So whether Mrs. Tilton is guilty or innocent, a fellow who will thus bring shame and disgrace upon his children, simply that he may wreak revenge upon Beecher, is an unfit associate for decent men. And thus believing, we give no credence to any statement he makes, unless supported by proof that is entitled to credit. And when Victoria C. Woodhull lies from California to New York to sustain Tilton, both should become a stench in the nostrils of all respectable people.—Ex.

Two Children Burned to Death —Burning A Hen Out.—

Recently a terrible affair occurred in Lower Wakefield township, Bucks county, Pa., by which two children of a Mr. John Bennett, who is in the employ of Mr. Haines, were burned to death in a barn. It appears that a certain hen had made its nest on the threshing floor of the barn, and was there sitting in opposition to the desires of its owners. Several attempts had been made to force the hen to leave the nest, but without avail; and recently, in discussing the matter at dinner, one of the family jokingly remarked that the only way to cure the hen would be to burn it out. Two of Mr. Bennett's children, one 3 and the other 5 years old, were at the dinner table when this remark was make. It is supposed they took the suggestion for truth, and acted upon it, for as soon as they had finished their dinner, unknown to the family, they procured matches, went to the barn, and set fire to the nest upon which the hen was sitting. The fire spread so rapidly that the children became frightened and began to scream. Mrs. Bennett, the mother of the children, hearing their cries, hastened to the barn to ascertain the cause. When she reached it, she found the children standing in the middle of the threshing floor, with a sheet of fire separating them from her. Rushing to another part of the building, in the hope of gaining access access to them, the agonized mother found them completely surrounded with the raging flames, and was utterly powerless to render them any assistance. While the terror-stricken mother was looking at her children, one of them climbed upon a threshing machine, and piteously called for help, and in another instant was lost to view in the flames. No assistance could be rendered and the entire barn, with its human contents, was destroyed.

The death of Bishop Whitehouse resulted from yesterday. He was born in Lambeth, England, in 1802, and was ordained deacon in 1825, and priest in 1826. He was consecrated Bishop of Illinois in 1859. He resigned from the Episcopate of Illinois in 1874, and was elected Bishop of Chicago. He was buried from Trinity Church, Chicago, on Wednesday last.

Tweed is acquiring a good deal of popularity on the Island. He often distributes bottles of claret and packages of cigars among "the boys," which makes their hearts run over with gratitude, so that they always remember "Uncle Bill" in their orisons. "The boys" who are residents of the good old man's bounty are principally thieves, plunder, rascals, anywhere from a loaf of bread to a pair of boots, was taken from them before they were sent to the Island. The last notorious stolen millions of dollars from the city; if they had, no one would have disturbed the possessions of the wealthy gentleman when they housed him in the county jail.

The Secrets of the Bowl.

A farmer Brooklyn saloon keeper, who has been converted by the Hunker ladies, has printed the receipes he used to keep nasty bitters, &c., sailed on the mayor of that city. "Is this the Mayor of this town?" he entioned. "Now fire 'em out!" The official looked and replied that it was and looking. "Yes, and it was did right in this town—eight dives here and forty rods away! Is this a one-horse town, what they jump from behind the door soil grab a man's ear, or is it a big town, where they strike from the shoulder? This is the way I fight!" and he unhesitated his jacket and started around shouting out with his right, and then regetting away" from a blow on the nasal The Mayor was kept dodging to avoid a new eye, and he lastely promised to have the police look into the matter. "Perfect" said the man, "who said perfect? what I want is for 'em to stand as square and come for me as—and no—and no—and no! And he jumped this way and that, dusted his head and kicked higher than the Mayor's. What he required of a front of the barrack and knocked the lists right and left—"No sir, I hain't no chickens! I want a square shake and no more! Let me climb on to one by the front door and they gits it it this way—and that way—and slow—and under the chin—and on the top of the head—and in the stomach! His kicks and blows drove the official into a corner to avoid accident, and the man was promised that hereafter he should have a square show according to the latest rules of the P. R. "That's his, that is," he replied, getting ready to walk out; and now I know you'll treat me like a man and not like a dog, I'll let you see—let 'em come in front and on both sides, and all around, and if old Treeton don't flop her wings and crow then I'm a red dog under a meat wagon."

The Prince of Wales's Debts.

A London letter to the New York Tribune, of which our dispatches of Saturday afternoon gave the principal facts, states that Parliament will probably be called upon at the next session to pay the debts of the Prince of Wales, which now amount to £640,000, or nearly three and a half millions of dollars. This is about four times as much as the nation was called upon to pay in 1787, to wipe out the debts of the Prince who afterwards became George the Fourth. If the story is true, and Parliament, at its next session is asked to vote this amount, to place the future King of England square with the world, there will be decided opposition. The Radicals and advanced Liberals have of late years made every commonicaion from the Queen asking anonities for her numerous children as they came of age the text of arguments, very reasonable from a Republican point of view, denouncing the already vast sums devoted to the support of the royal family, while the lower classes of the kingdom are actually suffering from want. They will find a much more vulnerable mark, and will be much more strongly sustained by the masses of the English people, in opposing this proposition to pay more than three million dollars to liquidate the debts of a prince who has, since his majority, received $200,000 a year from the nation, beside the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall, which amount to $500,000 a year more. There is little doubt, however, that whatever the Conservative Ministry ask for the Prince of Wales will be voted by the House of Commons. The Conservative party will support the aggrandization in a body, together with a large number of the Liberals, who are personally friendly to the Prince, or who dislike to be classed with the Radicals.

The price of lumber is to be raised. The Canadian lumbermen have resolved, in convention, to accomplish this purpose by a combined effort to reduce the amount usually produced. The method is to restrict the operations of their mills to about one half the ordinary run; to make smaller cuts, and to cut less timber. Efforts will be made to induce the co-operation of the lumbering interests of the United States.

Wanted a Square Shake.

The Detroit Free Press tells how a wild looking man, with his hat in his hand and blood running down his shoulder from a lately bitten ear, called on the mayor of that city. "Is this the Mayor of this town?" he enquired. "Now fire 'em out!" The official looked and replied that it was and looking. "Yes, and it was did right in this town—eight dives here and forty rods away! Is this a one-horse town, what they jump from behind the door soil grab a man's ear, or is it a big town, where they strike from the shoulder? THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - AUG. 22, 1874.

Republican Senatorial Convention.

A Republican Senatorial Convention is called to meet at the Court House in Charlevoix on the 29th instant, at 1 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Senator from this District, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. James A. Sutton, of Antrim county. A full attendance of delegates is desired.

Antrim Co. [illegible] Committee.

Paul Vanin, Petoskey County, Mich., has been made a part of Emmet, and Grouse II Gregory, of that town, appointed deputy collector.

The Paris correspondent that to denounce President Grant for a third term would be to destroy the Union and break up the Republican party.

The Carlists were fearful in shooting a German newspaper man by the name of Smith. They ought to have known that the name of savs never dies.

The Washington papers are discussing with much earnestness the question of the next President. A correspondent of the Sunday Herald nominates General Sherman for the Democracy.

In the month of July a marked advance took place in the price of hat iron, which has since been sustained and iron manufacturers now unquestionably feel much encouraged at the situation of the trade.

Chicago is to have Miss Ida Honore owner of H. H. Honore, Esq., the million aire, will be married in October to Lieut. Fred. de Trobriand, oldest son of President U. S. Grant, in Chicago, some time in October. Thus saveth the gossiper.

The dispatches present a terrible picture of the present situation in Italy. The State is represented as hopelessly bankrupt. The people are loyal, and there are no new differences between the King and the Papal hierarchy, but bread and money are scarce and mazzini bandits and floods abound. A crisis seems imminent.

The most encouraging potato bug item we have seen for years is the report of an order just received from a chemical manufacturing firm of Indianapolis for 1, 000 pounds Paris green. It has been discovered that Paris green possess qualities which make them a good substitute for the spanish fly, and there is a prospect that, not being regarded as an unmingled pest, they may be regarded as a source of actual profit. As soon as it is ascertained by the bugs that they are good for something and are not altogether a pest to the human race, they will clear out.

Gen Marchi, Governor of the Island of Ste. Marguerite, protests his innocence of complicity in the escape of Marshal Bazaine and accuses Col. Villette, the Marshal's aide-de-camp, of having perfected the plan to secure his flight. Bright perspective now considers on suspicion of having aided Bazaine to escape. La Gazette des Tribunaux says that on the night of Bazaine's escape one soldier was asleep on guard and each time a jailer entered him in conversation and kept him in the sentry box. The jailer has been arrested.

Mr. Fortune Du B. is personally still the favorable topic of conversation, although the disgusting subject is on the wane. Monitor the Imperial Gazette is preparing his statement, and it is likely to be published any day. Tilton has employed General Butler, and will bring criminal action against Beecher. This causes a great disturbing among the Plymouth Church and woman suffragists, and if we may believe reports, will result in startling revelations. All the free-lovists are more or less implicated. It seems that Theres is nothing without Morrison. Today he is as flabby as an air-exhausted foot ball, and not half so useful. Bazaine has kicked him out of sight. Let him do the same with Morrison—but Morrison whose remarkable friendship has been like the connection of a messenger with the people whom he by service—remote and nasty. Assistant Pastor Holliday, of Plymouth Church, has in possession a record of communications two years ago, with Tilton and Morrison, in which both urged on the affair on terms that leave no any doubt whatever in the Westfield scandal about Beecher. Monitor persistently denounced the scandal as utterly baseless and as unpreserving the rare shadow of truth.

Rev. President Blanchard, of Wheaton College, is still waging a vigorous war on secret societies of every description—and their enemies and influence is as steadily increasing.

Tilton avers that God has done not belong to the priesthood or the Church. Many people, in view of the exposures that he has made of himself, will be disposed to respond amen with alacrity.

"I shall proceed to Orleans," wrote a Boston girl home on her honeymoon. But she took too much for a dutch treat, and awoke with a paroxysm pump down her throat.

It has been ascertained that the plan for Marshal Bazaine's escape from the island of Sainte Marguerite was arranged six weeks ago, and was simply the work of Madame Bazaine. The Marshal refused at first to fly but finally, owing to his failure to obtain some modification of his sentence, yielded. He rested from the island in the street yacht, Reine Hortense, belonging to an Italian company. The pursuer refused to capture a French vessel. He was accompanied in his flight by his wife and brother. His name as refugee is not known. Some persons say he is in Spain. The Journal des Debats argues that the crime of which Bazaine was convicted renders him liable to extradition and that France should demand the surrender.

The new regulations not a practice ing at Woolwich. Wrens finished the monster piece of ordnance still on powder than twice the size of the largest gun in existence, and its destructive potency in fighting range proportionate. With a projectile of 1,800 pounds, weighing 1,800 pounds and a maximum charge of 250 pounds of powder, it was proved to be seven inches, twenty inches thick, at sixty yards' range in both plates at 5,000 yards, and will punch a sixteen inch shell into a ship or fortress at a distance of 10,000 yards. The steel tubes forming the inner tube was the largest ever cast, weighing over twelve tons, while the tremendous piston, about eighteen tons, was the largest forging ever produced at the arsenal. The cost of this gun will be $42,500.

Marshal Bazaine has escaped from his place of confinement, though by what means he escape was effected or whither he has gone are not yet known. In all probability we shall soon receive news to the effect that he has turned up in England, and is in close communion with the Bonapartists there. Bazaine was confined on the island of St. Marguerite, off the coast of France, and could not by any possibility have effected his own escape. Some friendly hands must have extended aid to him, and as Bazaine was faithful to the Napoleonic dynasty while it lasted, the general opinion will be that some of the numerous supporters of the Divine Imperial were instrumental in releasing him from his place of imprisonment.

Escape of Marshal Bazaine From His Island Prison.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—There is great excitement in this city in consequence of the intelligence that Marshal Bazaine has escaped from the Island of Saint Marguerite some time during Sunday night. The details of the manner in which he succeeded in getting away are unknown, except that he used a rope ladder and got on board a vessel bound for Italy. The night was dark and stormy. The journals declare that the government will act promptly in punishing all who connived at his flight.

INTERESTING DETAILS OF THE ESCAPE OF MARSHAL BAZAINE.

LONDON, Aug 21.—The following interesting particulars of the escape of Marshal Bazaine from his prison on the Isle of St. Marguerite, have been received: The imprisonment occupied by the Marshal opened upon a terrace which was built upon a lofty and precipitous cliff overhanging the sea. A sentry was posted on the terrace with orders to watch the prisoner every moment. During the day, escorted by the Marshal walked upon the terrace with Col. Villette, his aid-de-camp. At 5 p. m. each day rational exercise, apparently to obey, but before day break he had effected his escape. During the night he crossed the terrace in the dead of night, and reaching the seaboard, passed the edge of the precipice. There by means of a lariat rope he descended to the sea. He evidently stopped during the descent and tore his hands, as the rope was found stained very blood in several places. Under the cliff in a hired boat were Bazaine's wife and cousin. They received him as he reached the water and Madame Bazaine, taking the oars herself, rowed directly to a strange steamer which had been lying off for his arrival for two evenings. They reached the vessel in safety, were taken on board and the steamer then put to sea. It is thought that they have landed at Genoa, as the steamer proceeded in that direction. The first news of the affair came to Civaux the nearest place on the coast, and the magistrate of the town immediately sent off men in every direction to search for the fugitive. There was a great commotion in Marseilles when the facts became known. An investigation was opened. Col. Villette who was working with the Marshal on the last evening of his escape, was discovered there and imprisoned. The commander at Fort Sturmegant was placed under arrest and soon. Lariat has gone to the sea to investigate the affair.

Paris Aug. 21.—It is reported that Marshal Bazaine himself at sea lands and travelled via Turin to Rome. At the latter place he took a train to Brussels, where he arrived at noon [illegible]. Tuesday morning. It is believed that the rope found on the cliff at the side of Ste. Marguerite was a purposeful ruse to mislead the authorities as to the manner of the Marshal's escape, which was effected in some other way, though the circumstances of the flight language in explaining of remarkable examples of the inner feelings of one of the most gifted of men—Detroit Tribune.

GOOD.—The new postoffice recently established in Minnesota Co.

The population of Missaukee county, according to the late census returns, is 606.

The body of Capt. James Mees has not yet been found, and but little hope is entertained of its recovery.

JEWELER.—As will be seen by the new advertisement elsewhere, a jeweler has again located among us. We wish him success.

THE SENTINEL has been designated as the paper in which to publish the tax sales of the counties of Charlevoix, Emmet and Manitou.

CASE MEETING.—The District camp meeting broke up on Monday. The meeting throughout was an interesting one, and was well attended

DOCK.—W. C. Newman is completing his dock on Round Lake, which will make it one of the most convenient landing places in the harbor.

THE County Clerk informs us that the number of marriages solemnized in this county during the year, is 18; the number of births, 62; deaths, 19.

HAY.—The hearts of our farmers have been made glad during the week by copious rain-showers. Nothing now stands in the way of abundant crops.

PERSONAL.—Byron W. Miller, son of B. Miller, Esq of this village, and an old-time employe of the SENTINEL office, has entered the employ of Fox, Rose and Buttars, as salesman.

BEHIND.—There is to be a musical entertainment at Norwood on Thursday evening next, for the benefit of Rev. J. J. McAllister. Admission, 40 cents; children, half price.

THE Clam Lake News is edited by our quondam pedagogue, Prof. C. Dexter Page, and he is a success in that capacity, as he was in school-teaching. The News is one of our best exchanges.

THE popular firm of Fox, Rose and Buttars continue to attract people to their store, by their low prices, affable manners, and the unsurpassed quality of their goods. Read their new advertisement.

Miss Lucie Cooper, daughter of Hon. Richard Cooper, of this place, left last evening for Whitewater, Wis., where she is to take a year's course of study, at the Teacher's Institute, located at that place.

It is stated the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad Company will put two more villages on the line of its road the coming fall, one at South Boardman, in Kalkaska county, one the other at Mancelona, in Antrim Co.

DIED.—Orin Campbell, a resident of the Township of Evelene, in this County, died on Saturday last, of Typhoid Fever, and the funeral services were held in this village on Sunday. Mr. Campbell leaves a wife and six children.

MARINE.—The schooner Raleigh took out a cargo of lumber for Beatty & Co. on Tuesday. The schooner Mayflower, and Scow Forest, Agnes, and Supply took out cargoes of wood and bark during this week, and the schooner Greeley is now loading with wood in Pine Lake.

The schooner Two Brothers took a cargo of Crosier's brick to Petoskey Thursday.

SQUARE TIMBER.—We learn from a reliable source that parties are now taking a survey of our advantages, who contemplate getting out square timber on Pine Lake the coming winter. There is an excellent opportunity here for this branch of business, and we hope to see it entered into largely.

THE officers of Grand Traverse College are fitting up commodious rooms in the large three story building near the grounds occupied by the former college building, which will be used for a chapel until the contemplated brick building is finished. The fall term of the school will commence on Tuesday, Sept 1st, with a corps of competent teachers.

We are grateful to the Progress man for his bit of information in regard to the time made by Goldsmith's Maid recently. Our knowledge of turf matters is limited to such an extent that we should have considered 6:16 as a most astonishing short space of time for a boss to even run a mile; 5:16 we considered marvelous rapidity; but 2:16—blame!

A large number of distinguished guests have been registered at the Fountain City House during the week, and the steamer Amelie has been daily crowded with passengers for the trout streams. Charlevoix is second to no place in the Northwest as a fashionable resort, and fashionable people are fast finding it out.

THE interests of this District have been faithfully represented during the past two years by Hon. E. H. Green, and as the time approaches for another election we can do no less than to advocate his return, which as a matter of course is his due. We apprehend there will be little opposition to him, and predict that the Legislative honors will again be placed upon his shoulders.

THE PROGRESS.—Homer says that several Milwaukee and Kenosha vesselowners contemplate laying up their vessels in our harbor the coming winter, and entering into the business of getting out wood, posts, ties, etc. We understand that several farmers in the vicinity of the head of Pine Lake have formed a club, with a Milwaukee vessel owner as one of their number, for the purpose of getting out and shipping wood. This is very significant, and evidently means business.

TO ACTION.—Let us not lag in the matter of renewing our exertions the coming fall and winter to secure an appropriation for Charlevoix harbor. We hope to see the name of every citizen of Charlevoix county—and all others interested—go before Congress, asking for the assistance to which we are so justly entitled. And let those of our citizens whose names are influential use their personal influence in the matter. If Congress is consistent, and we do our duty, we know of no reason why we should not succeed

It is provided in the Homestead Act that in order to complete title to claims under it the claimant must, at the end of five years from the date of his entry, or within two years thereafter, make proofs of settlement and cultivation, and unless he does this his entry is subject to be cancelled. This provision, through ignorance or forgetfulness, is quite apt, in some cases, to be overlooked by the settler, and when this happens, the neglect will certainly lead to embarrassments and perhaps to hardships.

BRIEFLY.—There is to be a musical entertainment at Norwood on Thursday evening next, for the benefit of Rev. J. J. McAllister. Admission, 40 cents; children, half price.

The following is the first paragraph of an article in last week's Traverse Bay Eagle:

"The Grand Traverse Herald is about the only paper in Michigan of any especial note that has taken ground against Woman Suffrage."

We poignantly feel (!) this thrust at our little editorial self; and who could fail to recognize the lofty and stable source from whence it comes? To state that the declaration is so far from the truth as to render it silly is not to impart any information to our intelligent readers, but to throw it back into the teeth of the editor who thus insults the large number of Michigan papers which have taken negative grounds in the issue. It is either ignorance or arrogance—and we believe both. The Eagle, which is famous for leaps in the dark, after some imaginary prize, will fall in this, as it has in past departures, to bring home aught but a bellyfull of thistles.

Our Petoskey Letter.

PETOSKEY, Mich., Aug. 22, 1874.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

Since my last letter nothing of great importance has transpired. The matter of depot grounds was foremost and has all summer attracted considerable attention, but this is now satisfactorily arranged, and the outlook is now good for the Company's carrying out their part of the contract, viz: the building of depot and side track within sixty days.

The Mackinac excursion travel still continues, and large parties are passing thro' here on their way home. Everybody is pleased with this new route, and a decided preference is given it over other routes.

We expect, to day or to-morrow, Gov. Bagley and State officials, numbering about seventy five in all.

Mr. M. J. Cushman has sis hotel building moved back to place.

H. O. Rose is having his store turned around to front on Mitchell street, and will then finish it up.

Mr. Rose's lime kilns are completed and he expects to be able to furnish lime by next week.

Mr. Dickerson has opened a drug store, and it will not be long before our community can be dragged with any kind of patent medicine.

McMillan's restaurant and eating-house is open to the public, and he feeds the hungry with viands choice and tempting.

Much comment is heard regarding the liquor business, and especially about the selling of liquor to the Indians. These Indians, who drunk, are serious disturbers of the peace, making night hideous with their cries, yells and hooting. Some have spoken in favor of a block-tavern in which to confine these pests when they become troublesome. We hope something will be done about it. The only difficulty is in getting some one to make a move in the matter; and for our part, we would like to know who is responsible for the enforcement of order and quiet. If there is any person delegated with the requisite authority, why is it not made use of? If there is no one, (and at present it looks so) why, we will keep quiet and await the dawn of the great millenium, when one man will not pour out and give to his fellowmen the villainous poison.

Yours, etc.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas, default hath been made in the conditions of a certain Mortgage made and executed on the thirteenth day of January, A. D. 1874, by Peter Kamin, Charles Kilpatrick, Frank Wasson, James Wasson, Daniel Nemawahsit, Simon Kilpatrick, Susan Kilpatrick, and Tamah Nashbin, of Little Traverse, Michigan, to Walter Clifford, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the County of Emmet, in the State of Michigan, on the nineteenth day of January, A. D. 1874, at two o'clock p. m., in Liber one (1) of mortgages, on pages 260, 261, 262 and 263; on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of three hundred and ten dollars ($310) principal and interest, for the recovery of which no suit or proceeding at law or equity has been taken or instituted. Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the lands and hereinafter described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the costs and expenses allowed by law, and an Attorney fee of Fifty Dollars agreed to in said mortgage to be paid, will be sold at public auction or sendue to the highest bidder, at the main door of the School House in the Village of Little Traverse, in said county of Emmet, (that being the building where the Circuit Court for the County of Emmet is held) on saturday, the 22d day of August, A. D. 1874, at one o'clock in the afternoon. Said mortgage premises are situated in said county of Emmet, and State of Michigan, and are known and described as follows, to-wit: The North half of the southwest quarter (½) of Block thirteen (13), and the south half of lot number eight (8) of Block number fifty (50), in the village of Little Traverse, Michigan, according to the recorded plat of said village as surveyed by Isaac Atwater. Also the north half of the north west quarter (½) of section thirteen (13), in Township thirty-five (35) North, of Range four (4) West, containing seventy-nine and forty one-hundredths acres of land.

Dated, Aug. 8th, A. D. 1874.

$5 TO $20 PER DAY easily made by any one who will engage in the most popular Drawing Illustrations, Photographs, etc. We now publish more first-class Chromos than all other engravers in the country combined. No one subscribes for a premium paper in order to get a picture after subscribing—pictures and learning our prices. We have many old agents at work for us who have made over one hundred dollars per month their business for years, and they all say that they can earn more money in our employment at anything else they ever tried. Some that all can attend to part time. Others prefer to give their entire time, and make large profits. New beginners do as well as agents of large experience, for our beautiful subjects and low prices are appreciated by all. To make large sales everywhere all agent has to do is to show the pictures from house to house, then look for employment elsewhere and so have more than ever before. Canvassers are wanted in every town where we have not space to explain all here, but send your address and we will send full particulars free, by mail. Don't delay if you want profitable employment for your leisure hours, or for your whole time. Now is the favorable time to engage in this business. Our pictures are the finest and most pleasing in this country, and are endorsed by all the leading papers, including the New York Herald. Those who cannot give the business their entire attention can work up their own localities and earn a handsome sum without ever being away from home over night. Let all who want pleasant, profitable employment, without risking capital, send at once for address of one and learn all about the business. A postponement of the Fifth Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky has been so generally urged, and is so manifestly for the interest of all concerned, that it was deemed advisable to fix the day in January, as was at first announced, and to so variously from the appearance now manifested. A sufficient number of tickets had been sold to warrant the belief that a large drawing can still be had at any time, and a postponement was decided upon, in order to permit drawing when the sale of tickets should warrant it.

The Fifth Gift Concert

Is the last which will ever be given under the Charter and by the present management.

That it will positively and unequivocally take place on the 30th day of November, 1874, is guaranteed by the fact that the Legislature has extended the charter of the Institution to January 1, 1875, and by the further fact that the Managers have given bonds in the sum of $100,000 for the faithful performance of their contract.

SELECTED.

Profane Swearing.

We find in the New York Observer the following incident:

"Coming down the Hudson River the other day, I sat at dinner in the seat next to the head of the table; the man—observe I do not say the gentleman—who had the head was a well-dressed, rather pompous-looking personage, who agreed himself widely, as if he were master of the feast. The waiters did not appear to be impressed with a sense of his greatness, and were in no special haste to do his bidding. At length he broke out upon one of them with some violence, and ordered what he wanted, with several horrid oaths, which disgusted every one but himself; for he turned to me, a total stranger, and said: 'That's the way to speak to them, if you want anything done, and that.'

"I replied with some degree of gentleness: 'It may be your way, but it is very disagreeable to the rest of the company.'

"'Oh, you're one of the sanctimonious sort, are you,' he cried out, 'who don't swear at all, I suppose?'

"'Not sanctimonious,' I answered, 'but the least bit of it upon the reverse; but I have been over the world a good deal, and was never put in a civilized country where it was considered proper to swear at a public table.'

"I kept up my eye steadily on his while saying these words, and was somewhat apprehensive of an explosion; if I looked down, he might have struck me, for he was very mad; and after blurting out his right to say what he pleased, where he pleased, and swinging a show of cursing a little to left the table before the rest of the company were half done their dinner. He stood a minute or two behind my chair, as if uncertain as to what he had better do about it, but concluded to drop the subject and retire. I did not see him again.

"When he had left the cabin, the gentlemen near me expressed their gratification at the manner in which the fellow had been reproved, and congratulated themselves on his speedy retreat from the field."

The man who swears profanely is usually a coward at heart. His oaths are his blustering pretense of being a kind of fire-eater, of whom all should stand in fear. All decent men hold him in contempt; and, if he were oftener rebuked, as in the case just given, the public would be freer from its annoyance than at present.

Skinned Alive—Horrible Cruelty of the Pawnees.

From the Fremont (Neb.) Herald.

Four Holenteau entered West Point on Monday morning in great haste, they being unable to speak English they found an interpreter to whom they told the following story. A party of Indians and squaws camped near a homesteader's home near Cuffax County, and sent three squaws to the house to procure some food. The squaws entered the house and ransacked it for all they could get. The wife of the homesteader being home, of course objected to having all their food taken away, whereupon the squaw turned upon the woman and beat her over the head. Her cries were heard by her husband, who hastened to his house, and on seeing his wife and hearing her cries from suffering, he took his shotgun and shot one of the squaws. The other squaws reported this to the Indians, They returned to the Holeman's house (twelve in number), which they entered, and put the man through a terrible torture. They skinned him and then cut his hands off, and cut his heart out. All this is supposed to have been done in the presence of his wife, who was bound from the injuries she also devils had inflicted her with. The scene of this terrible murder was about sixteen miles from West Point, in the corner of Cuffax County, and only five miles from the spot where a farmer was killed by the Winnebagoes while ploughing a few years ago. The tragedy took place on last Sunday. A party left West Point for the scene of the horror. The Indians no doubt have disappeared, and it will be hard to find them.

The Requisites for a Gentleman.

A writer on "A Gentleman," in Tinsley's Magazine, says: "Gentleness is not inconsistent with the character, and we are surprised that so rare a quality is not more highly appreciated. The thoughts and feelings of the retiring disposition are not less refined, although they may not be expressed with the greatness of the ready speaker, or the impetuosity of the rattle-pate. This disposition frequently arises from the mind running in channels other than the common-places of ordinary conversation, and a consequent consciousness of inferiority in the art of pleasing. The assumption of the character is often but a simulation of the more agreeable habits of society, and only the veneer which hides depraved tastes and vicious propensities. Nothing more displays a frivolous, polish, and vulgar mind than inattention to the simple courtesies of life, and without this even profound learning is no more than tiresome pedantry. A person of this description says he can be a gentleman when he pleases. A true gentleman never pleases to do anything else, and never, by any accident, derogates from this standard. He can not stoop to a mean thing. He never struts in borrowed plumage. He never stabs in the dark. He is not one thing to a man's face and another behind his back. Papers not meant for his eyes are sacred. Bolts and bars, locks and keys, bonds and securities, and notices to trespassers are out for him. He is a consistent observer of the second great commandment—whatever he judges to be honorable in practice toward all.

How King Theodorus of Abyssinia Died.

A few unarmed Abyssinians, attracted by the clamor of music and shouting, mustered courage enough to approach the standard which waved so gaily in the mountain pass; and on beholding one of their countrymen on the ground, they bent over the body, but quickly recoiled with fearful dismay on their faces, exclaiming, "Todros!" "Todros!"

The words attracted the attention of every one, and together they strode toward the body, jostling each other in the endeavor to obtain a glimpse of him the universal styled "Todros, Negus Negoshi of Ilopia."

And what did they see? The body of a native seemingly half famished, clad in coarse upper garments, dingy with wear and ragged with tear, covering undergarments of clean linen!

The face of deep brown was the most remarkable one in Abyssinia, it bore the appearance of one who had passed through many anxious hours. His eyes, now overspread with a deathly film, gave evidence yet of the piercing power for which they were celebrated. The mouth was well defined and thin-lipped. The lower lip was well adapted to caress scorn, and a trace of it was still visible. As he gasped his last, two rows of ebbish teeth were disclosed. Over his mouth two strong chins arched to a high aquiline nose. The nostrils expanded widely as he struggled to retain the breath which was rapidly leaving him. The face was broad, high cheek-boned, with a high prominent forehead and overhanging eyebrows. The hair was divided into three large plaits extending from the forehead to the back of the neck, which last appeared to be a very tower of strength. The body measured five feet eight inches, and was very muscular and broad-shouldered. There was a character about the features denoting great firmness or obstinacy mingled with tenacity. Indeed, the latter idea was suggested upon remembering the many cruelties ascribed to him. And thus was it that we saw the remains of him whom men called Theodorus, Emperor of Abyssinia, the Descendant of Menilek, Son of Solomon, King of Kings, Lord of Earth, Conqueror of Ethiopia, Regenerator of Africa, and Savior of Jerusalem, now dying—dead by his own hand!

The Irish soldiers took hold of his leg and roughly dragged him to a sandbank where, after two or three pauses, he breathed his last.—Stanleys Commentic at Magdala.

Practical Teaching.

Children at an early age should begin to learn the use of money, and this they can only do by having money to use. Let a small sum be given at stated intervals, and the child made to feel that it is his to keep to spend, or to give away; that to the extent of his allowance he is a capitalist, and as much at liberty to choose his investments as any grown man. The traffic in marbles and other small articles of personal property shows that the spirit of trade is no less active in the boy than in the man, and the little girl's desire to select the objects of her charity, and to provide for her dolls, indicates the capacity for a practical education that ought not to be neglected. This independence does not preclude counsel, which the child will be quite as ready to ask as the parents to give, but that the money and its use may be a means of education, in every real that the final decision is his. At a ranch or-west for produce of various kinds. Another fact is encouraging to manufacturers generally and of course promising to labor. It is the increased and rapidly increasing demand for corn, as shown by the increase within a few days of nearly six dollars a ton made by the Pennsylvania manufacturers. This will have the effect to make goods in a measure cheaper, to orderly classes and to steadily arranged bureau drawers, to have a place for everything and everything in its place; to know what garments will be needed for the coming season, and to ask father or mother to go with him to select them, instead of having everything provided without thought or care on his part. I have even a secret conviction that the mastery of his own buttons ought to be acquired by a boy of average intelligence, and that to take the entire care of the room would not necessarily lessen his chances of a noble and self-respecting manhood.—Odia Burleigh.

A Wonderful Improvement.

What important arrangement has just been perfected by Gen. Myer, by which the signal service optics will be extended over the world. Since the first of January observations have been taken at the signal stations of the principal European countries, at the same hour at which they are taken here and forwarded to Washington for collation and discussion. By the arrangements now made these reports, combined with those of our own signal office, will be printed and forwarded daily to the meteorologists of the country. The great value of such a step and the vast influence which it will have upon the science of meteorology can hardly be over estimated.

The Supreme Court of Illinois has just sustained a verdict of $2,000 in favor of a widow and against a liquor seller who had sold her husband drink, which produced intoxication, and resulted in his being cut to pieces on a railroad track. The opinion of the court has the following doctrine: "He who deliberately sells that which he knows will inflame the passions, deprive the party of the control of his judgement and render him for the time incapable of exercising proper care for his personal safety, or that of his property, must be prepared for the consequences that may follow."

A Pen Portrait.

He dresses in black. His clothes are well made and fit him perfectly. His only jewelry consists of a plain gold watch, worth about $500, which he seldom displays. His linen is immaculate. He is tall with gray than his hair, is short, and trimmed regularly so as to be kept at the same length all the year round. Where a cumbersome mustache ought to be a hair is never permitted to attain more than a day's growth. He is of a slender, though compact, physique. His complexion is ruddy and bespeaks the best of health. He always looks as if he had just left the toilet table.

The man is 74 years of age. In conversation his keen blue eyes are never for an instant taken off yours. He has learn the impress of prudence, discretion, self-confidence, a calmness impossible to ruffle, and, above all, of honesty and truthfulness. He never speaks up loud enough to be heard on the stage from which he stands. Fashionmongers control each even the sound of his voice. He shakes hands with you cordially, our even warmly. He is exciting any politeness half. His conversation is always content in the refined language of the educated gentleman. He uses no slang. He is witty and at times vivacious. He is no lecturer; he drinks only at meals; he is a Christian whom we Johannesburg, from Prince Metternich's private vineyard, the like of which is very rarely found in this country, he is fond of sherry and Madeira; his wine cellar contains probably the choicest selection of wines in America. The trade wealth is estimated at one hundred millions, made by him since 1854 in New York city. He has no children; he has not a single known relative on the face of the earth. He is the last of his race. H. B. A. T. Stewart.—Cor. N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

BUSINESS REVIVAL.

It is not probable that the stimulating effects of increased business activity will be very strongly felt till toward another spring, but there are now very encouraging indications that the turning point of depression is passed, and of a business revival. The New York papers have changed tone greatly within a few days and speak cheerfully of a revival in trade and the prospect of a speedy full and winter business. From all parts of the country merchants are there, purchasing fall stocks, buying more largely than before for a year, and a very large proportion of them paying cash. During the year, settling old scores has absorbed their energies and the means of the country to a great extent, and paying debts has been the rule, till the debtor classes are now more hopeful and breathe more freely. The banks in all the business marts are well supplied with money and are carrying larger surpluses than ever. The demand for money for new enterprises has been almost nothing since the panic, and money capitalists have been looking more to those needing it to bridge over debt extensions than for active business projects. And a large amount of currency probably larger than in any former season, is passing into the west and northwest for product of various kinds. Another fact is encouraging to manufacturers generally and of course promising to labor. It is the increased and rapidly increasing demand for corn, as shown by the increase within a few days of nearly six dollars a ton made by the Pennsylvania manufacturers. This will have the effect to make goods in a measure cheaper, to orderly classes and to steadily arranged bureau drawers, to have a place for everything and everything in its place; to know what garments will be needed for the coming season, and to ask father or mother to go with him to select them, instead of having everything provided without thought or care on his part. I have even a secret conviction that the mastery of his own buttons ought to be acquired by a boy of average intelligence, and that to take the entire care of the room would not necessarily lessen his chances of a noble and self-respecting manhood.—Odia Burleigh.

A Kentucky Marvel.

This is the story a letter from Jamestown, Russell county, Ky., tells. "A few days ago two Kentucky farmers, who live in Long Bottom, discovered something in the cloudless sky, just under the sun, that very much resembled a man. They immediately went to their own or a neighbor's house and told what they had seen. Pretty soon others went forth to make observations, but instead of seeing the man that had been recognized by the others, they plainly discovered two women emerging from the sky, one from the left and the other from the right of the sun. They gradually came together just under the center of the sun until they were in the embrace of each other, at which moment a large eagle came forth and sailed around the women for fifteen minutes, and at length rested on their heads and remained there for some time.—The same evening a Mr. Davis, who lives two miles from the Pierces, saw the same sights at the same time of day. Mr. Davis and the Pierces are reliable gentlemen, however strange their discovery may appear.

A curious slaughter has occurred on the borders of Louisiana that is a disgrace not only to the perpetrators but to the community where such things are tolerated. It appears taken by the citizens of Cowhatta, proceeding to leave the state, were conducted to The Texas border. Here they were met by a party of Texans who, stating that they did not want such rascals in Texas, shot them down.

France, says a writer to the Vienna Freie Presse, complains that Germany is trying hard to pick a quarrel with her.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - SEPT. 12, 1874.

☞ Isaac Arnold has sued the Chicago Times for $100,000 for libel.

☞ Alexander H. Stephens has been renominated for Congress by the Democrats of the Sixth district. The nomination is announced to no election, so we shall see the extent of the Southern Confederacy again a leading member of the forty-fourth Congress.

☞ As an example of the depression of the business interests of the country was afforded in Chicago the other day in the offer of the owners of three vessels to give the use of any one of them for a trip from Chicago to Buffalo to any person who would agree to merely pay the running expenses of the vessel. The reason for this offer was merely the fact that the vessel would take less injury at motion than lying unloaded at the dock.

☞ Steam and steam power is to give way in the future—but which part of the future we don't know—to gigantic watch springs in the propelling of street cars. This new motive power is an arrangement of powerful springs, encased in cylinders like watch springs, and the application of which to the cars now employed is said to be simple and easy. These springs are wound up by small stationary steam engines at each terminus of the line, and when so wound up will propel the cars, even with stoppages, for a longer distance than any existing line of this kind extends. The action is reversible, the application of the force direct in every respect and in fact very, and the working of the whole thing is pronounced a success.

☞ The Chicago Inter Ocean takes this view of the political situation: "Attempts to organize a new political party never succeeds unless aided more in the light of recent events. The Democratic party is stronger in its line to-day than since the election of James Buchanan to the Presidency. Its principles, as declared now, are substantially the same as they were then. The White Leaguers and the Conservatives of the Southern States are merely local designations of wings of the National Democratic party. In any emergency, such for instance as a Presidential election, the Leagues of Louisiana and the Conservatives of North Carolina become part and parcel of the Democracy. The people are no more ready to forget now than they were in 1872.

☞ General Butler, it seems, is not to gain even a re-election to Congress without opposition. General Coggswell, of Salem, has appeared in the field against him and is likely to make a good run in the convention. A large majority of the "Know statesmen's" more respectable constituents have already felt a decided disgust at being represented by such a reckless character, and his recent advocacy of inflation has increased that disgust. Butler, however, is to complete a master of the art of pioneer meetings and manipulating conventions that he will probably secure the "regular" nomination. Whether that is instrumental to a re-election are, however, in this year of independent voting, to considered doubtful. Congress would not be nearly so lively without Mr. Butler, but it would do better and honester work if freed from his Mephistophelian influence.—Detroit Tribune.

☞ Gen. Sheridan's orders warning off all explorers after the reported gold of the Black Hills, are not meeting with much favor. Until we train is to be rigidly enforced. The whole region recently traversed by Gen. Custer's expedition is embraced in the reservation to the Sioux Indians, and is especially guaranteed from all violation by white men by treaty stipulation with that powerful tribe. It is not easy to see by what right the General allowed even the Custer expedition to invade lands to be forcibly established within which the red men should have undisturbed possession, but to allow any further operations what ever of this sort is to act with a perfidy that cannot be justified. The history of our Indian treaties shows better faith kept on the part of the savages than on our own.

☞ Last Wednesday John F. Lacey of Bridgeport, Ct., unusually excavated a boat grave, long enough to contain a man of his size. The boat was a dug-out, one hole and the head of which is now gone, and had not been built by rules for work. At the stern of the boat was made

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable locations of Indian settlement lands. Existing Lands which we offer at very low figures:

No. 1. 80 acres. First rate farming land. Situated 24 miles from little Traverse bay; well timbered—beech and maple; soil—rich sandy loam; will be sold very cheap. S½ of ne¼ of section 30, Town 40 North, of Range 6 west.

No. 2. 40 acres. Se¼ of sw¼ section 30, Town 34 North, of Range 5 west, 24 miles from Petoskey City, with 10 acres cleared; small log house; will be sold at a bargain.

No. 3. 156 acres. N½ of ne¼ and ne¼ of nw¼, and fractional one-half of section 22. Will be sold in separate descriptions or in a body. Has a large creek running the whole length, with good water powers. Well; cleared, and will be sold cheap for cash. This is one of the best chances in the country for a person wishing to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many descriptions of Farming lands near Petoskey City, which we will sell at reasonable prices. Some of these Lands have old Indian improvements, and can easily be made into farms.

The whooping cough is raging in this village.

MEAT.—McLeod now keeps fresh beef on hand constantly.

New Goods just received at Carpenter & Bartholomew's

CART WAY talks of building a vessel here the coming winter.

The steamer Van Raalte released a schooner that was ashore on Graham Shoals, on Friday.

TEAMS are due Asher B. King, of Ellsworth, and Andrew Nowland, of Marion, for choice samples of garden products

MAIL SERVICE.—The Postoffice Department has ordered a tri-weekly mail between Petoskey and Charlevoix.

NOTICE.—Carpenter & Bartholomew request all those having a book account with them to call and settle up.

PERSONAL.—Jim. Cable, of Mackinac, and S. C. Rose, of Coldwater, were in town on Thursday, and went up Pine Lake on a pleasure excursion.

APPLES, sweet and sour, at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

NEW STOCK.—M. J. Stockman returned from Detroit on Friday with a large stock of stoves and hardware of the latest styles, and of best material. He announces that he will sell goods much cheaper than heretofore.

A basket of Siberian crabs and Fall apples were left on our table to-day by our friend Hugh Miller, of this Township. Mr. Miller has a chronic disposition to remember the printer.

HEADQUARTERS.—Robert Holbon has opened a restaurant at the Chamberlin building This will afford the country people an opportunity to obtain a substantial dinner for a small sum of money.

REAL ESTATE.—We stated some time ago that J. M. Whitney had sold his village property here to Mr. Griffin—a bargain which we believe, was not concluded. Mr. Whitney has lately sold the property to Mr. A. R. Upright who has taken possession. He will become a permanent resident of this village.

LARGE GROWTH.—A. J. Giddings of Evangeline, brought to our office on Wednesday, samples of corn on the stalk, of the varities of Early Rose, Golden Yellow, and Tindall, which we have never seen surpassed in this or any other region. The stalks measured twelve feet in length, and the ears of corn were large, fully developed, and well-filled. Mr. Giddings informs us that this is a fair sample of the entire field.

CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.—Mr. Butters returned from Escanaba on Saturday. He brings the welcome news that Mr. Hubbell was re-nominated by acclamation, who was present and made a brilliant speech. The new Congressional Committee was appointed, which consists of the following gentlemen: Perry Hannah of Traverse City, E. O. Ross, of Big Rapids; H. H. Stafford, of Marquette; J. H. Chandler, of Houghton; E. S. Ingalls, of Menominee; and A. Buttars, of Charlevoix.

POTATOES wanted on subscription for the SENTINEL.

HON. W. H. C. Mitchell was renominated for State Senator at the Senatorial Convention held at Traverse City on Wednesday.

THE Convention to nominate candidate for Representative to the State Legislature from this District will be held at Fox & Rose's Hall, in this village, on Wednesday, the 30th of September. The official call will appear next week.

POTATOES taken in exchange for goods at Carpenter & Bartholomew's

SCHOOL MASTERS.—The Annual School Meeting on Monday evening was the scene of quite a mighty discussion on the question of excluding miscellaneous and religious meetings from the school building. The decision arrived at, we judge to was that all should be excluded but the Church Societies, and that they furnish their own fuel. It was decided to hold five months of school to commence on the first Monday in October, and the Board were instructed to secure the services of A. R. Upright, as teacher.

GRANGE AT NORWOOD.—Our correspondent at Norwood writes us that there was a Grange organized at that place on the 7th, and embraces citizens of both that town and Banks. The organization starts off with 30 members, and is the first of its kind in the county. The following are officers chosen:—Master, Geo. Stubin; Overseer, E. A. Spaulding; Lecturer, H. W. Hoch; Steward, R. Knight; Ass't Steward, H. H. Vanorman; Chaplain, James Orr; Treasurer, Mrs L. H. Post; Sec., Wm. Harris; Gate Keeper, Fred Johnson; Ceres, Mrs. H. W. Hoch; Pomona, Mrs Wm. Harris; Flora, Mrs. D. M. McIntyre; Lady Assistant Steward, Mrs. A. Richardson.

THE TIMBER RAFT.—The Grand Traverse Herald says: A number of inquiries have been made of us in regard to the fate of the raft of square timber which left here for Quebec last spring. Dr. Grant writes to J. T. Beadle that the raft was partially wrecked at Muskegon. This caused a detention of two or three days. Afterward the timber was strewed on the shore of Lake Huron from Port Huron to White Rock, a distance of 20 or 25 miles. This caused a detention of two or three weeks and heavy expense. The timber was finally gathered, put on it towed as a boom to Port Huron for re-sawing, and the balance placed in a boom at Sand Beach to be loaded on a vessel. Severe weather was encountered on Lake Erie but only a few sticks of timber were lost. Considerable delay occured in the canal but Quebec was finally reached in safety.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.—The convention for the nomination of County officers, and the appointment of delegates to the Senatorial and Representative Conventions came off on Saturday last in this village. The following officers were nominated: Sheriff, A. G. Aldrich; Clerk, H. L. Miller. Treasurer, Byron See. Register of Deeds, E. H. Green; Prosecuting Attorney, and Circuit Court Commissioner, E. H. Green; Surveyor, Wm. Miller; Coroners, Robert Miller and F. J. Meech. The nomination of Hon. E. H. Green, to the offices aforenamed was the blind effort of an aspiring Legislative candidate to lay that gentleman on the shelf, and will of course amount to a nullity. A word to the wise is sufficient. A. Buttars and H. L. Miller were chosen as delegates to the Senatorial Convention, and Joseph Clark, F. J. Meech, and James A. Keat were appointed delegates to the Representative Convention.

A New Hampshire Funeral.

Rather amusing funerals they sometime have in New Hampshire. A clergyman in one of the cities, who had to pay the last honors to a man of doubtful character, recently, began his remarks by saying, "I was not acquainted with the deceased, and therefore hardly know what to say on this occasion." He paused, when presently one of the mourners, who had evidently been drowning his sorrow in the flowing bowl, approached him and placing his hand familiarly on his shoulder said: "What old fellar? (hic) don't you know Willis? He's (hic) one of the fellers (hic), he was. Tow me to letter (hic) shee yu." Willis, said the drunken man, addressing the corpse, "this is Mr. Brown; Mr. Brown (hic), this is Willis. Willis, my boy, Mr. Brown's (hic) come to preach yer funeral (hic) sermon." The drunken man was hauled out and the funeral proceeded.

A Lesson in Adjective

"Well, my son, you have got into grammar, have you?" said a proud sire to his thickest chip the other night. "Let me hear you compare some adjectives."

Chip—"All right, dad. Little, less, least; big, mow, more, most—"

Proud Sire—"Hold on sir; that's not right you—"

C.—"Toe, tore, toast; snow, snore, snout; go, goe, gout; row, roar, root."

P.S.—"Stop, I say; those sol—"

C.—Drink, Drank, Drenk; clink, clank, clunk—"

P.S.—"You infernal little fool! What in thunder—"

C.—"Good, better, best; west, wetter, west; bad, mean, worst; bile, biler, biliest; sew, sewer, sup; new door pumpkin—O! genius! go-O WE!"

The outraged parent and broke into the recitation with a bootjack.

SATURDAY, - - SEPT. 19, 1874

Republican Representative Convention for Charlevoix District.

A Republican Convention to nominate a candidate for Representative in the Legislature from the Charlevoix District, is hereby called to meet at Fox & Rose's Hall, in Charlevoix, on Wednesday, the 30th day of September, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The several Counties in the District will be entitled to delegates as follows, viz: Antrim 3; Charlevoix, 4; Emmett, 3; Mackinac, 4.

By Order of the Committee.
FRED B. WILLIAMS.

Representative Convention.

At the head of this column will be found the official call for a Convention to nominate a candidate for Representative in the State Legislature, for the coming two years, from the District composed of the counties of Mackinac, Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim and Otsego.

The question now arises, who shall be nominated? In our humble opinion, this is a matter of vital importance to the whole District. Especially so, should the proposed Amendments to the State Constitution be adopted; and we hope they will be, for in that event many new acts in the shape of general laws will have to be passed, in order to comply with the amended Instrument.

It is evident to every thinking mind that those who have had previous experience in legislating will have far more influence in shaping the laws in behalf of our own interests than those who have not had that experience.

Another important consideration is the fact that the next Legislature shall re-arrange the Senate Districts, and apportion anew the Representatives among the Counties and Districts. And right here, we claim, is where the people of this Northern portion of the State need a Member of the Legislature who knows something of the art of legislation; and unless we have a man who knows how, and can, and will work, this rapidly growing portion of the State will ever have its just proportion of members in the House. For it has been shown in past legislation that it is almost impossible to get the Members of Southern counties of the State to give up their representation—it being difficult for many of them to conceive the rapidity with which our portion of the State is increasing in wealth and population.

As an example: Previous to the last apportionment, in 1871, Mr. Mitchell, who was then our Member, represented a population of 31,400, and when the same District had been organized it was on a ratio of 8,600, or a moiety thereof of 4,226 to a Member—the District, of course, being a moiety. In the apportionment of 1871, the same District, on a ratio of 12,600, or a moiety, became entitled to four members, and we were told by Representative Mitchell, on his return from Lansing, that it was the hardest work of the whole session to get the Districts organized as they are—the members of the southern counties fighting hard and long against the decrease of their representation.

The same struggle will have to be fought over the coming session, and the North will again increase in representation, while the south must of necessity decrease. And hence the importance of this District sending the best possible Representative, in order that he may show up our rapidly increasing population, and that the District may be divided in such a manner that will be most satisfactory to all.

And in this connection we would say that we believe it would be an act of wisdom on the part of this District to renominate our present Representative, Hon. E. H. Green, who, we are assured, will accept the nomination should it be tendered him. It is true, Mr. Green has said he would not be a candidate in opposition to any person outside of Charlevoix county. From reliable authority we learn the counties of Antrim, Emmet and Mackinac have no candidate to present at this time in opposition to the present incumbent. We know that we express the wish of a large majority of this county when we say that Mr. Green, under all the circumstances, is the first choice of our people—notwithstanding the action of the County Convention last week, which unwittingly elected delegates to the Representative Convention, whom, it is said, will favor the nomination of Mr. O. D. Wood, of Norwood.

We know that had the people been aware of Mr. Wood's motives such a result would not have happened. Mr. Green, it is well known, is not a politician in the sense in which it is commonly used. Although he has always held office since the organization of the county, yet he has never gone into a Convention to ask for them. His record is before the people. He has been a resident of the County for more than six years, and, doubtless, knows the wants of this District as well as any other man in the county.

His past experience in the last two sessions, and his acquaintance with the several State Departments at Lansing, point him out as the proper person to send to the Legislature at this time, and we earnestly hope that the delegates from the adjoining counties will ignore the pretentions of the Norwood aspirant, and give their hearty support to Mr. Green.

☞ All the Michigan members of the present Congress have been renominated, in their respective Districts.

☞ The Vermont election has resulted in a Republican victory, the entire State ticket being elected and two out of three Congressmen.

☞ Hon. Henry M. Look, formerly of Pontiac, is mentioned as likely to be the Democratic nominee for Congress in Omar D. Conger's District.

☞ President Grant authorizes the use of the military in preserving the peace in the South. Outrages must now cease, or the army will be held as a party to the reign of outrage and mob violence.

☞ The soldiers guarding Bazaine at the time he escaped from St. Marguerite, have been all released, the French Government acquitting them of complicity with Bazaine's departure.

☞ An exchange says the best way for a man to acquire a fine flow of language is to stump his toe against a raised brick—especially if he has no ingrowing toe nail or corns on his toes.

☞ It is estimated that the scandal has cost, in types, telegrams, correspondents, and lawyers, $100,000 and yet "believe'er we take our wales how many poor we see."

☞ Twenty prisoners were received at the State prison during August, Fourteen were discharged in the same month, two were pardoned, and one died. The latter, was 70 years old, was sent for life in 1861.

☞ In avoiding all conflict with hostile Indians, as he steadily aimed to do, the World thinks that Gen. Custer has shown himself a better tactician and soldier than if he had won half a dozen inglorious victories over them.

☞ "Five more Radicals killed, and firing still going on along the whole line." That is the sort of congratulatory telegraphic literature that passes between friends down in Louisiana. What a fine argument the ballot is growing to be in that Confederate land of Beulah!

☞ Prof. Moses Coit Tyler has resigned his position as Literary Editor of The Christian Union, and has accepted an invitation to return to his former professorship in the University of Michigan. He will enter upon his duties about the middle of September.

☞ Tilton's answer to Beecher's statement is said to be ready to be given to the public. It takes up Beecher's statement point by point, as a literary production is said to be creditable, will not be given out until after Moulton's answer is made public, and will occupy twelve newspaper columns.

☞ The Pentwater News says: Judge Giddings is himself again, and is disposing of the business before this term of court in a masterly manner. Could we but know that it would always be thus we could ask for nothing more. No man is better fitted for the position he occupies, than Augustine H. Giddings, when he is not the slave of an overruling passion for strong drink.

☞ Judge Wells, in his speech at the celebration of the Pioneers of Kalamazoo, told how the "big village" came to be "some potatoes." It seems that Titus Bronson raised 700 bushels of potatoes on a single acre in Washtenaw county, and with the proceeds brought the land of the United States on which Kalamazoo now stands. Why shouldn't Kalamazoo claim to be "some potatoes."

☞ Keep the fact constantly in mind that the struggle this Fall is to be between Republicanism and Democracy. The friends of the latter organization are doing their best be united efforts to bring their party to the front. Republicans must lay aside all side issues until the general one is settled. The nation is called upon to answer this question, "Shall the House of Representatives pass into the hands of Democracy?" We say emphatically, No! It would be a public calamity to permit it.

☞ It is now said that an ultra branch is to be tendered to the Titus-Moulton crowd by the Republicans. And this impels an exchange to remark that if all the stories it has heard are true, there ought to be an abundance of little olive branches between them.

Election Notice.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE, }
Charlevoix, Mich., Sept. 17, 1874. }

To the Electors of the County of Charlevoix.

Farms & Farming Lands

Bought and sold on commission.

We are now preparing an Abstract of Titles of Emmet County. It will be completed in a few weeks, and we can then furnish Abstracts on short notice.

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable locations of Indian selections of Farming Lands which we offer at very low figures:

No. 1. 80 acres. First rate farming land. Situated 2½ miles from Little Traverse bay; very well timbered—beech and maple soil; rich sandy loam; will be sold very cheap. S. ½ of sec. of section 30, Town 36 North, of Range 6 west.

No. 2. 40 acres. Sec of sec. section 30, Town 32 N., of Range 5 west. 2½ miles from Petoskey City, with 10 acres cleared; small log house; will be sold at a bargain.

No. 3. 186 acres. N. ½ of sec. sec of sec., and fractional one-half of section 22. Will be sold in separate descriptions or in a body. Has a large creek running the whole length, with good water powers. Well timbered, and will be sold cheap for cash. This is one of the best chances in the country for a person wishing to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many descriptions of Farming lands near Petoskey City, which we will sell at reasonable prices. Some of these Lands have old Indian improvements and can easily be made into farms.

BROKE DOWN.—The Steamer Amie broke her crank on Tuesday, and has laid up for repairs.

A postoffice has been established at Boyne Falls, and Wm. Nelson has been appointed Postmaster.

WE are glad to learn that Dr. Harris, of Torch Lake, has so far recovered as to be able to resume his practice.

THE Progress says the Harsha boys have purchased the American hotel at Elk Rapids, and will run it in an improved style.

Those of our readers who are fond of figures, will find plenty of them on our last page.

FOWLER of the Manistee Times has purchased the Standard of that city and proposes to consolidate the two into the Times and Standard.

THE Milwaukee Reporter, a six-column paper, published at Lake City, Missaukee county, by Dr. S. W. Davis, is printed upon a wooden cylinder press, manufactured by himself.

INTERESTING.—The Leelanau Tribune, published at Northport, came to us last week enlarged in size from a seven to an eight column folio, adopting the co-operative plan.

NEW DIRECTOR.—We neglected to state in our last issue that L. D. Bartholomew was elected Director of this School District at the Annual School Meeting held on the 7th.

ENDOR.—Our item of request from Carpenter and Bartholomew to all having book accounts with them, to settle up, was "with the late firm of Carpenter and Son."

WE regret to learn that Jas. S. Lewis, the polite clerk of the Fountain City House is to leave Charlevoix the coming week. He will probably return to his post near Spring.

RELIGIOUS.—Rev. A. J. Wiggins, of South Arm, will preach at the school house at the usual morning hour to-morrow. Rev. J. M. Whitney will preach at the same place in the evening, and at the Bird school house at 2 o'clock p. m.

REAL ESTATE CHANGE.—Nancy A. Prescott, of Evelina Township, to James Mitchel, of Washtenaw county, West half of South West quarter of Section 19, T. 33 N. R. 7. W. Consideration $450.

CIRCULARS with a portrait and description of Charley Ross, the three-year-old boy who was abducted from Philadelphia some time ago, are posted in various parts of the village also, probably in every place in the United States, and offer a reward of $20,000 for his recovery.

THE Elk Rapids Progress says that Perry Beckwith and James Briggs lately partook of E. H. Pearl's refreshments at the cottage hotel, and from the effects thereof were inveigled into a muscular conversery, in which Perry came off victorious.

LOST IN THE WOODS.—Five children—three belonging to J. F. May, and two to a Mr. Collins—in the town of Wilson, left Mr. Collins' house one morning last week for a spring near there, and got astray in the woods and were unable to find their way out. Being missed, an expedition went in search of them, and about eight o'clock the same evening they were found over two miles from home in the midst of a dense swamp between Bear River and Pine Lake.

THE native conceit of the man who tries to edit the Progress crops out promiscuously in the last issue of that sheet. He boldly asserts that the paper upon which he spreads the highflown product of his brain is superior to the SENTINEL. Never was man mistaken as we are at this thunderclap of editorial utterance. After having labored nearly six years to place our paper where it is, in the front rank of American journalism,—a marvel of newspaper perfection—to be taken aback thus by the Progress is more than one human system can stand up under. The SENTINEL is for sale.

AT the County Convention held recently, Archibald Buttars was appointed Chairman of the Republican County Committee. He succeeds Robert Miller, Esq., who has filled the position for seven successive years. The circumstance calls to our attention the past political rectitude of Mr. Miller,—who, although seeking none of the emoluments of office has been in the front rank of the leading Republicans of the region, and ever to be found, heart and soul with the party—always outspoken, and never vacillating. His successor, Mr. Buttars, deserves all we have said of Mr. Miller. He is a Republican of most sterling quality, a constant and intelligent reader, an active and successful worker, and, we doubt not, will be singled out for use by the people of Northern Michigan at no very distant day.

PLAT OF BOYNE FALLS.—The plat of the village of Boyne Falls was received for record at the Register's office this week. The survey and drafting was done by Engineer Hearshin, and is a fine production. The territory consists of a portion of the North-west quarter of the South-west quarter of section 15, of that Township, the railroad passing through the west side of the village. The streets are 80 feet wide—all running parallel and at right angles with each other. This alone is evidence of the wisdom and generosity of Messrs. Nelson & Powers, the proprietors. We believe in wide streets, for many reasons not necessary now to be given. There is one more feature about this plat that we like, and that is the spring brook running through the south half of it. Indeed the location for a village is just the best that could have been selected anywhere on the line of the road. And we should not be surprised if Messrs. Nelson & Powers should find it necessary to lay out an addition before the end of one year from the date of their first record.

THE effort at the late county convention to boost the Norwood money-lender into Legislative honors, was a play in which Hamlet did his own acting. The manner in which he pulled the wool over the eyes of the ignorant delegates (ignorant we mean as to his motives) was a piece of intrigue of which only he could be competent. It could not but be discovered in time to cast him aside among the rubbish, and add strength to the cause of him into whose shoes the intriguer sought to step unbidden. We say unbidden, because the battle is more than half won when the nomination is secured; and if secured through unfair manipulation, why not unbidden? Hot we predict that in the end the result will not be unlike,—in a comparative sense—that of the Haman and Mordecai episode of the time of Esther. Surely the people of this District will not aid the frantic maneuverings of an unbridled aspirant, when there stands before them a man who has faithfully represented their interests two years, and who has never even asked the vote or influence of one man for any public station.

Famine in the Irish Isles.

Not only in India, but also nearer home the subjects of Great Britain are suffering for want of food. Appeals are made in the London press in behalf of the inhabitants of the islands of Achill and Inishbegill, which are threatened with starvation, just as the neighboring Isles of Bofin and Shark were threatened also some time ago. For the last two seasons the potato crop has entirely failed in Achill and Inishbegil, situated in that "melancholy ocean" which bears eternally on the west coast of Ireland.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

☞ A story, which seems almost too frightful to be true, is brought from New York. A man is charged with having sold three of his own daughters, to keepers of disreputable houses. He has been arrested for the sale of the third girl, a child of but thirteen years, and the wretch who purchased her was captured while conveying the poor child to his house. It is hard to say what punishment would meet the deserts of such scoundrels.

☞ We get some idea of the vastness of our country from the statistics furnished by Mr. Dodge, of the Department of Agriculture. Less than one-fifth of the entire area of the United States is mapped into farms, and only one-fourth of this farm area is tilled or mowed. Heavy as our wheat crop is it occupies an area less than the surface of South Carolina. Our national crop, maize, covers a territory not larger than Virginia, and the potato crop could grow in less than the area of Delaware. The country is capable of producing food for the support of a population almost without number.

☞ The newly discovered Gold Fields of Black Hills region is setting the frontiersmen and adventurers of the west all agog, and several expeditions are already organizing. The prospects are that there will be great difficulty and suffering resulting from an attempt, this fall and winter, to occupy and utilize those gold places. In the first place the region is reserved for an Indian hunting ground, and the savages are numerous, hostile and dangerous in that territory. General Sheridan has issued stringent orders to the army to prevent emigrants going upon those reservations until the Government shall make the necessary treaties, and laws for governing mining operations. He directs all such parties shall be restrained and returned, and if necessary shall insure shot and their supplies burned.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - - SEPT. 26, 1874.

Republican Representative Convention for Charlevoix District.

A Regular mass Convention to nominate a candidate for Representative in the Legislature from the Charlevoix District, to be held and called to order at Rose's Hotel, in Charlevoix on Wednesday, the 30th day of September, at 10 o'clock in the afternoon. The several Counties in the District will be entitled to delegates as follows, viz: Antrim 3, Charlevoix, 2; Emmet, 3; Mackinac, 2.

By Order of the Committee.

IRVIN H. WARNER.

☞ Senator Chandler will stump the State, commencing the latter part of this month.

☞ It really begins to look as though Moulton and the rest of the boys had got a little joke on Beecher.

☞ Gen. Butler opened his personal canvass for re-election from the Sixth Congressional District of Massachusetts.

☞ The cable dispatches bring news of the death of M. Guizot, the eminent French author and statesman.

☞ "Put down that insurrection. Report afterwards" U. S. Grant to General Emory, New Orleans.

☞ Edna Dean Proctor, whom Moulton speaks disrespectfully of in his statement, has sued that gentleman for libel, and lays damages at $100,000.

☞ Kellogg is Governor of Louisiana again. His officers occupy the State House, the Metropolitan police are on the streets, and the city is practically the same, so far as its officers are concerned.

☞ The Marquis of Ripon, one of the wealthiest of the English nobles and a man who has held official positions, recently, as has already been reported by cable, resigned his position as Grand Master of Free Masons in England, and announced his conversion to the Roman Catholic faith.

☞ In New York the Beecher-Tilton-Moulton controversy is regarded as more badly mussed since Tilton's last statement than it was before, and that, unless Mr. Beecher explains or disproves the main points made against him in that statement, public sentiment will deem him indeed guilty of the charge. It is very evident that Mr. Beecher has been again forced to the defensive and the sooner he uses it and sets upon it the better for him and his church.

☞ Victoria Woodhull and her free-love gang have suddenly returned from Europe, and are red-hot angry, both because Beecher called them "hyenas," and because Tilton goes back on them. Vic threatens to publish a full statement of details, giving both parties a terrible overhauling. But nobody cares for her. She and Miss Tilton are regarded as among the killed of the conflict, and certain it is that all others who have been touched by the pitch of the scandal are the same as mortally wounded, even Beecher's case is beginning to be looked upon as hopeless.

☞ The Chicago Journal says, concerning the Beecher Scandal; "Putting aside all lust, splitting or mawkishness, we are compelled to charge upon the innocent party, whichever that may be, a treachery which is demoralizing in its influence. If Mr. Tilton knew four years ago that Mr. Beecher was a criminal, he should have exposed him, or at least enforced the demand that he step down and out of the pulpit. If, on the other hand, Mr. Beecher knew himself to be the victim of a wicked conspiracy, he should have resisted and overthrown it at once. Such dalliance with crime is hardly less pernicious than dalliance with temptation in its more seductive forms. Nothing has been gained, from the standpoint of charity, by an unwise forbearance. Lovely as mercy is, Justice must not be overlooked. The two must always in near friends, close allies and mutual helpers. Whichever party to the pending scandal may be vindicated on the main issue, the danger of exaggerated forbearance will have been strikingly illustrated."

☞ A most terrific disaster occurred at Hoosac Tunnel, on the 19th. A large Cotton Mill took fire while the occupants were at work and was totally destroyed. Twenty were killed, and a large number injured. The following are the particulars: The fire originated at the tower on the fourth story, and an attempt was made to extinguish it with pails of water but ineffectually. During this endeavor the door leading to the spool-room, which opens south on the tower staircase, had to be closed to keep back and prevent a pause, but when the flames had gained such strength that it was found impossible to quench them the escapes of the girls had been cut off. The frightened and terrified creatures, with the roaring flames on the lower staircase, rushed in a body for the fire-escape, but dozen volumes of smoke that poured into the room, and the flames, forced them to the northeast corner of the apartment, from which, unfortunately, there were no means of escape. Many in the meantime had become suffocated, and others, preferring death by falling to the ground, sprang recklessly from the window, and were picked up mangled, bleeding, dead and dying. The excitement was terrible.

Another Rebellion Predicted.

We awaken at heart at the contemplation of the misery which threatens Alabama, Louisiana, and South Carolina, Grant's best arm alone the door to all hope that he will vote the Civil Rights bill Nay, more; it gives to the impending conflict of racial danger, wider and more horrible significance for if the whites of the States we have named, driven to desperation by the prospect of the continued rule of negroes, were to resist the federal forces, the first confidence would be likely to prove the spark which would fire the train of another civil war—not of sections, but of political parties.

An overwhelming majority of the white men in this country are hostile to the continuation of the rule of the negro and white adventurer in the South. If the federal government will scrap its hands off, November next will witness the downfall of the black oligarchy. If it persists in its utter foolery, then, in view of the almost certain success of the civil rights bill, we believe it time for southern men everywhere to organize and prepare for resistance. Let us stand ready to resist the enforcement of the civil rights bill, and the maintenance of negro governments by federal bayonets. And when the contest does begin, let us call upon those of the northern people who sympathize with us, to give us their aid in tearing down the infamous federal government which seeks to force eight millions of white men down to a level with four millions of negroes. If force alone can destroy the Radical party, then we must not shrink from using it, and the sooner it is used the earlier will be terminated the political struggles which are retarding the development of the south, and injuring the entire country.—Atlanta (Ga) New Era.

Such is the rampant spirit of the leading Democratic organs of the States lately engaged in rebellion. These Journalists are the same men who advocated a dissolution of the Union in 1860, in the event that a Republican President was chosen. President Lincoln was constitutionally elected President of the United States, and was so declared chosen by Congress. Jefferson Davis and his Democratic associates in Dixie raised the standard of rebellion and revolution and a long and bloody struggle ensued between the Union and Secession elements, and victory perched on the standard of Liberty and Union. The damnable institution of American slavery was destroyed, the Union of the States was restored and the institutions of the model Republic of the world were made sure by enactment of the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments to the Federal Constitution guaranteeing the freedom and equality of all American citizens. We are now threatened with another Democratic rebellion by the self-same organs of treason who inaugurated the rebellion of 1861 because the American people had chosen a President whose political views did not correspond with the Southern Secessionists and slaveholders. And this too, notwithstanding the lenient treatment of all the leaders of the late rebellion, and the restoration to the civil and political rights of the great mass of those engaged in a most diabolical conspiracy to destroy the grandest government the world has seen during the Christian Era. Already these unhung traitors talk as they used to do in the old Democratic Pre-Slavery regime prior to the rebellion and threaten to raise a revolution once more to resist the enforcement of the laws of the United States for the protection of an enfranchised race of people in their civil rights. The cowardly organs of treason, forgetful that our nation has at present for its chief magistrate, Gen. Grant, the conqueror of the former Democratic rebellion, the silent men who seldom talks and always means business. We think that that the nation has such a man as President Grant to preside over the destinies of this great country of ours. We are also thankful that in this crisis we have no senile Democratic President like James Buchanan to connive at the concoction of another rebellion. President Grant—unlike Jefferson Davis—believes in living up to the oaths of office he has taken and when he swears to maintain and execute the laws of the country the American people may depend that they will be executed let the organs of cowardly assassins and perjured traitors say and do as they may Ex.

THE SPIRIT OF "KATIE KING."

Spiritualistic Manifestations at Bloomfield, Lenawee County—The Materialization of "Katie King."

The people of Philadelphia have recently been much excited concerning certain "spiritual manifestations" of a startling character, being no more nor less, as is claimed, than the actual appearance in bodily form of a spirit known as "Katie King." It seems that this clerical lady has visited Michigan, and is now "astonishing the natives" of the eastern part of the State. The following account of the first public "seance" at Bloomfield Lenawee county, is given in the Adrian Times:

THE SEANCE.

By this time the hour appointed had arrived and the guests were seated around the room, the number being in all about twenty, which crowded the room to its utmost capacity. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes took positions near the cabinet, facing each other, one on each side of the cabinet. The door was closed and fastened with the little hook before spoken of. At the request of Mr. Holmes a song was started, for it seems that spirits are lovers of music. The lights are now lowered a little, but not so as to obscure the view of surrounding objects. The singing was said to do for the purpose of harmonizing the influences. Our reporter kept his eyes on the small openings in the cabinet, for it was from them that he expected to see the first appearance of the residents of another world. He did not have to wait long for

THE MATERIAL APPEARANCE.

First the curtain was raised a very little and two hands appeared. Then a small light colored object, which by a stretch of imagination by some thought to look like a human face. Then followed other faces, each one becoming a little plainer than the preceding one, until the appeared, which was very plain indeed. This face was recognized by a Toledo lady present as Dr. Buchanan, of Indiana, who was lately deceased. Then followed a short period of silence, which was broken by the appearance of

FACE OF AN OLD GENTLEMAN

ANOTHER VISITOR.

A voice was heard from the cabinet bidding the different persons in the room "good evening," calling them by name. The face accompanying the voice, appeared, and was immediately recognized by a number as Richard Lonergan, familiarly called "Dick." Quite an animated conversation was kept up between this spirit and several parties in the room, who said that they had met him before. He said that demonstrations would be powerful which would shake the doubts of the skeptics. A brief expression of Dick's was "by jingo!" Mrs. Holmes then said to him that she had pleased his guitar in the cabinet, and requested him to play upon it. He fingered the strings a little, but entirely without harmony. The guitar was then passed to the spirit. Soon after this a beautiful face appeared at the opening. Mrs. Holmes immediately announced the presence of

"KATIE KING."

The face appeared several times, when the white and shapely arm of a woman appeared, and soon after the sweet face appeared again and whispered a few words seeming to those present. This was responded to by several, when she spoke to Mrs. Holmes, who stepped up to the cabinet, and the same hand and arm appeared, and the layer-like fingers were placed upon that lady's head. After this many others in the room, including the writer, were permitted to step to the cabinet, and receive touches from the hand of the mysterious personage. The reporter asked and received permission to shake with her hand, and received a very slight pressure of the hand. Whether that hand was human or spiritual he does not pretend to say. Mrs Holmes then asked the mysterious visitor whether she thought she would be able to leave the cabinet during the seance and she replied, "I will try." During all this time there was singing by those present, or music by a violin and guitar. There was a short time of suspense, the only sound being the low subdued sound of the violin; then the cabinet door opened slowly, and there stood in full view of all in the room, the so-called spirit of the famous "Katie King." She was clad in traditional white flowing robes of "the Summer Land" and appeared about one minute years of age. Although said to be long to another world, she appeared as real as any being in the room but with more of an etherial look. Her white robes gracefully adorned her, while her head seemed shrouded in some kind of a veil. Upon her neck hung a beautiful cross, which gastoned in the light. After a moment she stepped back into the cabinet and closed the door. Soon afterward she appeared again in the open door. After standing an instant she stepped forward into the room some four or five feet, almost within touching distance of the writer. Here she had a second but shadow of obscuring her appearance. Her arms were bare, her feet were concealed by the folds of her dress and her figure was finely moulded. Her complexion was almost transparent. After a little time she returned in the cabinet. Mrs. Holmes then asked her if she could paint a flower, and received an affirmative answer. A chair was placed near the cabinet and the door soon opened, and "Katie" appeared again, walking out of the room as before, and then coming and sitting in the chair, where she remained a few moments, and again retired to the cabinet.

REMARKS.

Just at the most solemn period, and out of the room, causing considerable disturbance, and rises cause a change ring from the cabinet, and Mr. Holmes announced that the harmony was broken and the seance was at an end, as the spirit would do nothing more that evening. The door of the cabinet was immediately opened, and as the Times reporter was in the cabinet without delay, but there was not a trace of any thing in connection with the mysterious, that could be discovered. During the hour or so that he was in the cabinet he remained in their positions without moving. At the close, there being a few moments to do before leave, a short conversation was had with Mrs. Holmes.

THE IMAGE.

He stated that the real name of Katie King was Anna Morgan, and that she lived in the time of Cromwell. Her father was executed in the time of Charles II. for the crime of piracy.

CONCLUSION.

The writer has no theory on which to account for these manifestations. That they are strange, all will confess. Such developments have excited the curiosity of scientists in this country and England. Of course nothing people will jump at the conclusion that the whole thing is a humbug, but it is no part of the writer's duty to make charges which he cannot substantiate. If it is a humbug in the form of wire movements skill, and if not a trick, what is it? That question is left for each to answer.

LATER.

Matters stood in this shape until Sept. 22d, when a séance was held for the benefit of some parties from Toledo, to which were admitted a number of ladies and gentlemen from Bloomfield. The arrangement for the seance were made after the usual fashion, the believers being placed in the room, and the skeptics in the rear. Then came the seance and the appearance of "Katie." She had gone nearly through with her manifestations, coming into the room disagreeing etc., when Mr. Brown threw a sponge into the cabinet, scaring her. The light was immediately extinguished, and the Holmes and their friends pounced upon Mr. Brown and compelled him to relinquish his hold upon the spiritual (?) form of Katie. He was hustled out of the cabinet, and by the time light was obtained and the confusion quelled Katie was gone. Mr. Brown is positive that he caught hold of the person representing himself as Katie King, familiarly termed "Dick." Quite an animated conversation was kept up between this spirit and several parties in the room, who said that they had met him before. He said that demonstrations would be powerful which would shake the doubts of the skeptics. A brief expression of Dick's was "by jingo!" Mrs. Holmes then said to him that she had pleased his guitar in the cabinet, and requested him to play upon it. He fingered the strings a little, but entirely without harmony. The guitar was then passed to the spirit. Soon after this a beautiful face appeared at the opening. Mrs. Holmes immediately announced the presence of

To The Last Dime.

How time flies, to be sure, that "the best laid plans of men and mice aft gang awry." The Wood delegation went into the Convention on Wednesday with considerable money expended and their plans for raising cash on the goodies the fat-mouth vote of the Charlevoix con. vinced that the days of miracles and loaves and fishes were past, and that the possibility of their taking possession of the Convention and stampeding it in the following manner of the usual number, proved to be not so few. The secret agent soldiers in the Detroit employment (4 votes. His assistant of the delegation was sent to Green the carefree Medicine and Exposition, whose used to one of the Victory disappointment—all right now. This left Wood the delegates Charlevoix delegation, in front of the Antrim vote. And it is a case in the first ballot when the Convention split. Some after the Antrim county contestants, Mr. Kinney, thinking that he would be unable to attend the Representative Convention owing to the pressure of his business, and Mr. Marshall of Bowne, who it would be natural to suppose, would reflect his client's sentiments at the Convention which was divided in favor of Green. On the 20th instant, Mr. Kinney issued to Faith R. Williams of Elk Rapids, written power to attend the Convention in his name, making no provisions or restrictions and who declared, of course, on the assembling of the Convention that he was entitled to the vote of Antrim county. Under the Rules Committee reported as Temporary Chairman Mr. E. J. Lewis and Mr. James F. Cudlip, Committee reported as Temporary Secretary the Counties of Manitou, Emmet, Charlevoix and Antrim as follows:

Manitou—L. C. Gaskill, James F. Cudlip.

Emmet—Henry A. Rollins.

Charlevoix—Not being represented.

Antrim—James A. Moore, Richard Scripps, Wm. J. Gott, E. J. Lewis, R. R. Williams.

On motion the Report of the Committee on credentials was accepted and adopted.

On motion the Hon. Ed. Bellaire presented were found to be as follows:—E. L. Gaskill, James F. Cudlip, Henry A. Rollins, James A. Moore, E. J. Lewis, and R. R. Williams.

On motion the Convention was permanently organized by electing Mr. Henry A. Rollins President and James A. Moore Secretary.

Moved and carried that all the Convention proceed to vote as informal ballot for Representative in the State Legislature on the first.

The Republican Ticket.

At the head of this column we give a complete list of the Republican nominations. We have previously endorsed the entire important row, but feel no occasion to repeat our approbation at this time, when public attention is becoming more directly occupied by the issues of the day and hour. From Governor to Con. gressmen, we will give the ticket our hearty support. The candidate for State Senator—Hon. W. H. C. Mitchell—is the present incumbent at that office, and has an unspoiled record. Hon. Edward C. Green, the candidate for Representative has filled that position creditably for the past two years, and his renomination is but the expression of the popular voice that he should be sent back.

The county nominations are the work of a Republican Convention—we deem it our duty as a Republican journalist to recognize. But recognition does not mean unqualified endorsement. With one exception, however, we feel no faith with the ticket, but rather confidence it to the people as eminently a proper one. But we feel justified in stating our belief that the Convention, in making its nomination for County Clerk, was guilty of either reprehensible indifference, or corrupt duplicity. Since the surrender and capture of the said Convention by the Wood ring, we have had reason to consider H. L. Miller's nomination as a game of "stop and sell" eventually entered into by the Wood party and the said Miller. We have always looked upon the latter person as an article of traffic, always in the possession of the highest bidder and possessing not the slightest degree of political stamina or reliability. We cannot support a man for public office who possesses such a record of political treachery as that made against him. His conduct of two years ago is still fresh in the minds of the people, and we refer them to it. We furthermore regard him as a man wholly incapable of the trust which a stand-by under harrowed to place within his reach, and shall consider it a discredit to our county, and a stigma upon our common sense and judgement if he is elected.

☞ Mr. Beecher has appeared as prosecuting witness before the Brooklyn grand jury in suits against Moulton and Bowen for criminal libel. Better late than never! It is to be hoped that these two suits will be pressed vigorously and in good faith to their conclusion, and that the exact truth in this deplorable matter may be made known beyond the possibility of doubt.

☞ It is the English fashion among the swells, to wear a cane at the seaside. Nobody is anybody, unless he can invite his friends to the hospitality of his hole in the ground. The caves at Brighton are in the stiff and approached only from the shore. Costly, magnificent pianos, settees, ice furniture, books and knick-knacks bring their aid to make the caves into delightful smoking or drawing rooms, and long wheelbarrows to this coolness and quiet straggle from the melancholy beach at night, brings up constitutions of many an Arabian night's entertainment.

Major Greene's Speech.

[Owing to the crowded state of our columns last week, we were unable to publish Major Greene's address to the Regiment upon leaving Camp Wilkins. We now give it, below verbatim:]

GENTLEMEN OF THE COMPANY.—I am deeply grateful for the compliments your kindness has bestowed upon me. The motive which has influenced your action on the occasion which has led to the subject that I have neither pledges or promises to any person, interests of humanity, save my pledges which I have made with my own conscience, to seek ways to promote the best interests of the whole District and of the great commonwealth of which it forms a part.

I have now only to pledge to you, that in case of my election it shall be my highest ambition to discharge the duties of the office faithfully and honestly, according to the best of my humble capacity, but the good of the whole District.

I am sensible of the vast extent of the Representative District, comprising with in its limits, from 28 N and 46 N inclusive, and containing an area of 3,000 square miles. I can appreciate the fact that there are delegates in this County from whose homes are nearly 100 miles. Hence men being a distinct it is not unreasonable to find diversified interests and when these conflicting measures are being acted upon in the Legislature, your Representative can only act in such a manner as shall, according to his judgement and information, do the most good for the District as a whole.

The approaching session of the Michigan Legislature will be one of unusual interest, especially if the proposed amendments to the state constitution should be adopted; in that event the Legislature shall provide by statute way for the cases which can now only be passed by special and local acts.

A United States Senator is also to be elected at the coming session to succeed Mr. Chandler. I do not know who the candidates will be, but think that the great of the people believe that a man who has had seventeen years experience in the Senate, can do more for the interests of his state, than a man without any experience; and that Hon. Zach. Chandler will be his own successor in the Senate of the United States.

Two being the year in which the State census is taken, the next Legislature that apportion seats to Representatives among the counties and Districts and (in case I am re-elected) it will devolve upon the duties of the office) I shall be prejudi and thankful to any of those delegates, and to any per son in the District, for suggestions as to how you would like those matters settled as the present District was and probability be divided.

In accepting your nomination, being that of the Regular Republican Convention of the District, I shall expect your support in the campaign which follows and we trust which your nomination cannot be regarded by the people.

Again thanking you for the honor, and assuring you that in case of my election that I shall endeavor to represent the whole District without respect to parties or localities, I bid you one and all, good night.

☞ In his speech at Flint, Senator Chandler said they might have to elect Gen. Grant a third time if the Democrats would get up another rebellion.

☞ Steam setting has commenced again on the new Capitol. It has been at a standstill for nearly two weeks, while the stakes were being raised to the level of the first story. The brickwork, however, has been pressed forward on the interior walls and they are now also high above the outside walls, and in many places are ready for the iron framing of the second floor. The carpenter work shows that the contractors have taken thorough advantage of the early favorable season, the weather being such that there has been scarcely an interruption.

TILTON.

His Last Card to the Public.

The following was published in the New York Herald of last Sunday:

I have just learned from the Brooklyn papers (all not as yet in my other way) that Mr. Abbott Moulton, confidential attorney of the Plymouth Church, committee of investigation, and author or their intense and unjust report, has used his official prerogative to prosecute against me a criminal indictment for libeling his client, the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. The public will recollect that, in the spring of 1873, Mr. William F. Wood, a member of Plymouth Church, formulated and preferred charges against me for the crime of slandering Mr. Beecher; specifically in this, that I had accused him of the criminal intimacy with Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton. Mr. Beecher had then an opportunity and an invitation to convict me of libel if I was guilty, but, instead of accepting the challenge, he declined to his assembled congregation that he "had no charge to make against me." Again, the accusation of Mr. Beecher's adultery was repeated in my sworn statement to the Investigating Committee in July last, but it did not obtain a prosecution for libel. Again, last summer, Mr. William J. Arkell, a stronger equally to Mr. Beecher and myself, formally lodged a criminal complaint against me for libelling Mr. Beecher by exposing his guilty intimacy with Mrs. Tilton, but instead of acting this occasion to test the truth of my accusation, Mr. Beecher and his district attorney exerted themselves to suppress the malicious prosecution. After these successive opportunities, carefully avoided by the pastor of Plymouth Church, to prosecute me for libel, I am now justified in asking the public to attribute the present tardy indictments against me to the fact that the Plymouth Church Committee's report, drawn by Mr. Williams, has failed to command popular confidence, and that Mr. Beecher and his church attorney have found now that they have no refuge save the desperate attempt to place me in the position of an apparent criminal, and so to discredit me in the trial of my case by

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable lots, farms and Indian orchards of farming lands which we offer at very low figures:

No. 1. 40 acres. First rate farming land, situated 2½ miles from Little Traverse bay; well timbered—beech and maples; sail-rich sandy loam; will be sold very cheap. Bl ng of sec. of section 30, Town 36 North, Of Range 6 west.

No. 2. 40 acres. Sw ¼ of nw ¼ section 30, Town 34 North, of Range 5 west. 31 miles from Petoskey City, with 10 acres cleared; small log house; will be sold at a bargain.

No. 3. 186 acres. N½ of sec. ne¼ and fractional one-half of section 32. Will be sold in separate descriptions or in a body. Has a large creek running the whole length, with good water powers. Well timbered, and will be sold cheap for cash. This is one of the best chances in the country for a person wishing to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many descriptions of Farming lands near Petoskey City; which we will sell at reasonable prices. Some of these Lands have old Indian improvements, and can easily be made into farms.

Men's and boys' clothing, and gents' underclothing, cheaper than ever, at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

Mention.—Hazen Ingalls Sr., of Bear River, was married last week to a lady from Northport.

Hackmen.—Rev. Geo. L. Cole will preach at the school house to-morrow, both morning and evening.

Mrs. H. Hedwig sends us a basket of very fine grapes of several varieties, for which she has our thanks.

How. E. H. Green will address the people of Mackinac next Thursday evening, on the issues of the campaign.

A. E. Hayes, of Porters Mill, brings us four onions raised from the seed, the average girthage of which is 12 1-2 inches

There are now thirteen Granges organized in the Grand Traverse region, with a membership between 600 and 700

Jack Frost has made his appearance in the southern portion of the State, and in the interior of the northern counties, but has slighted us thus far.

State Tax.—The Appointment of State Tax for Charlevoix County is $229.44; Antrim, $1,161.55; Emmet, $143. 41; Mackinac, $645. 32; Manitou, $143. 41

New Business.—Geo. W. Crouter has commenced the erection of a new Drug store on Bridge St., opposite Hockman's Hardware Store. It will be 20x30 in size.

Fox, Rose & Buttars are receiving by every Lost fresh invoices of goods embracing all qualities and styles, which are being sold as cheap, if not cheaper, than by any mercantile house in Grand Traverse.

One of the best ways in the world to advertise your town, is to subscribe for and have your village and county paper sent to some friend. It will in due time return to you ten fold.

The propeller St. Louis is aground in Macmon Bay on the flats, the removal of which is a part of the improvements now being made under the Government appropriations. The propeller is quite two feet out of the water.

"I wish I were a delegate to this Convention," said a firm supporter of Mr. Wood, in one of his "unguarded" moments "Why?" asked a bystander. "Because, I would get $100 for my vote," was the reply.

Libelled.—The three-masted schooner Tecumseh, which has traded here during the season, was tied up in Milwaukee one day this week for a debt of $3,150 contested in rebuilding her last winter, and several unpaid tug bills. She was stripped, and all hands discharged.

Charlevoix Harbor.—The improvement up in Charlevoix harbor is about to be commenced. The amount to be expended on the work is $15,000, and it is principally dredging. Messrs. Garkin & Stickney (the contractors), have the credit of having done all that has ever been accomplished in the way of improving Charlevoix harbor. They commenced in 1871, the depth of the water at that time falling short of four feet. There is now eleven feet of water, admitting the Marine City, St. Joseph, Wenona, and other large lake steam vessels. It is proposed to make the channel 200 feet wide, it being now we understand but eighty feet

Every person in the County should read a county paper. The campaign in our county has now opened, and lively work may be expected for the next few weeks. We want our paper to go into every home and hamlet in the county. Send in the names.

Dental.—Dr. A. L. Curtis, Dentist, of Cheboygan, arrived in town yesterday, and is quartered at the Pontoole City House. He will remain in town for some time, and all who has defective teeth will do well to call and see him. All work in his line done thoroughly and cheaply

Pay Up.—The Sentinel will start out for the winter with increased expenses, and the usual decrease of revenue which always follows the closing of the busy season. We would therefore be thankful to those who are indebted to us if they would hand in the amounts, however small they may be.

Emmet County.—Two county tickets are in the field in Emmet County. One has Liberty J. Ingalls for Sheriff, H. A. Rollins for Clerk and Register, John Wagley for Treasurer, and Benj. F. Ingalls for Prosecuting Attorney and Circuit Court Commissioner. The other is the "Petoskey Ticket" and has Geo. C. Perry for Sheriff, R. P. Doerfler to Clerk, John Wagley for Treasurer, and A. M. Ross for Judge of Probate.

Commissioner.—Mr. Page, general ticket agent of the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, has visited Charlevoix with the view of establishing under connections between the terminus of the road at Petoskey and some available point on the Straits of Mackinaw. Arrangements are perfected with Messrs. Abbott & Little field, of Cheboygan, by which a tri-weekly line of stages will run from Petoskey to Cheboygan. Mails and passengers can thus be expeditiously forwarded to Cheboygan, Mackinaw and Sault Ste. Marie.

New School House.—At the last meeting of the School Board, the following books were introduced for use in the Charlevoix District School. The American Educational Readers, (new series); Robinson's, Mathematics; Swinton's speller. The above new books will be exchanged for the same grade of old books at half-price; and to those who have no old books to exchange, the new books will be sold at two-thirds the retail price. The new books, together with all other books used in this District, for sale at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

Cow Stealing.—One Calvary Harrington, of Norwood, one day last week, took from the highway in that Township, a cow belonging to Jayson Burton, drove her to Petoskey, and sold her to John McNeil, of that place. Burton got on the track of the thief, followed him to Petoskey and caused his arrest. There being no jail at Petoskey, he was placed in irons by Sheriff Ingalls, and a guard placed over him. On Tuesday, a confederate passed a file in his hands, and, soon after, he knocked down the guard and escaped. And now, the fact that several people in this vicinity have lost cattle in a mysterious manner, gives rise to the suspicion that a band of cattle thieves exists in the region. Several arrests are being made as we go to press. Particulars next week.

Fun in Marion.—A lively wedding occurred in Marion one day last week. Pierce Kenedler and the daughter of Bernard Burns, Esq. were being united in matrimony when Robert Mayhew, a brother-in-law of the bride, and a strong Orangeman "forbids the banns" on the grounds that the groom was a Catholic. No attention was paid to his objections until he became violent in his language, and finally lanced several stones among the company. After forbearance had ceased to be a virtue, the groom, a large, muscular gentleman, let his right arm assume a lively horizontal position, pointing in the direction of the victim Orangeman's nose, which, it is stated caused him to turn two double back somersaults. He concluded to withdraw his objections, for the present, and proceeded to the brook to wash the blood from his face. The popular verdict is: "Served him right."

Assessor P. Palmer, (forehead) is to stump Antrim County for Wood. The idea brings to our mind the assertion made by Palmer in the presence of several of our citizens, that "he had more influence than any man in Antrim County, and proposed to use it to the bitter end." He may possess a powerful influence over the people of Antrim County, but we entertain the idea that he is possessed of more conceit than influence. Influence! Bosh! We congratulate Mr. Green, and condole with Mr. Wood on the circumstance which places Mr. Palmer in the field as a champion of the hollers ticket. We predict that as he returns on the home stretch his "influence" will grow beautifully less, and the cause which he so blusteringly and inconsistently argues against will reap a large profit from the "investments" of his all-potent "influence."

How Is It?—How is it, people of Smith's Arm? Mr. Keat has pledged a majority for Wood in his town. Do the people of South Arm propose to be left in the rear by the zone to satisfy the longings of a political sentiment, and sanction the conceit of a man who boasts that he holds the votes of a Township in his own hands? We think not. We surmise that the people of that Township are able to think and vote for themselves. Let no "State Road" promise lead you to cast your vote for a butter. The candidate who will be likely to have the most influence with the State Land Department is the man who has had the experience of two years in the business, and not the man who, through his agent, Mr. Keat, seeks to buy your votes with vague promises. Reason for yourselves and vote as your judgements tell you is right, and we are confident that you will not go astray.

As interesting and important feature of the Representative Convention was the speech of Fitch H. Williams, of Elk Rapids, immediately following the nomination of Mr. Green. He went back to the Convention of two years ago, and in a very able manner followed the subject down to the present occasion, alluding to the fact that at the previous convention the Antrim delegates came pledged to A. E. Palmer. Upon the first ballot it was found that the District was evenly divided—half the delegates favoring the nomination of F. H Green. It remained thus through upwards of 180 votes, and finally, having performed their whole duty to their county and constituents, they transferred their united support to Mr. Green. And now, looking back upon that gentleman's record as Representative, he did not regret their action, but, rather, was proud to be able to state that his county were eminently well satisfied. Although, through a strange state of circumstances, Antrim county delegation came here at this time divided, the sentiment of a majority of the people of Antrim county was that Mr. Green should be returned. It was a plainly evident fact that the opponents of Mr. Green, failing in their attempt to rule this Convention, had resolved to break it. That their attempt to disfranchise one of the counties represented here was a bold but shallow artifice to gain possession of this convention, failing in which, they sever themselves from the main body, and carry out their own illegitimate measures. He referred to Mr. Wood's self-appointed candidature, and his activity in his own behalf. He had left nothing undone to further his cause; had been laboring unceasingly to force himself into nomination. What had been Mr. Green's course? He had remained in his office, pursuing his regular vocation, waiting for the office to seek him. In this day of political corruption and demagogism, this was a trait of character most wanted in a public officer. He felt confident that Antrim county would give Mr. Green a majority, as he was also sure every other county in the District would do. He exhorted Republicans to exert themselves for the triumph of the legitimate nominee. Mr. Williams, throughout his address, was frequently interrupted by applause.

A couple of neighbors became so inimical that they would not speak to each other; but out of them, having been converted at a camp meeting, on seeing his former enemy, held out his hand saying: "How dye do Kemp? I am humble enough to shake hands with a dog."

Where it knows from it is often impossible to tell, and where it will go to noturdly knows.

There is nothing too sacre for it to feed upon, and there is no such thing as antiflying its apperaight.

It is conceived in iniquity and born in secksecy, and will live and grow fart where truth will starve to deth.

It is a foundling that the world always rlaims resale to adopt and send on its way rejoicing with a free pass and full letters of kredit.

Engaged to marry—to help one another over the rough places of life's journey; to guard one another against its pitfalls; to help one another in striving for the height of beatitude. Is it not for this the world marries? To illumine with sunshine hope the dark places? To gild with the sunshine of faith the threatening clouds of difficulty? To bridge the chasm of gloomy failures with the strong span of mutual charity? Is it not for this the world marries?

☞ Gen. W. T. Sherman has published in the Army and Navy Journal the concluding chapter of his forthcoming memoir of the events of the war. It is devoted to the military lessons growing out of the war, and among the General's conclusions are the following: The men who voluntarily enlisted at the outbreak of the war were the best soldiers, better than the conscripts and far better than the bought substitutes; increased mentality pertains to soldiers in more economical than large bounties; the greatest mistake of the war was in raising new regiments instead of filling up the vacancies in the old ones, because 500 men added to an old and experienced regiment are more valuable than 1,000 men in the form of a new regiment; the German method of recruiting is simply perfect.

The benedictions had been pronounced and the congregation were slowly filtering out of the church, with a low murmur of talk and gossip from the organ loft which seemed like the soft gurgle of escaping water. Little heed did he pay to it. He took up the theme of the last hymn, and began to improvise upon it. It was a large lofty church, and a noble organ. Under his fingers it seemed to sing a song of praise and prayer. The deep, tremulous thunder of the diapasons seemed to breathe a reverent reverence, and the keener heights of holy meditation and prayer. The whole power of the people was subdued in the atmosphere to a peace beauty he spread about them. The saints in the glowing tints thrown on them by the sun upon the dim aisles as if they heard they heard the music and felt its uplifting charm.

The murmur of voices in the church died away. A few passers-by came to hear the music, and deep silence seemed to fall on the place. Through it all ran the golden thread of the theme, soft, delicious, prayerful, beautiful.

He was absorbed in his work. His face was lifted, that he might behold the golden pipes above him. His fingers wandered on over the yellow keys, and his whole being seemed to be absorbed in his work. He knew not that she stood near him, silent, admiring him with a radiant face from on her fair face. Young, more than pretty, finely formed, with large blue eyes and light golden hair. It hung in heaped masses round her low forehead, and fell in neglected coils about her shoulders. It was her great charm. She knew it, and treated it accordingly. Her dress was of the best material, and in the latest fashion. What it may have been matters not. It was becoming and she knew it. She had dressed with special care that day.

It was not surprising that he loved her She was wealthy, beautiful, and could gratify nately selfish. This last he did not know. Her beauty had won him and they were engaged to be married. She was a coquette, and herself much. He was talented and good look-ing. He was the organist of the fashionable Episcopal Church of the city, and as such was much admired and sought after. She was the envious of his popularity, but hated his work. It secreted to draw him from herself, and it interfered with her plans and hopes for the future.

Even now it took his whole attention. He did not heed her, though she stood by his side. There was no need to stay longer. The people, save a few stupid old ladies, had all gone. Why did he not stop and speak to her? She touched his arm with her parasol. That a smile he brought the strain to a proper close, and stopped.

"You are very slow today. Why didn't you stop when I touched you?

"Indeed I did as quickly as I could finish the phrase. You wouldn't have me stop in the middle of a sentence?"

"I've been waiting. And it's time to go home."

Her speech and manner seemed to grate harshly upon him. He had no love for the music!

He made no reply, but closed the instrument in silence, while she impatiently tapped on the back of a seat with her parasol.

"You know I was in a hurry to go home."

"My dear! how could I—"

She saw on a moment that she was going too far, and with gentle sinuous motion took his arm in hers and drew him quietly with a soft caress. He smiled, and yielded himself to the charm of her beauty and apparent affection. Thus together they passed out of the organ loft and prayed to go down stairs into the dim and quiet church. The stairway led directly into the main aisle, and gave them a clear view of the springing arches, the green windows, glorious in living color, and the dark roof springing aloft in the shadowy vault above their heads.

"What a beautiful place to spend one's life in. I do not wonder that the old monks were content to spend their time in such rooms. I almost wish we had service to day."

"It would be dreadfully stupid."

"Oh, no! Think what a life such a man as old Hugh spend in his Thomas Kirchel Nothing to do but play upon his organ every day. I almost wish I was a rather dral organist in some ancient minister."

"I'm sure I don't. It's bad enough as it is."

"How so?"

"My boys are too stupid! What is the good of an organist I'm sure I hope you don't think of being one all your life?"

"Why not?"

"Oh! It is all very well now—for a little while—but—my dear, you must—"

He paused on the last step and looked at her as if he did not quite understand.

"You must—what?"

"Oh don't you know? Of course—just then, you know that it isn't exactly the thing one wishes to do all your life."

"I'm not so sure. If I was rich I would always play in church, and in fact, I would give up my time to the study of music. What nobler ambition could a young man have than to assist at divine worship with the best gifts art and heaven had bestowed upon him?"

She had the wit to see that she had gone too far, and with a soft smile and a caressing touch she led him out of the church into the bright sunshine of the street. They walked away in silence. His thoughts returned to his art and the church. She was selecting how to make the next assault.

It so happened that they did not meet again for several days. On Friday of each week he spent the evening at the church and alone. On Saturdays the choir met, and he was too busy attending to their wants to do justice to his own. They burned brightly over his head and cast a bright glare on his book and the desk. The tips of the stops glittered, and the pipes overhead each had a long bar of yellow light. The outline of the vast instrument was almost lost in the shadow. The church seemed to spread around, below and above her in silence and dusky shade. The arches overhead were barely visible, and far away the gilded leaves of the Bible on the desk caught the light in a spot of yellow radiance. The windows in dark blue and deep red, and everywhere saw by his seat it was gloomy, vague and surreal.

Absorbed in his music, he went on by the hour, little heeding anything save the work in hand. The dim, silent church beforehand was quite unnoticed, as he sat at the door behind him. Annoyed and much disturbed that he could not find her, he walk ed impatiently toward home. She had entered at least he would find her close, and alone.

A countryboy sob started him. He sat down beside her, and took her hand in his. "Dearest! Now can no one us save God. We are alone in this temple. In his name I ask you to forgive me, but I cannot overlook my whole life to please you. If we must part on this—it must be so, and God give me strength to bear it. I see that your heart is fixed on something false. Let us part in peace—if it must be."

She rejected nothing for a moment, and then said slowly:

"You have the strength of a Samson. You will do like that."

"Yes. When I think I am in the right."

"And I proposed to carry out the analogy. You think me a new Delilah."

"Frankly, yes. You seek to bring me to the level of your own weakness and foolishness. In is upon these things your heart is placed."

"You are cruel."

"Say, rather, truthful."

"Is there no hope for me?"

"Oh, my love! my love! how can I wound you; I mean no ill, but only the best for you. I will send you a new Delilah!"

"Frankly, yes. You seek to bring me to the level of your own weakness and foolishness. In is upon these things your heart is placed."

"You are cruel."

"Say, rather, truthful."

"Is there no hope for me?"

"Oh, my love! my love! how can I wound you; I mean no ill, but only the best for you. I will send you a new Delilah!"

"Farewell, then! Be strong, and see things as they are."

He drew her gently to him, and in mingled shame, love and gratitude, she laid her aching head upon his breast, and said:

"My Samson! then host conquered me."

"Thank God! Hark! The carriage!"

She rose in the moment. Forgive me—and kiss me. Love is greater than money!"

"How strong you are, and so kind. What should I have done if you had not rescued? I remember once in the dark, before you came. At first I thought I was dead—then—the pain reminded me, and then—but—and I remember a strange, wasn't it, that we should have had such a dreadful quarrel? I was very angry when I came down stairs, and I did not mind my steps."

"We have had no quarrel. It takes two, you know."

"Oh! then you mean to give it up? Oh! I am so glad."

"Give up what?"

"The organ."

"I did not say so!"

"Did you love you did."

"No! You know I do not."

Here a sharp twinge of pain caused her to catch her breath with a little cry and a start.

"What is it?"

"My foot—I think you are right—I must get home."

"Yes; there is a watchman just outside. I will send one of the organ boys."

He ran breathless through the aisle, and in a moment returned, right. It would be here in a moment. Let him wrap his coat about her feet, and carry her out the side door home to order her up, and then he would go for an old friend and keep a child."

"Wait—Wait just a moment. Sit down a moment. It has no claim. Let me rest—in your arms."

How long the carriage delayed. They sat like one the chosen pair for several moments, and then she said:

"Oh! I am so glad you mean to give up the organ. I knew she must be ill, you know."

"Why do you speak of it? You know I cannot. Ask some other favor, but not that."

She made a movement as if to escape from his arms. He restrained her not, and she rested in them again. The pain in her foot was forgotten, also rat down, white with anguish.

"And do not ask me—it is no matter. Why kiss not the carriage—come?"

"I will be here presently. Then you can go home."

For a few minutes she turned away her head and kept down the dark aisle. Then she said, in a constrained voice:

"You will come and see me sometimes —and—and be myself—friend—I shall miss—Here I is that the carriage?"

"Yes! there was a long pause. Neither spoke, and they could hear nothing save the watery ticking of the clock in the gallery. Slowly the hand moved upon her hands, and he sat up alert and listening, but with a dreadful war in her heart. What she so selfish? Was she really in earnest? Were they to thus part, and in such a place, at such an hour? Then he heard her a moment at least he would find her close, and alone.

A countryboy sob started him. He sat down beside her, and took her hand in his. "Dearest! Now can no one us save God. We are alone in this temple. POETRY.

CLOUDLAND.

Old sweet, very sweet to me,
Passaye, I think not why,
And to fashion magical charms
Of quaint-treated forms
In the cascades about they go and come
Above in the windlessness!

For yonder, a dark ship furls
Each by an island of pearls,
And only I guess shores
Of Cloudland's blue-bosomed waves and bays
The light song of the siren throngs
That lure her through golden ways.

Into my heart it is flowing
Like a golden-woofed sweet tune;
Ah, sailors, sailors, sailors!
Silence enspells me soon!

Yet now I hear the plash and the glint sing grace
Of the spears of magical oars.

SELECTED.

A NEW DELILAH.

How they ever came to be engaged was the one thing that troubled half the young people in the society. It was whispered that they would soon be married. Some of the old ladies who sat in the gallery, where they had a fine chance to see all that passed in the choir, thought differently. Some of the young altos thought they knew all about it. She was playing a desperate game, and would break or win. The tenors at St. Marks watched the fight with becoming interest, and looked over the top of their prayer-books to see the issue.

The benedictions had been pronounced and the congregation were slowly filtering out of the church, with a low murmur of talk and gossip from the organ loft which seemed like the soft gurgle of escaping water. Little heed did he pay to it. He took up the theme of the last hymn, and began to improvise upon it. It was a large lofty church, and a noble organ. ☞ The Evart Review says that as near as can be estimated at the present time, the fat pig into the Muskegon river and tributaries this winter, at least 225,000,000 feet of logs, an excess of 54,000,000 of what was run out the past season.

☞ Twenty-two counterfeiter profits have been pocketed quiet in Salt Lake City. The Mormons have given $2,000,000 toward the new temple, and nothing but the Gentile[illegible] for it. They object to having so much money put to a base use.

☞ Competition has lowered the price of steerage passage in Europe to $12, and there is a rush to their homes in the old world, of those who can no longer endure the corruption and hide of the American Government. In the British and German steamers which left New York Saturday, over one thousand passengers were taken.

A Specimen of Party "Management."

The Charlevoix Sentinel, a Republican paper, honestly tells how they will candidate in that region. It seems that in the Republican Representative Convention there were eight votes favorable to Edward H. Green and six for Mr. Wood. Wood was predestined to the political slaughter house, so the Green men proposed to the Wood men to take an informal vote. It was agreed to do so, and the Wood men gave Green their votes—making ten votes for Green. Then a recess was at once proposed that Green be declared the unanimous choice of the Convention, so the Wood men were anchored nicely. It was this kind of dodgery that led to the very wide animadion of A. J. Smith in the Lansing Convention leaving the honor and glory of the two Mr. Marcies. But this little piece of Charlevoix "management" is likely to bear ill fruit.—Grand Rapids Times.

Indeed the way old Staton has built up his reputation of being the champion bar of the Democratic press, viz:—Transforming stated facts into stories calculated to deceive and misdirect popular sentiment. The above article is as far from truth as it is unfair to form party.

The County Convention.

CHARLEVOIX, Sept. 30th 1874.

MR. EDITOR—

Since the meeting of the Republican County Convention I have frequently been asked the following questions, and every time gave the questions a negative answer: Are you satisfied with all the candidates, put in nomination?

Are you going to support the ticket as the pole?

Tell you use your influence at the Convention to prevent certain parties receiving their nomination?

I have also been asked to give my reasons for my negative answers to the public and with your permission will do so through the medium of your paper. I will answer the last question by saying that at the convention I was placed in a position where I deemed it out of place for me to attempt to influence any member of that body one way or the other. For the first and second questions my reasons for negative answers is that I profess to be a reformer and as such cannot with a clear sense of duty vote for a man that I deem to turn my way unfit for the office to which he aspires. And each man I believe received nominations at our late County Convention. A man may be over so clever and use his cash as well as a neighbor and on return, I may feel like a reconsidering him to every way I can, and yet, if I believe him unfit for any office to which his friends would like to see him elected, I cannot support him.

I hold it to be every good citizens duty whether at the caucus the convention, or the polls to use his influence, be it ever so small to select the very best men to fill the various public offices, and in no case support, [illegible] because he may have [illegible] a connection in the party to whom he belongs.

That I believe to be the real true way to work for reform. If every man who professes a desire for reform would work in that way I believe the reformers would accomplish much more than by any attempt at forming a new record party, especially when they allow their new party to be taken possession of by the very party that inaugurated one of the very greatest evils of which they complain. The new reform party would do away with the appointing power that times vested in the President and the Senate, and their free use towards that is to help the Democratic party to regain the power they so justly forfeited.

And when did that party renounce to them the dearest articles of faith. "To the victors belong the spoils" and as they have abundantly proved in New York and other localities where they were the victors, that they will know how to make spoils and how to take possession of it.

Hon." says the advocate of the reform Committee, "they are right on the hard money question." And that is enough in their virulence opinions to offset all their protestations to state and decide the spirit of office in the good and darkest way. Now I think it will be a hard row for the rank more to please that the Democratic party—in favor of a speedy return to hard money principles.

But then compare the platforms of Michigan Democrats with that of the Democrats of Ohio, and see what conclusion they will come to in regard to the matter. If they take into consideration the strength of the party in the two states they must agree in the conclusion that the Democratic party is in favor of inflation, and not only inflation, but to a certain extent, repudiation. His our reformers are going to take the management of political affairs out of the hands of politicians, run the masses with out the aid of wire pullers and party organizers. If accounts of the proceedings of their convention to time, there was no adverse sweeping there and they were finally pulled into the service of the Democratic party.

I fear that the leaders of the Liberal or no they with to be called—reform party, are actuated more by a sort of "anything to beat the Republicans" motive than an honest desire for reform. Let every true reformer stand by the only true reform party that is able to give them a genuine reform as it already done in the way of reforming the American system of economy and retrenches. If every honest man would consider it a duty to attend caucuses and conventions, and do over they are no ch[illegible] or unusually man living himself to, would oppose him with all honor—honest men would soon learn to take hard seats and honest, competent and worthy men would be brought to the front a real genuine reform be the consequence, and such a nomination as was made by Clerk of this county would be unknown.

Respectfully,
ROBERT MILLER.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board having failed to abolish the fraction between Township and County four, ordered the balance in the Four Fund to be transferred to the Contingent Fund.

The Board directed the County Treasurer to issue a receipt in full to Jackson Ingalls on receiving from him a secured note for $75, due in one year, without interest.

The Board ordered that a State tax be levied of five-eighths of a mill per dollar, and a county tax of Twelve per dollar on the taxable property of the county.

JOHN S. HYDE, Clerk.

Louisiana.

It certainly looks as if the Louisiana factions must be soon necessarily classed as "irreconcilables." The Mayor address, setting forth the terms of the compromise recently agreed upon between the two parties, breathed nothing but a conciliatory spirit, and seemed to be based upon the idea that the best oil with which to smooth the wounds of the body political was the oil of vitriol. And now there appears to be a probability at least that Gov. Kellogg is about to apply another of those terse, subtle pieces of legislation pecuniar to latter-day Louisiana, which, having been passed months ago, are kept locked up in a state of suspended animation in the Governor's desk ready to be utilized by his general whenever it may seem necessary. The present New Orleans municipal government is in this case the Damocles over whom a sword hangs in the thread which Kellogg is understood to be threatening to snip. There has been very much in Louisiana lawmaking that was needful to increase the misery of honest people with the state of affairs in that region. The provisions of the new registration law, which prohibit the courts from shaking with any questions asking under them as utterly outrageous in principle, and constitutes a case very much in point. If there are any needs for keeping there. The less light they see the better for his standing with the intelligent voters of the North. He could make no greater blunder at the present time to urge and attempt to enforce some of their very statute, such as this New Orleans bill is reported to be, and as not a few of those laws in force which he has approved in the past.—Detroit Tribune.

A Cure.

In accepting the nomination for Governor I doubt I supposed it to be nearly the most serious thing in all my experience. I could not but feel somewhat that some who so freely accused themselves in favor of the nomination are now walking around themselves—[illegible] the gold, and trust that no votes will be wasted upon me.

The Country Hoss Jockey.

For a red hot speshalty yu hav got to hunt kreashun kind to find an equal to the country hoss jockey.

He iz most always a man of pleasant temperament and urbane manners, vare sy hiz opinyuns often ov more fanse than judgement, and quick to decide.

He has but little real akkwaintans for a hoss and only havs him for the cheest that he owns.

He iz always ready to trade for enything, from a yerthing cart to the cavalry hoss that Gen. Washington rode at the battle of Brandywine.

He never knows when he gits cheated, and invariably believes the last hog he got or the best one he ever owned.

He is not bothered with any conshensey when it comes to a trade, and would lay out a traveling preecher in a swap jest as quick as he would hav one brother, and do it without eny malice. Set jest for the honor ov the profession.

He always fully believes in fun look rite than a hoss from top to toe, but there iz one gits cheated offener, or wuss than he duz.

His crowing disarms him, and when he thinks he is a leetle trading big apperient klean out of a hoss, the other feller is not only trading him out of a hoss, but a harness into the bargain.

There ain't a village in America ov 200 voters but what has its previous hoss jockey, who kan be found at enny time at at the village inn, ready to "wield or even" for a shinney bottle, or swop a disabled pelter for a windbroken, cribbiting ratter.

I never kno no on this fraternity to git rich, and I never kno one ov his what fully believed there was more munny in it than in onest legitimate bizzaness.

I didn't kno why it iz that a men kan swop cows and be prowd, or kan trade oxen and be a good deakon, or even exchange dogs and be looked upon az virtewous, but when he takes up the hoss swop enterprise, if he kant cheat he won't hanpen.

I never hav seen a hoss jockey yet who was honest from principle; I hav known them, once in a while, to be honest from policy.

The man who iz simply honest from policy needs more watching than a hive ov bees who are getting ready to swarm.—Josh Billings.

Wales' Debts—The Queen Arranges for Their Settlement.

A London letter to a New York paper says: "The Queen has done the handsomest thing for her eldest hor; and probably no act of the good Queen's reign was wiser than her somewhat tardy resolution to pay the debts of the Prince of Wales. This is what she has now done—or, rather, she has made an arrangement with the creditors of the Prince by which they will get all their money in three years. The amount of the debts, by a judicious examination of the claims, has been reduced to about £600,000 a trifle of only $3,000,000, you will observe—and I believe that the claim of the Duke of Edinburgh was the one that was cut down the most. This sum the Queen has agreed to pay in three equal annual installments of £200,000 each, and the first payment has already been made by a check on Drummond's. Where her Majesty keeps her money, or at least some of it, I do not know, but Mr. Disraeli has probably had something to do with this wise arrangement. When Mr. Gladstone was in power he was asked to make an appeal to Parliament for money to pay these debts, and he rather encouraged the idea. One of his Cabinet Ministers, however, rather violently declared that if such an appeal were made he should oppose it, and the matter was in abeyance when the change of government occurred. Mr. Disraeli, whose good sense never deserts him, advised the Queen that, though Parliament would no doubt vote the money, the appropriation would be an extremely unpopular one, and that her Majesty would do much better to pay these debts out of her own resources. This excellent advice the Queen has accepted.

A Tennessee Confederate regiment held a reunion last week and passed resolutions which are significant of the present political position of the ex-rebel soldiers. One of these resolutions declared that having surrendered in good faith it was their intention to perform their part of the contract faithfully, their chief desire being peace, and the maintenance of the law's majesty. They sent greeting to their former enemies, inviting them to come and live among them, promising to all law abiding citizens the right hand of fellowship. It was declared unanimously that "those who now wear masks never appeared unmasked before the enemy in time of war."

The London Times of the 3d in a leading article contradicts the statement recently current that the Queen has paid the debts of the Prince of Wales. At the present time, says the writer, the debts of the Prince amount to a little more than one-third of his annual income, and include scarcely any bills due longer than a year. The Prince's balance at his bankers to-day will more than suffice to meet every claim. It is true that the Prince is unable to live within his income, but the excess is procured from a fund which is his private property. This fund, which accumulated during the Prince's minority from the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall, is not sufficient to meet the yearly deficits in his expenses, though the time may come when this resource will be exhausted.

The fiscal year in Michigan closed on the 30th ultimo, and the Treasury statement shows that the state debt was reduced over $144,000 during the preceding twelve months. It would have reduced much more contraction had not Michigan's credit been too good to permit the refunding of more of its securities at par or less that being the most very properly imposed upon the discretion of the authorities in this matter.

Leonard Grover, the theatrical manager, has leased the old postoffice rulo in Chicago, and will make a variety theater of it, rather in appearance to Le Adelphi, which is not in the latest great fire in that city.

AUTUMN DAYS.

BY FELIX WALTZ MACHINE.

The melancholy days have come,
The saddest of the year;
Gone are the pumpkin and the plum,
The falling leaves are sear!
The partridge now forgets to drum,
The squirrel to spear
The merry hall, the woods are glum
The nights are deeper!
The rock pursuit be against a mum,
Too grateful for the sheer;
The hip rose is of scarcer hum,
The kine are out of gear;
Our sue forgets a fierce Angry we
Instead to cry spear
Both scorning scorn unlike the rest,
And some absorb their fury;
Young soul-vow mumble "I forfeem,"
To cross away for'd heat;
While others gain to farming gum,
Dilative for their treat.
A kind young man will some calve
Since his previous slur,
And cried instead of lung-pneum,
Because he did not see her;
Another has got mad and dumb,
Because he could not hear;
Some in the world will hate to come,
And walk it all on his ear.
(something broken)..... plumb,
In the ..... manner,

A HEADLESS HORSEMAN

A GHOST STORY OF THE COUNTY CORK.

"God speed you, and a safe journey to you, Charley," ejaculated the master of the little sixteen hands at Bally hooley, after his old friend and good customer, Charley Culnane, who at length had turned his face homeward with the prospect of an hour's ride, and as dark a night as ever fell upon the Blackwater, along whose banks he was about to journey.

Charley Culnane knew the country well, and moreover was so bold and a strong rider as any Munster boy. He was mounted on a four-year-old upon Diunrose race course. He had gone to Fermoy on the morning as well for the purpose of purchasing the ingredients required for the Christmas dinner by his wife, as to display his accuracy by having new reins fitted to his snaffle, in which intended showing off the old mare to the best of her, as Biggara's day hunt.

Charley did not get out of Fermoy until late, for although he was not one to pay very particular sort in anything relating to the common necessaries of life, yet in all the appointments relating to hunting, riding leaping, in short, in whatever was connected with the noble science of the saddler said, "was the devil to please." An illustration of this fastidiousness was afforded by his going over to Adamstown, to get a snaffle bridle. Mallow was full twelve miles nearer Charley's home than Fermoy, but three-quarters of a mile below Carrick, than Fermoy, but Charley had quarrelled with all the Mallow saddlers, and he knew he would contest him in all sportsmen but honest Mick Twomey, of Fermoy, who lived in comfort and plenty, and knew that he could stitch a saddle better than the Lord Lieutenant, although they made him all as one as King over Ireland.

The delay in the arrangement of the snaffle bridle did not allow Charley Culnane so long a visit as he had at first intended to his old friend and gossip, Con. Buckley, of the Harp of Erin Inn, with its strong of the hair of gold and to their hearts' acquaintance, and so on from the bottom of his soul, until the bottom of the bottle reminded him that Carrick was at the bottom of the hill on the other side of Castletown Roche, and that he had got no further on his road than his gossip's at Ballyvolley close to the big gate of Tynemaire. Catching hold of his reluctant hat, therefore, while Con. Buckley went to the cupboard for another "drop of the creature stuff," he regularly, as he termed it, bolted from his friend's hospitality, darted to the door, tightened girth and rein, and put the old mare into a canter toward home.

Charley cantered gaily, regardless of the rain, which, as his friend Con. had anticipated, fell in torrents; the good old mountain currents and rapid streams were packed between the folds of his yeomanry cloak which Charley, who was proud of showing that he belonged to the "Royal Mallow Light Horse Volunteers," always strapped before him, and took care to never destroy the military effect by putting it on.

Notwithstanding that the visit to the jolly "Harp of Erin" had a little increased the natural complacency of his mind, the drenching of his saddle reins began to disturb him, and then followed a train of more anxious thoughts than even were occasioned by the dreaded defeat of the pride of his long anticipated turn-out on St. Stephen's day. In an hour of good fellowship, when the heart was warm, and his head not over cool, Charley had backed his old mare against Mr. Jepson's bay filly Desdemona, for a neat hundred, and his fellow-mugginings as to the prudence of the match

He now arrived at the bottom of Kilcummer Hill, and his eye fell on the old walls that belonged, in former times, to the Knights Templars; but the silent gloom of the ruin was broken only by the heavy raw which splashed and muttered on the grass stones. He then looked up to the sky to see if there was among the clouds any hope for more on his new snaffle reins; and he sooner were his eyes lowered than his attention was arrested by an object so extraordinary as almost led him to doubt his senses. The head apparently of a white horse, with short, cropped ears, large, open nostrils, and immense eyes, seemed rapidly to follow him. No connection with body, legs or rider could possibly be traced. The head appeared shadowy and mere, but was moved by this nonnatural sight, and, snorting wrathfully, increased her trot up the hill.

The head moved forward and passed on, Charley pursuing it with astonishment and wondering by what means and for what purpose this detached head thus proceeded through the air. It did not perceive the corresponding body until he was suddenly startled by finding it close by his side. Charley turned to examine what was this so suddenly jogging on with him, when a most unexpected apparition presented itself to his view. A figure, whose height he computed to be at least eight feet, was mounted on the body and legs of a white horse fully eighteen hands and a half high. In this unnatural position was actually mounted, for his own mare was exactly fifteen hands high, and the body that like jogged alongside, he could at once determine, was at least three hands and a half higher.

After the first feeling of astonishment was over he exclaimed, "I'm sold now forever." But still he directed his attention to this extraordinary body, and having assumed it with the eye of a connoisseur, he proceeded to reconnoiter the figure so unusually mounted, who had hitherto remained perfectly mute. Wishing to see whether his companion's silence arose from bad temper, want of conversation power, or from a distaste to water, and the fear that the opening of his mouth might subject him to having it filled with rain, he endeavored to catch a sight of his companion's face, in order to form an opinion on that point. But his station fated in carrying him further than the top of the ruins of the Spinex east, which the apparition seemed to avoid, and the ingredients required for the Christmas dinner by his wife, as well as his own vanity by having new reins fitted to his snaffle, in which intended showing off the old mare to the best of her, as Biggara's day hunt.

Charley did not get out of Fermoy until late although he was not one to pay very particular sort in anything relating to the common necessaries of life, yet in all the appointments relating to hunting, riding leaping, in short, in whatever was connected with the noble science of the saddler said, "was the devil to please." An illustration of this fastidiousness was afforded by his going over to Adamstown, to get a snaffle bridle. Mallow was full twelve miles nearer Charley's home than Fermoy, but three-quarters of a mile below Carrick, than Fermoy, but Charley had quarrelled with all the Mallow saddlers, and he knew he would contest him in all sportsmen but honest Mick Twomey, of Fermoy, who lived in comfort and plenty, and knew that he could stitch a saddle better than the Lord Lieutenant, although they made him all as one as King over Ireland.

The delay in the arrangement of the snaffle bridle did not allow Charley Culnane so long a visit as he had at first intended to his old friend and gossip, Con. Buckley, of the Harp of Erin Inn, with its strong of the hair of gold and to their hearts' acquaintance, and so on from the bottom of his soul, until the bottom of the bottle reminded him that Carrick was at the bottom of the hill on the other side of Castletown Roche, and that he had got no further on his road than his gossip's at Ballyvolley close to the big gate of Tynemaire. Catching hold of his reluctant hat, therefore, while Con. Buckley went to the cupboard for another "drop of the creature stuff," he regularly, as he termed it, bolted from his friend's hospitality, darted to the door, tightened girth and rein, and put the old mare into a canter toward home.

Charley cantered gaily, regardless of the rain, which, as his friend Con. had anticipated, fell in torrents; the good old mountain currents and rapid streams were packed between the folds of his yeomanry cloak which Charley, who was proud of showing that he belonged to the "Royal Mallow Light Horse Volunteers," always strapped before him, and took care to never destroy the military effect by putting it on.

Notwithstanding that the visit to the jolly "Harp of Erin" had a little increased the natural complacency of his mind, the drenching of his saddle reins began to disturb him, and then followed a train of more anxious thoughts than even were occasioned by the dreaded defeat of the pride of his long anticipated turn-out on St. Stephen's day. In an hour of good fellowship, when the heart was warm, and his head not over cool, Charley had backed his old mare against Mr. Jepson's bay filly Desdemona, for a neat hundred, and and finding at the same time rather daunted at the second attempt to establish a conversation, "Ahem! that's a mighty neat coat of your honor's although to a little too long in the waist for the present cut.

"Humph!" growled again the head

This second humph was a terrible thump in the face to poor Charley, who was fairly bothered to know what subject he could start that would be more agreeable. "It's a sensible head," thought he, "although an ugly one; for its plain enough the man does'nt like flattery." A third attempt, however, Charley was determined to make, and having failed in his observations as to the riding and the coat of his fellow traveler, he being the second time put drop a trifling allusion in the wooden ear of the following nature, and he trusted by the side of the old mare, and as Charley was considered about Carrick to be very knowing in horses, besides being a private in the Royal Mallow light Horse Volunteers, who were every one of them connoisseurs, he was very sure that he was soon found to impair the ultimate strength of most mortars; nevertheless, it causes the mortar to work to better, or, as it is commonly termed, "saltpeter," which consists of the watery blebbles appearing on the surface of the structure. It also renders the mortar liable to moisture, and for these reasons should never be present in mortar for architectural purposes, although for thick walls and sea works it may be used with advantage and economy.

Sand is used to increase the resistance of mortar to crushing, to lessen the amount of shrinking, and to reduce the bulk of the more costly material, lime. Water is the agency by which a combination is effected, and, as sand does not increase in volume by moisture, it necessarily follows that no more of the superabundant water should be employed than is absolutely necessary to fill the interstices between the sand, and render the whole into a plastic consistency for use; and the greater straitness with which this is observed, the greater will be the strength and durability of the mortar will be the matter.—Scientific American.

Criminal indictments were recently found against Tilton and Moulton by a New York grand jury, for wilfully and maliciously slandering Henry Ward Beecher.

A gentleman from Benzie county, says the Grand Rapids Eagle, recently stated that a nest in that county only two years old married a blooming lass of sixteen brief summers, and in less than a few days ago, and that a whole town has just made her tenth husband the happiest man in the world.

Chicago celebrated the third anniversary of her destruction yesterday. The Times prints a detailed statement showing that the city has built, during the year, ending with the present month, 1,539 "monuments of brick and stone" at an expense of $12,694,000. The number of dwellings erected in that same time was greater than that of any previous year of her history.

A Madrid letter states that it is known in official circles that the German Government has sent a note to the French Government, declaring that the Germans having made official investigations along the French frontier as to the aid France is giving the Carlists, it is evident that the aid is complete and open. Therefore Germany requires France to raise 25,000 troops to the frontier to stop such aid—or, in default, otherwise Germany will be compelled to do so.

The Brooklyn Argus speaking of Judge Inderdonk, Tilton and Moulton, says: The array of counsel in the Tilton case will be unusually large. Roscoe Conkling will be counsel for one of those named, and Evarts and Beach will be counsel for the other. John Graham and T. S. Sherman will assist Mr. Conkling. The list of Tilton's counsel is said not to be complete because Carpenter of Wisconsin, Daniel Dougherty of Philadelphia, and David Dudley Field are not mentioned. Mr. Moulton has secured Judge Fullerton, although Gen. Butler will take the lead in the case, and will personally appear. Mr. Beech will most likely appear also. A motion will be made for a change of venue. This is a matter in the discretion of the court. A motion will be made for a continuance to carry the case before the Supreme Court. This we believe is a motion of right, and as effect will then be made to remove the case to Albany or Westchester. It is thought the trial will take place in a fortnight, and it will probably last three or four weeks.

A Sad Fate.

Another sad result of sensational performances in the death of a man in London who attempted the perilous feat of flying from a balloon to the earth in a flying-machine. Immense crowds had congregated to witness the experiment. The balloon was cast away, and after rising a short distance the "professor" was lowered and hung suspended from the balloon by a rope with the wings of the machine extended. The balloon ascended to a considerable height, and at a given signal the rope was cut. The experiment however, proved a fatal failure. For the "professor" descended with frightful velocity to the ground, and was instantly killed. His body was horribly disfigured.

To the Voters of Charlevoix County.

The biennial fall election takes place on Tuesday, Nov. 3d. The fact of its near approach should direct the attention of the people to the issues which are to come before them. The main issue, which involves the election of State officers and Congressmen, and the principles identical with each ticket—in brief, Republicanism against Democracy—demands the studious attention and prompt action of every Republican.

The amended State Constitution, which comes before the people for acception or rejection embodies changes in the present instrument, and which, although they do not affect the system of government, are such as experience has shown to be necessary to restrain abuses, and to facilitate the administration of the law. The more important changes are: A provision permitting verdicts in civil cases by two thirds of a jury, and that in criminal cases the death or disability of a single juror shall not prevent a verdict being given by the remainder. It provides for the addition of one Judge to the bench of the Supreme Court—which now has four. The wisdom of this provision will occur to every intelligent mind. Perhaps the most important change is that which raises the salaries of State and Judicial officers. It is generally admitted that the present salaries are wholly inadequate and insufficient for the work performed. If the State in 1850, on a basis of population of 397,945, and on an equalized valuation of property of $98,990,302, could afford to pay the salaries fixed at that time, the State, in 1874, with a population of 1,184,059, and a valuation of $630,000,000, can afford to pay the salaries now proposed. The amended Constitution also provides for a more liberal ratio of representation in the newer counties. It restricts local taxation and the incurring of local indebtedness. It provides for local taxation of the property of corporations. It provides for the election of one Highway Commissioner in each Township, in place of three as heretofore. It makes women eligible to offices of honor and trust.

There are many other new clauses, which, although of minor importance, all tend to improve the Constitution.

The question of amended Home Suffrage, which is to be submitted separately, is one which needs only to be referred to the people's judgment.

The Senatorial nomination is one which the people will not fail to ratify by their votes. Hon. W. H. C. Mitchell is a public servant of experience and ability. Be sure that his name is upon your tickets.

The peculiar situation of our Representation nomination warrants us in calling the attention of the people to the importance of considering the question carefully, and properly informing themselves before voting. The contest in this issue is between the regular Republican nominee, and a person who advances a personal claim to the office. The question is whether you will vote for a tried and faithful officer, or one whose efforts to gain one ascendancy are based only upon intrigue and mercenary influences.

The County ticket we commit to the careful inspection of the people. Vote it throughout. If you find therein the name of a person whom you think will not serve the interests of the people correctly, and put in its place the name of one whom you think will. This is the only sure way of securing faithful and competent officers. In conclusion, we exhort Republicans to turn out on Tuesday, Nov. 3d, and by their ballots manifest their will; thus casting back into the faces of unprincipled primary wire-outlers, the disgraceful conception with which they have attempted to dupe the people.

Letter from E. J. Lewis on the Farmer Question.

PLEASANT HOME, TOWN 31 NO., RGE. 7 W. } Grand Traverse Co., Mich., October 13th, 1874. }

FRIEND SMITH:—

It seems that Mr. Palmer, and all the rest of Mr. Wood's friends, are making no responsible for the articles published in the SENTINEL in relation to Mr. Palmer. Perhaps I am to blame for taking so much spontaneous part in the Convention which nominated Mr. Green; but on that score I have nothing to regret. But if I have injured the character of Mr. Palmer, or any other person, I am sorry for it, and am willing to make any honorable amends to correct it. The other persons that were present when Mr. Palmer was bound to make the assertion alluded to in the SENTINEL, he, (Mr. Palmer) informs me have shifted the authority to my shoulders. [This is not the case.—ED.] I have seen neither of the gentlemen that were present of late—owing to my having been absent since the Convention. The sticking-point with Mr. Palmer is the word control, which he claims I have wrongfully charged him with using in connection with the vote of Torch Lake. I do not deny the charge, neither do I deny having charged him with the use of the word influence, which Mr. Palmer acknowledges is correct. Now, if I am wrong—and those gentlemen who were present know whether I am or not—I want to know it, and give Mr. Palmer the benefit of the mistake. But what is correct and right I will stand to, if hell itself should stand wide open, yawning for Palmer, Wood or myself. I shall vote for Mr. Green, and do not expect to 'control' or 'influence' a single vote in my town. But I think that perhaps I have a few friends that would be sorry to see me go to prison for the alleged slander against the private character of Mr. Palmer; and those in the immediate vicinity of the place would do well, instead of giving Mr. Palmer my views of his failings, to give him their own. Personally, I fail to find with Mr. Palmer. Politically, he dislikes to be beaten, and cannot brook disappointment. He has heretofore controlled the town in this part of the county, and now that he has lost that control, he goes on the war-path against the opposers of D. D. Wood. I am not inclined to send this letter for publication through any threats made by Mr. Palmer; but if the other persons referred to say that the word "control" is wrong, shall then take off my hat to Mr. Palmer, as I ought. But if I am correct, no power on earth can compel me to retract.

Yours very respectfully,

E. J. LEWIS.

From the Traverse Bay Progress.

An Explanation.

In reply to the inquiry, "Why was Kanagy represented by two substitutes at the Charlevoix Representative convention?" I have to say, that it was not my purpose to be represented by more than one person. One was a great sufficiency. If a situation finds it inconvenient to attend to duty, I suppose a delegate has a right to appoint a second or third, as well as the power to revoke an appointment without explicating himself whatever.

I first issued a letter of substitution to Mr. Marshall, who at the time thought it might be inconvenient for him to attend the convention, in which event he was instructed to take the credentials to Wm Kanagy. The time was short for correspondence. I had no positive means of knowing that either one would attend. There was a possibility of my not being represented at all. I therefore appointed a second substitute in the person of Mr. Williams, and wrote as follow to Mr Wm Kanagy:

Neither you nor Marshall need attend the convention; Mr. Williams is going up, and I have appointed him."

This letter did not intercept Mr. M., because he failed to call according to previous arrangements, for the want of time. As a further precaution, I sent in substance the following:

"DEAR SIR: Thinking you might not attend, and as the convention might not recognize your authority in passing credentials to Will. [Mr. K.'s] I have issued credentials to Mr. Williams."

On the envelope was written. "Hand to R. R. Marshall or Wm. Kanagy before going into convention." Mr. Marshall is too honorable intentionally to assume a false position. If my letter was too indefinite I accept the censure.

I assume the right to think and act for myself. If I "threw a firebrand into the convention," it was done unintentionally, and no one can regret it more than myself. If any choose to make political capital out of it they are welcome.

To the oft-repeated question by letter—"Are you running yourself as independent candidate for Treasurer?" please change the phraseology and say "Are you a rowmonate fool?"

J. M. KANAGY,

☞ Seventy-five buildings have been erected in one ward in Grand Rapids during the present season.

☞ Dr. J. C. Ayer, the pill and pectoral man, has succeeded in obtaining the Republican nomination in the Seventh Massachusetts District—now represented by Judge Hoar, and the Boston Globe calls the nomination a tough pill, but intimates that many Republicans will not swallow it.

☞ When Bazaine first "resolved Armenberg, Eugenie refused to see him. He then sent word that he had in his possession some important papers, and wished to know what disposition he was to make of them. He was then received. The papers related to the Mexican expedition.

☞ It is rather irregular that under a regime which deposed Napoleonism in France the column Vendome, with the statue of Napoleon I at the top, should again be reared in the old place in Paris. It is much consoled This erection of a great tribute to the empire may safely be taken as an evidence that at heart the Parisians still hold the great conqueror as a popular idol, and that not even the anti-Bonapartists in the Assembly dare protest against it.

☞ Eight hundred men employed in certain collieries at Durham, England, threw down their tools a few weeks ago and demanded of the owners water to drink and sleeping lodgings to dwell in. They complained that they were in dirtiness and their families in sickness for the want of water to cook and cook with, and that, as acts of Parliament had no effect, they thought it high time to see what could be done by educating themselves from work and refusing to pay rent.

☞ The Democrats have carried Ohio by from 10,000 to 20,000 majority, not gained in Congressmen, leaving the delegation thirteen Democrats to seven Republicans. The Democrats have carried Indiana by about 10,000 majority and gained five Congressmen, leaving the delegation eight Democrats to five Republicans. The Republicans have substantially maintained their usual supremacy in Iowa and Nebraska.

☞ An extension has been recommended which sets upon the shaft of an ocean propeller something as the governor set upon the engine, which does away with the acceleration of the motion of the shaft when the propeller, in a turbulent sea, is raised clear of the water. The irregular and fitful motion of the shaft of a propeller in a heavy sea frequently breaks it, and the invention in hailed as a great contrivance for preventing a very common disaster which frequently results in loss of life as well as the destruction of property.

☞ It appears from a recent Washington dispatch that there are about twelve millions of acres of the land grant to the Union Pacific Railroad of which the Government still holds the title, the lands not having been patented to the road. A report from the Commissioners appointed to examine the road, for the purpose of ascertaining whether it has been completed according to the terms of the act of Congress granting the land, is expected in a few days.

CALENDAR FOR 1874.

Local News.

THAT sweet cider at Carpenter & Bartholomew's is most excellent, and is going off rapidly

THE Schooner Purington took out a cargo of lumber and cedar posts for Geo. W. Gorely & Co. on Tuesday.

THE sch'r-sloop Kitty Paysette is in port as we go to press with a miscellaneous cargo consisting of peaches, grapes, apples, fruit trees, lumber and shingles.

SCHOOL started off on Monday with 65 scholars Mr. A. R. Upright is Principal, and Miss P. M. Sackett, Assistant. There is every prospect of a good school.

NOTICE.—The school Board announce that non-residents attending Charlevoix school, will be required to pay $1.25 per month, or $5 for the term of 5 month,—in advance.

LOOK at it as we will, advertising carries with it a certain moral influence. Most people cannot resist the impression that a man who advertises a large stock of fresh goods, is more likely to have them than one who does not do so. Advertising has at least one good chance in its favor.

THE poles of the Western Union Telegraph Company are erected as far as Acme, seven miles from here, and it will be but a short time until the workmen reach this place. Telegraphic communication with the outside world is an advantage that will be appreciated by our business men.—Progress.

ACQUITTED.—Sheriff Aldrich and Dept. Sheriff McLeod arrested Darwin Stafford, Martin Locia, and young Yoarl, at Norwood, on Tuesday, for complicity in the late cattle robbery. They were brought before Justice Dixon on Thursday, for examination, and no substantial evidence appearing against them, the Court rendered a decision of "No Cause of Action."

THE NEW HOUSE.—We noted the fact in a previous issue that the School Board of Charlevoix District had adopted a new system of books, and that they would go into immediate use. From a careful examination of the books we are convinced that the change was a wise one, and one calculated to advance our educational interests. We therefore trust that the parents and patrons of School District No. 1 will endorse the action of the Board.

O. D. WOOD, and our own darling Bill Henry L. Miller, are in Emmet County, working up the interests of Mr. Wood. There is no opening in the same place, for another fine young man possessing the excellent "business qualities" which Mr. Wood found in the person of Henry, and to whom a good price will be paid. Only conversant with the Indian language is preferred.

MARINE.—The Fox Rouble is making her trips with as great regularity as the weather will permit. The W. T. Co.'s boats wooding here have "cut loose," and are now running wild. The scow Forest took out a cargo of wood for Newaun on Wednesday. Owing to the scanty list of arrivals, our usual Marine List will be abandoned, but an accurate account of tonnage will be kept to make up the aggregate of the season.

A POLITICAL WHAT-IS-IT.—Mr. Wood tells a prominent Democrat in Emmet County that he is as much Democrat as Republican, and solicits the Democratic vote in consideration of this fact. We get this information from a most reliable and trustworthy source, and can not question its truth. This confirms our opinion that he is in this respect like unto St. Paul; inasmuch as he is "all things unto all men, that by so doing he may win some." But it will not work.

FROM TORCH LAKE.

Hon Ambrose E. Palmer Heard From.

TORCH LAKE, Oct. 19th, 1874.

EDITOR CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL:—

SIR.—In your last two issues there have appeared some statements represented to be facts, and claimed to have been made by me.

They are, to say the least, base misrepresentations of the truth, and some of them positive falsehoods. I never said that I should stump Antrim County in the interests of O. D. Wood. Neither did I ever say that I had more influence in Antrim County, than any other man. Neither did I ever say that I controlled the vote of my township. What I did say, and from which all the above has been manufactured, was, to-wit: I said that I considered that I had in my own town as much influence as any other one man. The remark was made that that would not count much, as the actual vote was not over 30 ballots; when I said that so far as my influence extended through Antrim County, I should put it wherever opportunity occured. You see that in the statements which you have printed, you have been grossly misinformed. Mr. F. J. Lewis, who was present and heard the conversation, says that on such statements were made as claimed. I don't know whether you consider this a gentlemanly act, or whether you care for my opinion upon said act, neither do I care. If to misrepresent is your object, I am glad to have ascertained that fact. If not, I shall calculate that the Charlevoix SENTINEL will correct what I claim to be base falsehoods. Whosoever may be the author, and your informant, I shall not attempt to urge, nor do I ask. You undertake as to what is for your own interests in this matter, remembering that "the good will of even a dog, is better than the ill will."

Yours Respectfully,
AMBROSE E. PALMER.

We have no disposition to modify in the slightest degree any of our former assertions concerning Mr. Palmer's statements; but emphatically re-affirm them. We are sorry to be thus forced to bring Mr. Palmer's truth and veracity into question, but repeat, that his exact language on the day following the Convention was to the effect that he had more influence than any man in Antrim County, and would use it to the latter end that he could "control 35 out of the 38 votes in Torch Lake Township." Those statements we can prove beyond question, by gentlemen of good standing and unquestioned reliability—and by their affidavits if necessary. Now it remains with Mr. Palmer to say whether we shall prove him a willful prevaricator, and isolated puff-ball of conceit, or not. We stand ready with the "unbrewed rod" to do it. In answer to his complete cave and threat in regard to our "interests," we regard the possibility of his good or ill will with the greatest of indifference. We doubt not have enter-ed so deeply into this matter if the word of counsel that out of our letters were not brought so boldly into question. And just here we would like to have Mr. Palmer tell us by what right he outed in the late Representative Convention. We assert that he had no right, and can prove it by his own words uttered before going into Convention.

SATISFACTORY.—Mr. Kanagy's public explanation of his course in relation to his vote in the late Representative Convention smacks the pinx from under the Wood party and saddles upon them a greater share of political obloquy than the most bitter of their opponents have yet wished to give them credit for. It proves conclusively that they came into Convention knowing full well all the circumstances which Mr. K. sets forth, and brands the whole group as a posse of political shoplifters. It also fully exonerates Mr. Kanagy from any blame in the matter. We have always entertained a high opinion of Mr. Kanagy, and have from the beginning felt confident that he stood on a sound foundation in the premises.

THE editor of the Traverse Bay Eagle, always joyously happy when he sees his colds arise in the Republican party, recognizes in the bi-partite situation of our legislative caucus, a miniature dividing wedge constructed some what after the pattern of the larger one he helped to drive two years ago, and gives it a weak blow in his last issue. He accords as great degree of legitimacy to one faction as he does to the other, and plainly infers that a defeated candidate has as good a right to popular support as the regular nominee. Of course this is the Eagle's politics, and its sentiments thus expressed are not out of place. The editor thinks the SENTINEL too denunciatory in its manner of dealing with this issue, and advises us to try and induce the other party to "reconcile." The Eagle's advice would be good if the political division were characterized by any degree of plausibility on the part of what we term the opposition, but in this case, where honorable and upright principles mark the conduct of one side, and all manner of trickery the other. We deem it our duty to denounce in as emphatic a manner as possible, that which we deem a majority of the people do not sanction, and which we look upon as the germ of political corruption.

WE claim to be Republicans in politics, and on matters which concern the welfare of the State or Nation we shall continue allegiance to that party. But upon local issues, we claim that every man has a right to vote as he chooses, and propose to exercise that right ourself. There are always nominations made by local conventions, by means of political chicanery, which reflect discredit upon the party which they represent, and which are against the peoples wishes. We have one nomination for a prominent County office which we think might have been bettered, and while we work in the interests of the people we shall advocate the election of just those persons whom we honestly believe to be the best men for the positions. We shall never get straight of the form or any there local political matter, but shall throw all our efforts to the election of the best men, and the defeat and demoralization of all efforts based upon intrigue and unfair proceedings. This we consider will be, in the end, the safest course for any local journal, although for the time being, it may awaken some hard feeling. We are working for the people, and for them we shall continue to work and to work earnestly, and while there are no great political issues at stake in the county, we shall look to the men and not the politics, or ask whether he has received the regular nomination or not. We believe we will be endorsed in this sentiment by a majority of the people in the County.

Hon. E. H. Green.

The Grand Traverse Herald of October 10th says:

The Republican Representative Convention held at Charlevoix, Sept. 30th, renominated Hon. E. H. Green for member of the lower House of the Legislature. We are glad this has been done, for Major Green is in all respects well qualified for the place. His experience gives him an advantage over a new man, while his well known integrity and high moral character give assurances of a faithful discharge of the duties that devolve upon him.

There was a split in the convention and a few delegates withdrew and nominated Mr. Wood, of Norwood. We think the "sober, second thought" of the seceding delegates and their friends, will probably lead them to see that only evil can come of a persistance in the course they have taken. It will be found much better for all concerned to unite on Maj. Green and give him a strong and united support, than to throw away a few score votes on another candidate who stands not a ghost of a chance of election.

For the sake of harmony in the Republican ranks, as well as for a deserved compliment to a faithful public servant, we trust Mr. Wood's name may be withdrawn, and the entire vote of the party concentrated on Maj. Green.

The same paper, in a subsequent issue says:

We earnestly hope that the Republicans of the Charlevoix Representative District will be faithful and earnest in bringing out a full vote for Maj. Green. We know the Major so well that we are sure he would refuse to accept a nomination which was not, in all respects, fairly and honorably made. He is the nominee of the party; made such in conformity to the choices which govern all parties; he is unexceptionable as a man and as a Republican and hence, it is the duty of every Republican to support him. If aught could be said against him as a soldier, a legislator, or a citizen we would hold our peace. But there cannot be, and hence it looks to us as though the war being made against him by a few members of his own party is utterly inexcusable. These efforts, we are confident, will be in vain.

Election Notice.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE,
Charlevoix, Mich., Sept. 19, 1874.

To the Electors of the county of Charlevoix:

—You are hereby notified that at the next General Election, to be held on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday of November (which, in the State of Michigan, the following officers are to be elected, viz: A Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor General, Superintendent of Public Instruction, a Member of the State Board of Education in place of David C. Mayhew, who was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Daniel E. Brown, whose term of office will expire December 31st, 1874; and a Representative in Congress for the 9th Congressional District of this State, to which your County is attached; also a Senator in the State Legislature for the 23d Senatorial District composed of the Counties of Emmet, Cheboygan, Charlevoix, Antrim, Otsego, Leelanau, Manitou, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Crawford, Roscommon and Missaukee, as provided by Act No. 128 of the Session Laws of 1871; also a Representative in the State Legislature, for the Representative District composed of the Counties of Emmet, Charlevoix, Mackinac, Antrim and Otsego, as provided by Act No. 116 of the Session Laws of 1871. You are hereby notified that at said General Election the following amendments to the Constitution of this State are to be submitted to the people of the State for their adoption or rejection, pursuant to the requirements of the constitution, and the resolutions of the Legislature submitting them, viz: "An Amendment relative to the appointment of Notaries, to be submitted, in case of adoption, for an expiration of terms." Also, to vote upon the proposed Section 15, Article VII to the Constitution of this State, to be added to said Constitution of this State as a new section, and identified if for Section 15 of Article VII in the amended Constitution. If the same is adopted, as proposed by Joint Resolution No. 7, of the Session Laws of the State of Michigan, for the year 1874.

Also, the "Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Michigan," which is to stand, in case of adoption, as the Constitution of the state of Michigan, and be superseded as such and every other pre-existing provision of the State of Michigan, as provided by Joint Resolution N. 6, of the Session Laws of 1874.

As Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand at Charlevoix and year first above written. Dated this 19th day of September, A. D. 1874.

ALANSON R. ALDRICH, Sheriff.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, holden at the Probate Office, in the village of Charlevoix on Tuesday, the twenty-ninth day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

POETRY.

"What is it all When all is "Done?"

The sun goes on and the sun goes down,
And a thousand years are the same to me;
The tides rise and fall, and the leaves grow brown,
And I sit still and sigh all is gone!

Ay, what is it all when all is done?
What is it all when the day is o'er?
A single round of the ceaseless sun,
A single leaf on the countless store.

A moment more of the gathering years,
A moment more of the wasting breath,
One more turn of the restless spheres,
One more pang to the calm of death.

The grass is green, and the sky is blue,
The flowers grow sweet, and the rose is red;
Ah! these were things I knew and knew
Before I was numbered among the dead.

SELECTED.

From the Vermonville Enterprise.

Ethel's Convict.

Sheriff Kingsbury rested a troubled brow upon one hand, and read the writing upon the telegraph blank for the third time. It was just as imperative as ever, and there was nothing for him to do but obey it. It read like this:

CHARLEVOIX, October 31, —.
Your brother is under arrest for murder. Come instantly. If you wish to see him alive. MARY.

Of course he would have to go. Fate Robert had been the bane of brothers and the cause of sorrow to him, and he could not let him die without looking upon his face again.

But the jail!

He would not fail in his duty. A hundred desperate men turned loose upon the country and lust or justice might be the results of the least neglect upon his part. He felt angry with himself for allowing his tenderness and his emotions to get the better. They would not be back until daylight and he would have to go on the 7:30 train; and then it was an hour's drive to the station, so he would have no time to lose.

He studied the chances for a few minutes and then called Ethel down to the turnkey's room where he was sitting.

He was a hard man, this grizzly-headed sheriff, hardened by his profession and his inconquered daughter. She was all that was left of his family, and all the love that had been buried in the death of wife and son seemed to concentrate itself in the daughter.

Ethel came in from the kitchen when her father called, and stood waiting by the table. He had not heard her step as he handed her the telegram and waited until she had read it through.

"Poor Uncle Robert!"

Again he waited—this time for her first gasp of grief and confusion for the loss of a loved relative to pass away, knowing that then her mind would be serious to meet the emergency that was pressing over.

She saw the troubled look upon his face, and answered the inquiry his eyes were making.

"I might take care of the jail, father."

"You, Ethel?"

"What is to prevent? The cells are very strong, and there is no danger. There has not been an escape in the eleven years we have been here."

"But to leave you alone in this dreary old prison all night, with only an iron door between you and a hundred murderers then—"

"I shall do very well, father. You would not have Uncle Robert die without seeing you for my sake? You must go. I will build a fire in the room here, and sit by it all night. I am not afraid. I will be a glorious closure to finish 'The Maiden Pass.'"

As though the matter were already settled, the girl bustled about for her father's overcoat and muffler, and insisted on his lunch for him to have at midnight.

Realizing the imperativeness of the call, and seeing how rational Ethel was, the sheriff also began making preparations for departing. He locked the prisoners in their cells half an hour earlier than usual, and examined every bolt and bar with unusual care. He was sure that there were secure. Then he loaded two revolvers and laid them on the table in the turnkey's room where Ethel would sit to watch.

It was almost dark when he rode away from the jail leaving Ethel watching him from the door. He was to send a trusty man from the station to keep his daughter company if he could get the right one. But that was very doubtful, and besides, he did not care to have it known how he protected the jail.

The jail was indeed in a lonely spot. The rivalry of two villages in the county had planned it on a barren stretch of land between their boundaries, and the greater portion of the year it was deserted for days together except by officers with prisoners in charge from one of the three counties which placed criminals for safe keeping. The deputy sheriff and the turnkey and his wife had been allowed to attend a frolic a dozen miles away, and there was no one in the house but Ethel and the prisoners.

After her father had gone she barred the lower door leading from the room and sat down by the open grate to read. To her right was an open door which connected directly with the main hall of the prison. A foot and a half on the other side of this door was another, of iron, equally strong, but made in stripe and bars. And between those barriers sat the prisoners were soon cell doors.

Ethel smiled at her immaculate fears and tried to feel perfectly secure.

But what girl of eighteen, with a vivid fancy, could help casting furtive glances toward the prison door occasionally and listening intently to each sound that came to her ears? Before it was time for her father to be aboard of the train she wished back but [illegible] remembering the moments he was on, she mentally called her self a foolish name, and resolved in a breath to be very brave, and concluded there was nothing in the world to fear.

The hands of the clock crept around to ten. All was still inside, but outside a wind was rising. It would be a wild night. He room was comfortable, and certainly looked safe with its stone floor and grated windows.

Ethel's thoughts were fast becoming absorbed in the fortunes of the woman whom Adam Hamilton has given an [illegible] to his keeping. It came from beyond the iron door leading into the room where she sat, and died away in an distant, with a little sleep as though the door had been pushed back against the wall.

The clock ticks grew farther and farther away to her ears, ran together in a cadence of sounds and then ceased to be heard altogether. The tired girl was fast asleep.

The fire died down while she slept, and an autumn chill crept into the room. The ruddy coals of the light faded with the fire and left only the white, ghostly light of the oil lamp to hang out the night.

She was awakened by a cry of pain that came dimly to her from the prison. She sprang to her feet in terror and listened for a repetition of the sound. In a moment it came again, fainter than before, but full of suffering. It was only some one sick in the jail. She returned the weapon, which she had grasped in her alarm, and tried to appear indifferent.

But what woman can stand idly by and know that a fellow creature is in pain and be indifferent? Ethel could not, try as hard as she might. The sounds went to her very heart and awoke all the sympathy in her nature. She knew well enough what the pity she was feeling would lead her to if she did not resist it; but resist it she could not.

So she took a hand lamp from a shelf, brought the prison key from its place in the table drawer, and stood trembling with the key in the lock. She shuddered as she opened the door, for her imagination was most lively, and almost drove her back with its mournful warnings. She saw the great dark, musty grate, with its dismal iron doors and stone floors. The lamp she had would only make a ray here and there visible, and there would be a ghostly darkness all around, from which strange eyes would stare out upon her. She paused a moment with her heart beating wildly and then, with desperate courage turned the key and pushed open the door by main strength.

The light from the hand lamp seeming into the gloom beyond the door and revealed a violent prisoner stamping within a foot of her face. She did not scream or cry out when he pushed past her into the turnkey's room, but, with a presence of mind that comes to excess few times in experience, she forced the door back and locked it without slamming at the same moment. While she turned away from her task she saw that he had possessed himself of the weapons but fatal to her and then quietly seated himself upon the table.

"You need not fear any more escapes, Ethel," he said calmly. "I have seen been more careful of your safety than your father, for I have locked the iron door."

"You were very kind, Eugene Gibson," she said, gratefully for want of something better to say.

"You shouldn't thank me, Ethel. I would do more for you than to prevent the escape of the ruffians on the other side of that door. You know that as well as I. I worked for days and nights at my cell door, and have crept about the hall many nights since it was ready for my purpose. I might year father let the inner door untouched to his hands to be away, and I am a free man again.

"You are not free, sir! I will call help! I will prevent your escape myself!"

The convict smiled at the girl's bravery.

"I know the state of affairs here too well to allow any fooling, Ethel. You cannot summon help, for there is not a prison within two miles of this place besides the prisoners and ourselves. And you cannot prevent my escape, Ethel, for I am armed and you are not. You are a woman and I am a strong man. The fact that the law is on you side cannot help you now. And be assured, Ethel, I am fair."

"It is useless to say that you are not right," she said, sinking helplessly into a chair. "But suppose you do escape in spite of me, you will be retaken. What then? Why, it will be with you as it has with hundreds of your kind. You will be tracked and hunted like a wild animal. You will be brought back here in irons, Eugene Gibson, with a double mark of villainy upon you."

There was evidently something more than the thought of the man's escaping in her mind, for she rested her face in her hands and sobbed aloud.

The convict rose from his seat and stood over her. There was nothing of the savage, triumphant prisoner now. There was even a look of tender sympathy and regret upon his face—a face handsome and noble by at all times, but doubly so now with that look in his dark eyes.

"Ethel!"

The girl sobbed on, and did not raise her head. The convict bent closer to her as we rested one hand lovingly upon her head.

"Ethel," he said tenderly, "I cannot bear to see you in this way. Would the free air of the world be so very odious to you if I were to take it again?"

"You have never escaped, sir—Mr. Gibson, and I don't think you ever would," she answered. "You have stronger on no one but yourself for it, poor pale life."

"Come, Ethel, don't think that I was so very bad," was the reply. "Perhaps I have done things that I would not do again if I could live those two years over, but that which made me bad now. You know I was well enough," he added hotly, "when that man went in a justice seat on with Lucien Butterfield and his associates for grand larceny from a blow which I gave him with a knife. You know well enough why he appeared in court and swore that I had threatened to take his life. Once we were enemies for love. He knew also in his heart that his case was hopeless, and that he had of you us to man who loves a woman will bear her spoiling of, and I struck him. You know the result—six months in the county jail, and all my hopes taken away.

The tired voice was silent as weak self reminiscence to [illegible] when he ceased speaking.

"If you have ever cherished a hope of returning the past, Eugene Gibson, you must never have thought of a happy future. I beg and pray of you not to go out into the world with the stain of an escaped prisoner resting upon you. I will banish you from your home, and hard, and all who love you, and make you an unhappy man after upon the earth. If you ever loved me, as you say you did, I implore you to listen to me now. I am not speaking for my father's honor, nor for mine—it cannot charge the prison was left tonight, but for your own sake, and you must believe me when I tell you so."

"I do believe you Ethel," was the reply; "but I cannot follow your kind advice. I am too ruined forever when I lost the manhood which, I believe, once was given me."

"You are wrong, Eugene; you lose more tonight than you have ever before."

The convict started with a sudden hope. Could Ethel's words have the meaning to be had given them? Should he return again as he stood wanting for her to go on, and say how far she would go? Her face did not speak.

"Ethel," he said, making bold to take the girl's hand in his own, "I will not go out again, serve my time faithfully and be free in six months. Will you wait again and I shall be to be your wife, and I was—and more ?"

He was down upon his knees now, for he knew right well the broad chasm that separated the sheriff's daughter from the convict.

Her hand was not withdrawn, but instead, a shapely head dropped upon the convict's shoulder.

"Oh, Love! More powerful than strength or danger than hatred or evil, you have drawn two loving hearts together when all the laws of caste and social ethics declare that they shall be separated forever."

We shall describe the strange betrothal. Let it be sacred from worldly eyes as the holy rite in their hearts was free from all worldly selfishness.

When the turnkey returned in the morning there was no alarm to send out of an escaped man, and when the father was home again in his solace of [illegible] of an inner door unlocked.

The story is told. For who can doubt that the pledges made so earnestly were as faithfully kept? Was who can doubt that the sturdy man and womanhood which sat side by side in the office, and it was generally expected that the two furious editors would send blood. Popular belief was wrong, and the sweetest and most respected family in all that section or the whole father and mother were inscribed in the county jail book. Such was the doctor of popular being and the prospects that this story was necessarily keep quiet.

A Bail Case of Millionaire.

A new miner millionaire of New York has just been discovered, or rather brought to light, for his residence has long been known. It is a humble down shanty half a mile from Central Park—the down cast and most worthless roof of the rich man's mansion. He is sixty years old, white-haired and bearded, and bald-headed. His home is [illegible] large space. His dress is curious people and visitors away, except those who bring proper credentials that they come on business. Interviews are never let in, but, the other day, the latter was penetrated by a photographer, who sent them by appointment to take down what the old man had to say regarding a case at law in which he is interested. The man of rags held look in astonishment at the money at a glance. Every corner of the house was stuffed full of crockery, furniture, etc., etc., that had been taken from tenants unable to pay their rent. It was a museum of household truck that had been wrung from the hands of unfortunates by the grasp of avarice. The man had near his bed a blackboard and a piece of chalk to do his figuring and compute his income whenever he felt so inclined. It was cheaper than pen, ink and paper. He amused himself doing sums of interest and rent, and rubbing them out and doing them over again, for the pleasure it afforded him. He carried the picture of the miner cowering in misery. He figured. The photographer took down what he had to say about the case, and [illegible] the old man in broken spasms of pain by using paper for this purpose—stating it for recording what he had to say—an enormous robbery of fifty cents a page, which he suggested he'd have to pay for. He recognized a conflict of his interest in this business; it was his interest to talk, and it was his interest to say just as little as possible. It doesn't killed him to utter between them without injury to either. It is the worst case of over-millionaire in New York—probably anywhere. And this man owns palaces in Fifth Avenue, and blocks of stores on Broadway.

His "Small Pox."

The New York correspondent of the Boston Journal writes: "One of our leading men is the county buildings. Prisoners, paupers, and the diseased are often transported to the asylum care to be taken to the hospital. The practice creates great indignation, so far all protests have been of no avail. The other night the conductor was collecting fares from a crowded load. A foreign person, poorly dressed, and with an ugly cough here, handed up his fare in answer to the question, "Do you go through ☞ Each student at the Ann Arbor University is now required to sign a pledge to abstain from hazing.

☞ Mrs. Abraham Lincoln has been confined to her room in Chicago for the last five months by a severe illness, from which she is slowly recovering.

☞ It is rumored that J. F. Joy president of the Michigan Central Railroad, has tendered his resignation, and has gone to Boston to confer with the directors as to his successor.

☞ A dentist in Wisconsin who found it necessary to live a young lady while filling her teeth, was called upon by her papa with a shot gun. He paid the parent $300 not to fire, being exceedingly averse to noise.

☞ Even as the N. Y. Tribune is to honor its founder by a full-figured colossal statue at the doorway of its new building, so the Louisville Journal is to honor the man who made it famous with a statue of George D. Prentice at the portals of its reconstructed domicile.

☞ Queen Victoria's children manifest such alacrity in obeying Scripture by the multiplication of children, that the old lady has adopted as part of her kingdom the Fiji Islands, that each may have a place to reign as long as the cannibals find enough else to eat.

☞ Frederick W. Seward, former's assistant secretary of State, is the Republican candidate for Assemblyman in the Seventh District of New York city. It will be remembered that he was one of the victims of the Payne assault, at the time his father, the late Wm. H Seward, was so nearly murdered.

☞ Michigan has 32 charcoal blast furnaces, nearly all of which are in operation, three that run bituminous coal and coake, and one an anthracite. It also has four rolling mills for muck and merchant bar, and one railmill. The blast furnaces have an aggregate daily capacity of about 1,000 tons.

☞ The Rochester Democrat prints the following: "Speaking with full knowledge, obtained from sources the most unquestionable and direct, we assert that President Grant is not only not a candidate for renomination, but that his plans are already matured and his business relations established with a view to his retirement from the presidency at the expiration of his present term, and that these plans cannot be changed or modified."

☞ The number of canary birds in the United States is estimated at 500,000, of of which number 300,000 were imported last year. Additions come only from importation, since the number raised in this country yearly, only about equals the number lost through various causes. Of the cage birds there are about 100,000, and the whole consumes about 175,000 bushels of seed in a year. Of this amount more than two-thirds is canary seed, and the rest is hemp seed, rape seed, millet, cracked wheat, &c., to the value of more than $2,000,000 annually.

☞ We have it by telegraph from Canada that the second son of Charles Dickens has arrived at Ottawa, and will probably receive a government appointment. Is, then, the second son of his father practicing what his father preached Misanthropy?

☞ A recent number of a medical journal published in Naples says: "The miracle of St. Januarius is going on famously. Yesterday, after eighteen minutes' prayer, the liquid turned itself into blood after having been exposed twenty-three minutes. The faithful are flocking into the diocese in great numbers, and their belief in our holy religion is by no means diminished by the ravings of a Satanic sect."

☞ The late Democratic leader will have to rest content at Hoskewell's Island a while longer, for Judge Healy has refused to grant the motion brought by Howell's counsel to correct an old error in the record of his conviction. This is hard lines upon one who was once a Sachem of the New York Democracy.

☞ The amount of specie in the country is stated to be on the 30th of June last, $178,000,000. The net gain shown gain in specie and bullion for the last two fiscal years of $28,500,000. The amount of gold and silver coin and bullion in the world is estimated at twelve thousand million dollars. The present rate of production is silver $60,000,000, and gold $140,000,000; the two together being an annual addition of about one and a half per cent. to the existing stock of specie.

☞ Fred Grant's bride, Miss Ida Honore, belongs to an old Southern family that emigrated to Chicago in 1854. Her ancestors were Parisians, and her great grandfather settled in Baltimore in 1790. Henry H. Honore, the father of the bride, is one of the wealthiest merchants in Chicago. Fred Grant was first introduced to Miss Ida at a grand dinner party in the spring of 1873, given in two Sheridan's staff by Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago. During the succeeding winter the Count was devoted in his attentions, and in the spring of the present year, before he joined Gen. Custer's expedition, proposed and was accepted.

☞ There was a big exposure in the City Court, Brooklyn, upon the motion of the counsel of Henry Ward Beecher to compel Tilton to furnish a bill of particulars against Beecher. The counsel read an affidavit from Beecher, setting forth that the plaintiff specifies but one date on which an improper act occurred. Tilton swears that Mrs. Tilton and Beecher confessed their guilt at different times. That Tilton contemplates the manufacture of evidence for the coming trial and therefore requires to know what testimony he may expect to refute. The court took the papers.

☞ In 1861, a quartermaster in the army who had defrauded smuggling to the Government, buried it under an oak on the road from Charleston to Shepherdstown, in Virginia. When the war ended he failed to account for the $9,000, and was sent to the Albany Penitentiary for several years for embezzlement. His term expired in September, and he at once went to recover the money for which he had done the state some service. He made no secret of his errand, though he hid of the place of concealment of the treasure. It seems his knowledge of the locality had somewhat failed, for he was in the penitentiary for several days, but one fine morning he got out, and with him the money. The ground under the tree presented the appearance of a newly-plowed field, having been dug up during the night by the ex-convict.

☞ The Democrats are just still with joy over the Ohio election. But the Republicans do not seem to be much disheartened by it. This being the "off year" in politics it is customary for the Democrats to get alittle encouragement. The same old play is being rehearsed that has been played for the last six years. The off years comes and the Democrats make a few gains. They are highly elated over it and make fiery resolves and deadly denunciations. The next year are the important elections. Then the Republicans have a clean sweep and the Democrats get badly demoralized. Some of the more intelligent leaders complain that the old Democratic bulk is rotten and it begins to look as if that old craft which has so often been wrecked on the rocks of defeat in the waves of suffrage is about to be sold for cought and sono liberal or reform party take its place. But another off year gives them a few gains which the old political leaders magnify in triumphs, and the party is led by the ignis fatuus to one more effort, which is another crushing defeat. If they can stand this kind of management the Republicans certainly can.

☞ W. H. Threep, of Hennepin county is the owner of a Suffolk sow which is 18 years old, and has been the mother of 242 pigs.

Propeller Blown Up.

The propeller Brooklyn, Capt. Harvey Brown, of the Northern Transportation Company's line bound from Ogdensburg to Chicago, exploded her boiler, just after passing Fighting Island, completely shattering the vessel, and causing the death of thirteen persons on board, besides maiming and wounding eleven others. She sank in about two or three minutes in twenty five or thirty feet of water, only about six or eight inches of the pilot house remaining out of water to which persons clung for safety, and were soon released by the propeller Cuba, while six others, while at others, who were thrown into the water were picked up by fishing vessels from the shore. All but four were injured, and were brought to Detroit, and taken to the Marine, Harper and St. Mary's Hospitals.

☞ The Boley brothers, shipbuilders of Toledo, have made a contract with Nims & Co. of Bellvo to build a sail vessel, to be the largest on the lakes, bigger even than the schooner Michigan. This new steamer of the Tousted Seal," says the Toledo Blade, is to have four masts, to be 215 feet long (the Michigan is 225 feet long) 44 feet beam, 16 feet hold, double decks, 1,000 tons displacement, and will carry 90,000 bushels of wheat, and will cost $ 70,000. It will take 5,000 yards of canvas for her sails, and her general outfit will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000. It will require about 500 cattle to drive of wheat to make up her cargo, and inking 6c per bushel as the average for wheat between Chicago and Buffalo, her earnings would be $4,800 per trip.

☞ Rev. Sheehan is very fond of the boys," says one of his accounts. He wished to have the "boys" made eligible to membership in the Society of the Tennessee, and he preferred walking with the "boys" to riding in a carriage in the Lincoln monument processing yesterday. Presbyterian ill will began to dawn upon the politicians that the "boys," be it understood, are soldiers of the late War.

☞ The National Republican, which has been advocating the third term for President Grant, says: "The Presidency during the third term would have few attractions for him. It could confer upon him no further or higher honor. There is no reason, therefore, to suppose he desires it. On the contrary his natural tastes and instinctions are known to be in the direction of domestic quietude and privacy. Then facts would make him appear ridiculous should he come out with a pronouncement declining a renomination in advance of its tender."

☞ The Cleveland Herald, Republican, does not believe in anointing over spoiled milk. It is inclined to be jolly if there is the least chance, and late by the following among other considerations over the results of the October election: "Stronged" is the word. No other standard expresses the situation. The Democrats have smitten us hip and thigh. We have met the enemy and they are not ours by a jugful. "On the contrary, quite the reverse." It is our usage that as dunsling at the Democratic hell, instead of Democratic hair drooping from ours, as we had fondly hoped. The fed Democratic blade is red and dripping with our gore. We are sad, very sad; unwitty, disgustingly sad, but nevertheless sad. We are "stonied," squelched, scooped! stooped! scooped! Now is the time for tears. Bring on a pint and stamp of ashes.

In accepting the nomination for Register of Deeds I recognize it to be mainly the unanimous wish of the Democracy of Antrim and that it is not one that some who at first seemed themselves in favor of the nomination are now working against it—I withdraw from the field, and trust that no votes will be wasted upon me.

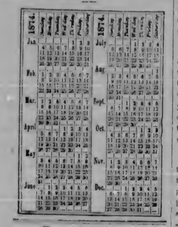
CALENDAR FOR 1874.



Local News.

Geo. Kyes has sold his house and lot on Clinton street to Elizabeth Mandaville.

Brainy Sac announces the arrival of a fresh stock of groceries and confectionery.

Don't sell to your tickets on election day, and see that they are not spurious or imperfect.

A scarcity of help in our office is the cause of the poor appearance of the paper this week.

Market.—Potatoes—peach-blows, 45c; mixed, dull at 40c. Wheat—winter, $1.15; spring, $1.00; oats, 45c.

Wanted.—We want a good, steady, industrious boy, about 15 years of age, to learn the printer's trade.

We understand that the telegraph is completed as far as Torch Lake, and is coming north at the rate of five miles per day.

Mrs. Carpenter has just received a full line of cloak-trimming.

New books exchanged for old ones, or sold at two-thirds retail price for the next thirty days at Carpenter & Bartholomew's

Woods and his eminaries are scouring the country, laying all manner of baits and decoys to gain votes. Before you believe what they say, investigate. Talk is cheap.

Fresh oatmeal, tapioca, sago, and pearl barley: also the noiseless drawing-slates, at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

Resignation.—Rev Wm Tilden, of Clam Lake, will preach at the school house to-morrow, both morning and evening. Mr. Cole preaches at Cheboygan.

Justice A. E Palmer, of Torch Lake, recently sentenced two wayward youths to the Detroit House of Correction until they shall become of age.

Tapioca Pudding.—Four tablespoonsfu of tapioca, one quart milk, soak two hours, then add four tablespoonsful of sugar, two eggs and a small piece of butter. Bake slowly one hour.

Died—John Noble, for many years a a resident of Marion township, in this County, died in Indiana three weeks ago. His widow, the sister of Barnard Burns, of Marion, returned Thursday.

Fined.—Two of our leading citizens, one day this week, were arraigned before Justice Robert Miller, on a charge of disobedience to a summons from his Honor, and fined for their independence. They won't do it again.

Shot.—Samuel Sanburn, a youth of sixteen years of age, was shot and killed, at Sutton's Bay, on the 23d, by the accidental discharge of his gun while hunting. The hammer of his gun caught upon a log, discharging the contents through his heart

Ore.—The schooner Parsons has been pulled off the North Manitou Island and taken to Milwaukee. The vessel was in good shape, but her bottom is badly used up. One steam pump sufficed to keep her free during the passage. Her cargo of wheat was all wet, about 400 bushels of which was taken out of her by Capt. Way's schooner, and sold in this place for feed. It took the tug Pridmiffe a week to rescue the vessel, owing to the exposed position where she lay.

Important.—A question which should come forcibly home to the mind of every voter in this Representative District is this: Shall we send a man to the Legislature whom we know the Railroad corporations have not bought up to favor the exemption of railroad lands from taxation, or one whom we do not know has not been bought? We have now in the person of Mr. Green a Representative who has already established a record on this point; and just now, when these northern counties so greatly need what they are so justly entitled to, shall we discard a certainty for an uncertainty? Consider this matter.

Notice.—The members of the Charlevoix Social Literary Debating Society are notified that the first meeting of the Society for the coming winter will be held at the School House on Friday evening, Nov. 6th. A full attendance of the members is requested.

Shooting.—We understand W. F. Empey, of South Arm, was shot at by some unknown person, while escorting a young lady home from a party one evening last week. The ball passed in close proximity to his head, but he still lives. Be careful, Fletcher, whose corns you tread upon

According to the Grand Traverse Herald Judge Rossdell, of that place has a wonderful peach tree. The variety is Oswiesee's Favorite. It has borne a crop of fruit every year for nine years. This year he sold from that one tree $18 worth of peaches. Last year the fruit of that tree took the first premium awarded that variety at the State Fair.

Wells and his remarkable interpreter told the Indians that if he (Wells) was elected their taxes would be reduced, and the price of potatoes would come up to $1.00 per bushel. This story was "too thin," and by the use of sundry other base attempts to deceive them, they have secured the distrust of every Indian voter. "Honesty is the best policy."

We point the people of the Pine Lake region to the relative positions taken by the rival legislative candidates on the Pine River Improvement question. While Mr. Wood has openly opposed said improvement, Mr. Green has given his influence, time, and money, toward the object. Knowing this, how can any Pine Lake resident fail to recognize in Mr. Green the right man.

Register.—To-day is the day for registration, and we call upon all our readers who are entitled to vote, and who are not yet properly registered, to see to the matter. All such citizens who have come of age, who have been naturalized, who have come here from abroad, or who have removed from one polling precinct to another since the last election, must register to-day. If they have not already done so, or else they will be debarred from voting on Tuesday next.

Check.

The Norwood Supervisor and his henchman, the last year's supervisor, have the stupendous assurance to ask voters in Eveline, Charlevoix, South Arm, Wilson, and Evangeline, to help them out a Norwood Representative to the Legislature. Norwood is afraid that Mr. Green may possibly obtain some legislation favorable to the rest of the county; and how does she propose to help herself? By persuading the balance of the county to stultify itself to throw away a tried, true and faithful servant, and send the Norwood man in his place. Has unblushing impudence no limits?

Curious Siege.

No longer will our Miller flutter around the Charlevoix County Clerkship. Public sentiment runs nearly unanimous against him, and he will, without doubt be the worst defeated man north of the equator, on Tuesday. The Wood faction, which took him aboard to secure Indian votes, have become convinced that he can drag upon their ticket, and have left him struggling in the political breakers. He has become an eye-sore to our people, and what few political friends he had two years ago now spit him out as a "Gethsemane morsel." First a Democrat, next a Republican, later a candidate for Clerk on the Greeley ticket, and now a bolter, the people have marked him down as—anything, and they will cast him aside as such. Hon. John S. Dixon, the present Clerk, a tried and faithful officer, will be re-elected by a large majority.

Bismark and Von Arnim.

The reigning sensation in Europe is the arrest of Count Von Arnim, recently the German Minister to the French Republic, at his estate of Nassenhaid, by the order of Prince Bismark, and his close imprisonment. Speculation has been busy as to the cause of this remarkable proceeding, and the editors of half the journals of Europe have devoted much ingenuity and cough-dare to the work of accounting for it. The most generally received and probable explanation of the summary step is that it is designed to prevent the publication by the Count Von Arnim, of a series of official letters, which, it is suspected, might embarrass Germany inter-diplomatic relations. It will be remembered that the Count was removed from his post as minister to the French Republic on account of a correspondence which he had with Dr. Doellinger, the head of the "Old Catholic" party in Germany, in which he took ground hostile to the coercive measures adopted by Bismark toward the Ultrahos Through some indiscretion the correspondence was made public, and Count Arnim was promptly retired. It seems, however, that he has meditated a revenge upon his powerful foe, and that he has possessed himself of certain papers which he proposes to publish in a forthcoming volume. Precisely what those papers are is not known. Some journals state that they number more than a hundred, are part of the official correspondence of the German legation at Paris, and relate to the Count's actions in promoting the choice of McMahon as President of the French Republic.

POETRY.

GOD HELP HER.

BY A. CLARY.

God help the wives who signify drags
Her life along in sighs and sobs,
Who, in hunger, smile and say
That it is fine when the better eats
Bones—but then wonderful days,
For despite wishes and fine ways
God help her, when, with quiet tear,
She hides into the bedroom's rear,
And while her husband eats and drinks,
Cold help her sorrowing to and fro,
Without one thankful word to show
A heart that's breaking.

God help her, when, with smiling eye,
She hides into the bedroom's rear,
And while her husband eats and drinks,
Cold help her sorrowing to and fro,
Without one thankful word to show
A heart that's breaking.

Poor child of gold and child of ill,
Too weak for her misgotten will,
God help her, she's a mourner.

SELECTED.

AN INDIAN TRAP.

BY LIEUTENANT MURRAY.

A few years ago, before the Pacific Railroad had spanned the American Desert with its iron tracks there was a sanitary station, a small adobe fort, on the North Platte, near the present site of Hawkeye, where a hundred infantry men were generally located by the War Department, more for the purpose of keeping up a military show to the Indians than for any service so few men could perform in the isolated situation. The commander and I were shut up in their bomb-proof—for it was barely more—weeks at a time, unable to air our noses on the plains, which swarmed with savages. If an unfortunate soldier was caught he was instantly tomahawked and scalped, his body stripped of every thing, and mutilated in the most disgusting manner, after the Indian fashion.

The tribe which hunted about Fort Lincoln, as the men had named the stockade, were nearly Sioux, and though other enough to right of the little garrison, yet they knew enough to keep well out of rifle shot, for in the midst of calling they all rushing out as officer or soldier would bring to bear on them a shot that would be sure to send a good many any more than he would have expected to be. The cattle command had been in the custom of four or more fine ponies, which the men had succeeded too far from the fort after pasture children or a shot at a passing herd of antelope, but the Indians, despite the reddish moon tricks which should not usually begin before a week or two later, but which should now frighten the poor savages.

On one day a party got together, and with the aid of the captain commanding, they constructed two log figures, which were clothed in uniform coats and forage caps, and an stuffed and arranged as to exactly represent a couple of private soldiers in a sitting position. These dummies were so artistically manufactured as to pass for the real thing at a few rods distance, and would have deceived any one who was not particularly on his guard. After these devices were finished, a party of six men, with picks and shovels, went out of the fort after dark and dug a large hole, just at the foot of a low hill, some four or five hundred yards from the fort, star-shaped and rectangular, and as soon as one was thus thrown up being carefully carried back to the fort in wheelbarrows.

In this star-shaped excavation were placed over fifty pounds of gunpowder, covered with some fine, soft dirt, then sods and packed over all prairie grass, so as to give it what engineers call a good bond, or in other words, nothing for the powder so as to give it the necessary explosive power. All was then covered with boards and sodded that a casual observer would not have noticed that the ground had been at all disturbed.

An electric wire was then arranged so as to reach the six divisions of the star-shaped excavation, and run to the fort, being sufficiently covered for purposes of protection and secretion. Then the end was made ready for attachment to a electric battery.

The Indians never give the frontier troops or settlers any trouble during the night, especially avoiding any exposure to moonlight, however dimly they may be after daybreak.

So all these arrangements were very hastily performed by starlight, while the Sioux were peacefully sleeping in their camps some six or eight miles distant. The two dummy figures were placed in the middle of the star-shaped space which had been mined, with their backs turned to the south and so situated as to appear to be engaged in a game of cards, the universal resort of the rank and file for killing time.

All being thus ready the wire end was so arranged with the electrical battery that the operator could see the lay figures from a little embrasure in the wall of the stockade, and the officer who superintended the affair was already watching his novel and dangerous trap for bagging a few scouts. There was little sleep among the command that night, every one loitering into the small of the truck, and determined to be awake to witness its operation. At the last moment a venturesome corporal went out to make sure that everything was in perfect order and sure to operate when required coming back to the fort close by the darkness of all safe.

Many warrior eyes watched the day dawn over in the east but no sign emerged from the openings in the stockade. It was not long before a dense smoke, as was always always their morning custom put their heads over the fence on the look to look about the fort and get a view, more any straggling outside the walls to whom they might patience and venture a scalp. They had only to see the dummies deceive the men who seemed to be playing cards at the foot of the bluff, with their backs toward them, but it was soon apparent that they had made them out and were preparing to rush down and secure them. Not a soul was visible to the Indians upon the walls of the fort or through its embrasures. They cautiously crept to their knees and then upon their feet, and then with a yell of triumph rushed down the hill in a body.

"They are coming this way, four of them to cut off connection with the fort," said the officer.

"And four off to the other side," said another officer.

"The remaining four are coming down straight to the decoys," said the officer in a gentle voice.

"They will not manage to communicate at the right spot at the same moment," said another.

The Indians sighted the backs of the figures ranged toward them, and told they were themselves undiscovered, so they crept on within a distance as unerringly as fatal, but their game should be secured and by some chance escape them.

Are you all ready then?" asked the captain, who spoke to the electrician.

"Yes, sir."

"The moment I raise my hand fire!"

"Yes sir."

"And corporal, have a dozen men ready to rush out at once to make sure of any chance fugitive."

"They are all mustered at the," was the reply.

The Indians fearing nothing from the fort as they were out of range, now suddenly rose at a preconcerted signal, and the whole group rushed in upon the dummies at once, intending to slaughter and scalp them. Their perceptions could have been but dimly aroused by the circumstances, but now, no sooner had the twenty followers reached the spot than the captain raised his hand.

"Fire!" said he.

At the next instant an explosion took place that shook the walls of the stockade in a most lively manner, and sent a cloud of smoke and two mangled human bodies of the Indians ascended into the air.

The corporal and his men hastened to the spot where only two Sioux showed the head-gear of the group that had been there, and had almost miraculously escaped was seen flying over the hill whence he had last come.

A hole was at once dug on the spot and the mangled bodies were buried, the Indians in search in the vicinity, being but a few months thereafter. The flying redskin must have told some frightful story to his tribe for the former came nearly that day, and not visit the North Platte again during the season.

The Indian trap had proved an extraordinary success.

A Confederate Story.

At a recent republican gathering in Talladega, Ala., Gen. Bulow, A. Battle recounted an interesting incident:

"During the winter of 1863 it was my fortune to be President of one of the courts of the army of Northern Virginia. The dark December morning while the snow covered the ground and the winds were howling a soldier was arraigned. I left my bivouac fire to attend the session of the court. Winding for mess along my route-paths I at length arrived at the court-ground at Hound Oak Church. Hay and straw of last home one step to lay the gallant soldiers of that army for violations of military law, but never and I on my previous occasion been greeted by such unanimous spectators as that morning swelled the opening of the court. Case after case was disposed of and at length the case of the Confederate states vs. Edward Carpenter was called—theft, desertion. A low murmur arose from the battle scarred spectators as a young artillerman rose from the prisoner's bench and responded to the question "Guilty or not guilty?" answered "Not guilty."

The Judge Advocate was proceeding to open the case for the prosecution, when observing that the prisoner was unmoved by counsel consulted and inquired of the accused, "Who is your counsel?" He replied, "I have no counsel." Supposing that it was his purpose to represent himself before the court, the Judge Advocate was instructed to proceed. Prosecution and specification against the prisoner was sustained. The prisoner was then told to introduce his witnesses. He replied, "I have no witnesses." Astounded at the extraordinary way which he seemed to be conducting himself, I asked him if he had anything to say in his own behalf. He said he had. Now you no doubt expect to hear that you abandoned your colors in the presence of the enemy without any reason? He replied, "There was a reason, but it will out avail me before a military court." I said, "Perhaps you are acquainted with the rules of evidence sufficiently to be aware that in some instances that which would not avail

☞ A New York Sunday paper publishes a rather sensational report of rock in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean, as a solution to the mystery regarding the fate of the steamships City of Boston, President, Pacific, United Kingdom, the Ismaila and others that have never been heard from after leaving port. The rock, it appears, lies in latitude 40 north and longitude 62 18. It was discovered by Capt. Picasso of the bark Teresa, which arrived at Queenstown, October 2d, from New York. The captain says the rock is about 300 feet long, thirty feet broad and rises eighteen feet out of the water. It is in the same degree of latitude as New York city, about 500 miles from the city, and near what is known as the southern passage. The account is very interesting but as to that of the adventures of Baron Munchausen, but some people do not believe it is all true.

The Flint Globe says that Dr. R. N. Murray of that city has in his possession the bow, quiver and several arrows which once belonged to Black Bear Chief, one of Red Cloud's most noted braves, during the Indian troubles of the Sweetwater country, Northern Idaho, in 1870. The bow is about 3 1-2 feet long, made of hickory, with the inner side thickly covered with sinews. The quiver is of prairie wolf skin, trimmed with red cloth and beads. The arrows are of hickory, pointed with steel. The trapper who shot the chief took these articles from his person, and carried them the line of the Pacific Railroad, where they were purchased by an engineer, a friend of the Doctor's, who presented them to him.

County Superintendent's Report.

Hon. Darius B. Bangs,

Supt. of Public Instruction:

Sir:—In my Report for 1872 I expressed an opinion in favor of a change in the school law providing for 4th grade teachers certificates. I still think such a change would be beneficial, and that it would not be abused by enlightened and conscientious County Superintendents. I have been informed that such a law exists in the State of Wisconsin, and that it has been found to work favorably.

I desire to enter my solemn protest against any and all laws that cannot be lived up to without imperiling the object for which the law was enacted. (For example a Superintendent acting under the present law must give a teacher's license in some cases to an applicant whose examination is not satisfactory, or the district will have no school and the children go uninstructed for a year or two.) When Township and County officers are constrained to give their official signatures to an untruth, or with a mental reservation, demoralization begins. We already see too many sad and portentious indications of the evil.

I desire also to suggest that the work of conducting teacher's examinations would be aided by the preparation of a set of questions to be furnished by your office, not less scientific than those now in use, but more practical, and having a greater bearing on the actual, and improved methods of instruction and school management so that the examination shall be a test of the candidate's fitness for his work, not only as to the possession of the necessary knowledge of the branches to be taught, but the art and skill needed to impart such knowledge, and to conduct and govern a school.

As to my own labors during the past year, I have little to add to the information embraced in my Statistical Report. Several of the districts are discarding their log school houses and making arrangements for new ones, and in every instance they are contemplating the erection of good sized and well arranged frame buildings.

VICTORY!!

The Woodites Badly Vanquished.

Mortgages, "Personal Influence" and State Road Promises Avail Them Nothing.

Four Fifths of the Votes Cast in Charlevoix County, for Hon. E. H. Green.

Emmet County 227 Majority for Green.

South Arm Two to One for Green.

The 3d of November has passed, and as the smoke of the battle arises, we behold no enemy defeated, routed, demoralized! The victory is even greater than we had hoped for! The following shows the vote of Charlevoix County for Representative:

Charlevoix — Wood, 6; Green, 112 Majority for Green, 106.

Boyne Valley—Wood, 5; Green, 15 Majority for Green, 10.

Evidence—Every vote for Green—31.

Evangeline— Wood, 1; Green, 23 Majority for Green, 22.

Marion—Wood, 16; Green, 8. Majority for Wood, 8.

Norwood—Wood, 61; Green, 9. Majority for Wood, 52.

South Arm—Wood, 14; Green, 28 Majority for Green, 14.

Hilton—Wood, 4; Green, 14. Majority for Green, 10.

Majorities for Green in six out of eight Townships. Total vote for Wood, 110; total vote for Green, 240. Majority for Green, 130.

EMMET COUNTY.

Emmet County, where Wood expected to get 100 majority, turns out as follows:

Bear River—Wood, 42; Green, 64 Majority for Green, 42.

Little Traverse—Wood 2; Green, 65. Majority for Green, 63.

Cross Village—Wood 4; Green, 120 Majority for Green, 116.

Majority in every Township for Green Total vote for Wood, 48; total vote for Green, 269. Total majority for Green, 221

ANTRIM COUNTY.

Only three Townships heard from and Woods stronghold—Banks and Torch Lake—are included among them. The following are the figures:

Banks—Wood, 80; Green, 20 Majority for Wood, 60.

Torch Lake—Wood, 20; Green, 12 Majority for Wood, 8.

Elk Rapids—Wood, 8; Green, 41 Majority for Green, 33.

Wood 5 ahead in Antrim county as far as heard from. 100 majority for Green is, however, positively certain.

MANISTEE COUNTY.

Is not yet heard from, but even Wood acknowledges that he has no hope of a majority there.

500 MAJORITY

will, no doubt, be received by Major Green, in the District. When will dema gogues learn that merit and honesty, not intrigue and deception, always win in the end.

☞ President Grant held a public levee at the Palmer house in Chicago the day of his son's marriage, of which the Evening Journal says: It was noised that, while he greeted all comers cordially, he seemed especially pleased to greet the little children who pressed forward to shake his hand. He kissed the little girls and took the boys' hands with pleasant smiles. Three little fellows of fine appearance were presented to him as the sons of a late public officer, now dead. These he asked to see a second time. The home for women without homes, called the "Shelter," got about the best shake from the President's hand during the stay here. FIFTH AND LAST GIFT CONCERT

IN AID OF THE

Public Library of Kentucky.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The management have determined to have one more of the Fifth and last Gift Concerts, which will be given at Louisville, Ky., on the 30th day of December, 1874. Whether one or all the tickets will be sold, and whether all will draw prizes or not, the drawing will positively come off on the day appointed.

The especial object of this Gift Concert is the building of the Library for the people, in connection with the Commissioners appointed by the Trustees to superintend the erecting of the building, and the purchasing the number of books needed. While there is no actual necessity for the purchase of tickets, believe, as under our arrangements the profits of all are equally shared for, yet at the same time I would gratefully prefer that as many of those interested as can, would attend this meeting and see each for himself how perfectly fair and impartial the distribution must be, as every arrangement has been made for the utmost perfect fairness. Only three months remain before the sale of the remainder of the tickets and drawing of June, must be done promptly.

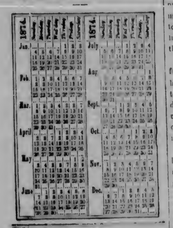
CALENDAR FOR 1874.



Local News.

ONE vote for Wood in Evangeline.

A. Butters has gone to Chicago after winter goods.

Fresh buckwheat flour, and new honey, at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

✓ The G. R. & I. R. Co. have commenced the erection of a handsome depot at Petoskey.

J. Snyder brought us a rain-bage one day this week, which weighed twelve and one half pounds.

We call the attention of our readers to the millenery advertisement of Mrs. L. H. Pearl, in another column.

Rumors from all quarters of the Senatorial District seem to indicate a close battle between Ross and Mitchell.

✓ The Telegraph is completed six miles this side of Torch Lake and will be at Charlevoix in about 10 days.

✓ Cameron's new building on bridge street is enclosed and partly painted. It will be an ornament to the street.

We shall present bills soon to all those in arrears for subscription. Call in and settle up, and save us the trouble.

TWO votes for Wood in Little Traverse.

The snow Champion arrived down yesterday from Pine Lake with a full cargo of potatoes for Chicago market.

THANKSGIVING.—The President has appointed Thursday Nov. 26th as a day of National Thanksgiving.

✓ The steamer Annie is still making semi-daily trips up Pine Lake and South Arm, and seems to be doing a thriving business.

The Fan Roulette is still making her trips with regularity. The Idaho would have been on her way down, Wednesday, and the Fountain City is expected up to-day

It is rumored that the propeller Fan Roulette will be laid up in Charlevoix harbor the coming winter, and is to undergo quite extensive repairs.

The iron on the Flint & Pere Marquette Railroad, western division, has reached a point within seventeen miles of Lake Michigan, and will be completed to Ludington in less than a fortnight, should the weather prove favorable.

FOUR votes for Wood in Cross Village.

✓ PERSONAL.—We learn that our old time friend D.R. Joslin, Esq. formerly of the Cheboygan Independent has located at Petoskey, in the practice of the law. We congratulate our sister village on the accession of a gentleman of such marked ability, and hope that he may be successful in his new field

As winter approaches the lumbering interests are being agitated in Grand Traverse, and there appears at present to be a lively interest manifested as that direction more than was at first anticipated. Messrs Hscoah, Lay & Co are preparing for quite an extensive cut of logs. They have shut down their mills for the season, and will run three camps the present winter,

EIGHT votes for Wood in Elk Rapids, and they from Ed. Peart and his whiskey ring.

"I am the people's choice," has been the war-cry of C. D. Wood since the memorable evening when the little squad of boliers at the village hotel sentenced him political death. Mr. Green has said so long, but during all the excitement of the past two months he has calmly waited for the people to decide whether Mr. Wood's statement was true or not. They have decided!

The Lesson.

Every intelligent citizen will concede that the result of the political contest which has just been terminated in this Representative District, teaches a lesson which should long be remembered by every office seeker in the District.

The lesson is one that should especially sink deep into the hearts and memories of that dangerous class of wire-pulling, self-aggrandizing, political - gambling politicians, who, by their threats, bragadocio, numerous inconsistent promises, and free use of money and "grenade-water," sought to send one of their clique to the Legislature, and another into the Clerk's office of this county.

The result teaches us that a candidate for office who is so ambitious for political honors, who pretends to be a great friend to the people, flatters them, and does things dishonorable, to secure their votes, can not succeed, for the reason that the trade of demagogueism does not flourish among intelligent people.

The course pursued by each of the legislative candidates was so entirely different, and the contrast in the modes operandi so great, that we cannot allow the occasion to pass without a word of comment. While Mr. Wood and his hired men were following and night over the counties composing this District, asking men to vote and work for him, making pledges and promises which he knew could never be made good, and employing men in the different towns to attend the polls and work for him, Mr. Green remained at home, in his law office, and attended to his legitimate business,—save on a few occasions, when he addressed the people on the issues of the day,—never making a personal allusion in any of his addresses, as we have been informed.

The conclusion drawn from this lesson is that dishonesty and political gambling is the canons and convention, and a general rule or rain policy, will not receive the approbation of honest, intelligent voters.

To the two gentlemen who have been elected to stay at home, we would say, in conclusion, "go, and sin no more," and always remember that honesty in politics is the best policy.

FOUR votes for Wood in Wilson.

The County Clerkship.

Hon. J. S. Dixon was elected County Clerk, on Tuesday, by a large majority. Miller received a majority in but one Township (Norwood.)

The General Result.

The returns from this county indicate a respectable Republican majority on the General Ticket. Hubbell, for Congressman ran ahead of his ticket largely; and Rose for State Senator, received a considerable majority. Norwood went Democratic by ten majority, and Marion also by a few votes. The Constitutional Amendments were carried with but few dissenting votes, but Woman Suffrage was roughly handled. Taking all in all, Charlevoix has sustained her reputation as a Republican county,—the majority for Rose (Dem.) being attributable mainly to his personal popularity among our citizens.

FIVE votes for Wood in Boyne Valley.

It is immensely gratifying to us that the people of Charlevoix county have, by their ballots, sanctioned the cause for which the SENTINEL has so boldly and persistently battled during the campaign. It is not only a triumph of the people over intriguers, but journalistic victory over the enemy in the face of threats, slander and various other attempted detriments to our interests. We want no more evident recognition of the influence of our paper in this fight than the frantic gnashing of teeth, and pugilistic demonstrations with which we are greeted by the vanquished and their friends—or certain of them.

In Unity—A citizen of Evangeline, on his way home from Pine Lake one day this week, met with an accident to his wagon, and was forced to leave it beside the road and secure another. The wagon contained a barrel of flower and other articles which he covered up beside the road intending to return soon and get them. Daniel Jelse of that Township, in passing, discovered the flower, broke in the head of the barrel and took the greater portion of it. The theft was discovered and Jelse was arrested, and tried before Justice H. R. Miller. He was found guilty, and sentenced to Charlevoix jail for 20 days.

There was a total eclipse of the moon at a very early hour on sunday morning last, but enjoyment of the spectacle was marred by the sky being obscured with clouds.

A serious stabbing affray occurred near Elk Rapids on the afternoon of the 28th between two men named Maitlan and Kelly who were riding home in a wagon in company with two other men named Boyd and Perry. Maitland and Kelly had an altercation which resulted in a murderous assault of Maitland upon Kelly with a pocket knife. Kelly was very seriously stabbed several times in the breast and bowels. He lies in a critical condition with but little hopes entertained of his recovery. Maitland was promptly arrested.

ALMOND CASE.—From Kenosha, Wis., some time ago, there arrived one Capt. Samuel Moore, who at once entered into the bark business quite extensively, and, soon after, into the mercantile business at the head of South Arm. By virtue of his handsome looks and prepossessing appearance, he won the affections of a young and buxom maiden, and matrimony was the result. Everything went lovely until last week, when Mrs. Johnson Moore, arrived from Kenosha, and pointed to Capt. Samuel as her lawful husband, and the father of her three children, who accompanied her. On Monday last, he was arrested on charge of bigamy, and straightened before Justice Dixon. The trial proceeded, and when it came to Moore's defense, he produced a document, bearing the red seal of a Chicago Court, and which proved to be a divorce from the said Johnson Moore. It was conclusively proven, however, that he had lived with her since the date of the divorce; evidently having preserved the document for the emergency which now came up. The Court found no cause of action and the prisoner was discharged. Johnson still hangs around her Samuel, and promises to haunt him as long as they both live.

✓ PERSONAL.—Mrs. Warren—Since the result of the election has become known, we have received three cordial invitations to step into the street to have our face mutilated, but in each case we courteously declined, for reasons best known to ourself. And now a prominent citizen of South Arm, having a bowling alley to run our handsome face rendered unrecognizable, advertises in this week's Sentinel, for some one to punish us, and offers $5 reward to any one who will commence and successfully complete the job. We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement and recommend them to Mr. Isaman as "a man in every way worthy of their confidence." His past failures in jobs of this kind have induced him to sub-contract in the future, and we think it wise. For the benefit of those inclined to accept his, or other proposals, we will state that we are at our office during business hours, and can be met on our way from office to residence any evening after dark. We carry no revolver, bowie-knife or slung-shot, and will not run. But, by the way, it is a source of great pride to us that the power and influence of the SENTINEL in the campaign just closed so disastrously to them should meet with such marked recognition from them. See advertisement elsewhere, and send on your shoulder-bitters.

THAT CONFIRMED HOAX.

The following fancy picture of what may be familiar enough two hundred years hence is no more improbable on the basis of it than our railways, electric telegraphs, and the like would have seemed a century ago:

Scene—Library in the house of an elderly gent, somewhere in Australia.

Gent just telegraphs to the kitchen, and waiter responds in a balloon.

Old Gent—John, fly over to Calcutta and tell Mr. Johnson that I shall be happy to have him stay with me. Never mind your coat now, but go."

John leaves, and at the end of five minutes returns.

John—Mr. Johnson says he will come; he has got to go to St. Petersburgh for a few minutes and then he will be here."

Old Gentleman—Very well, John. Now start the machine for setting the table and telegraph to my wife's room, and tell her Mr. Johnson is coming, then brush up my balloon, for I have an engagement in London at twelve o'clock.

John flies and the old gentleman runs over to the West Indies to buy a fresh orange.

SATURDAY, - NOV. 14, 1874

ELECTION RETURNS.

At the hour of our going to press last week we were unable to learn definitely the general result throughout the country.

An unusually heavy vote has been polled throughout this State, and returns show considerable democratic gains. The new constitution is overwhelmingly defeated. The woman suffrage amendment is also defeated, but seems to have received a larger vote than was generally expected. The indications are that Williams, Democrat, is elected to Congress in the First district; Potter, Democrat, in the fourth; Durand, Democrat, in the sixth; Waldron, Republican in the seventh; Conger, Republican, in the seventh; Hubbell, Republican, in the ninth. The fifth district is claimed for Williams, Republican, by a good majority. The Republican general State ticket is elected by about four thousand majority. The Legislature is undoubtedly Republican on joint ballot.

In Grand Traverse the election has resulted satisfactorily. Mitchell is elected by a considerable majority, and Major Green is elected from this Representative District by about 600 majority—every county in the district rolling up a majority.

Outside of Michigan, twenty-seven States and Territories held elections on Tuesday. They were Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Maine, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Wisconsin, Arizona, Idaho and Washington.

Of these, Alabama, Delaware, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Tennessee elected a State ticket and Congressmen. The other States and Territories elected only members and delegates to Congress. Vermont elects one Congressman in Pennsylvania district where there was no choice.

Two hundred and thirteen members of Congress were chosen.

Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas are Democratic. The Democratic majorities in Massachusetts and New York are reported large. In the latter State they claim 40,000 but allowance must be made for the excited condition of the Democratic mind. In Massachusetts, Boston, Democrat, probably has 5,000 majority. Butler is badly beaten for Congress. Banks, Republican Independent, has 5,000 majority.

Kansas, Minnesota, Maine, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Wisconsin and Illinois are Republican. In Illinois the Congressional delegation seems to be about equally divided. Illinois from Missouri are very meagre, but the People's ticket, supported by the Republicans, is probably elected.

☞ An ex-rebel general, O'Neal, who served under Stonewall Jackson, is shoveling dirt on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway for a dollar a day.

☞ Keough is already known to show that Michigan will have three Democrats and five Republicans in the next Congress, with one district in doubt. She is now represented by nine Republicans.

☞ It is reported that in case the northern extension of the Jackson, Lansing and Saginaw Railroad is connected with the Detroit and Bay City Railroad, that it will be extended to Mackinac forthwith.

☞ The British Legation at Washington is to be a grand building, elegantly furnished, and to cost $200,000. The minister and secretary of legation will reside in the building and the lower floor will be given up to the offices of the mission.

☞ The neice of the ex-Queen Isabella, who some years ago married an American secretary of legation at Madrid named Perkins, is now a widow and begging bread. Her royal relatives refuse to give her so much as a sou, and she is obliged to depend upon the charity of Americans.

☞ A dispatch from Salt Lake City states that Brigham Young and Congressman George Q. Cannon have been indicted for the grand jury for bigamous cohabitation. The latter has ingeniously evaded conviction by spiriting away his wives, who are the only competent witnesses against him.

☞ Tammany is in power once more in New York. It elected its Mayor The Democracy is restored to power in New York evidently, and Tweed, from Blackwell's Island, rules once more. The "good old times" are coming back again.

☞ The election returns leave us room for doubt that the Opposition will have a majority in the next House of Representatives. When Massachusetts elects three or four anti-Republican Congressmen, when New York shows such a large Democratic gain in the Congressional elections and when two or three Michigan districts are carried by the Democracy, the result is a foregone conclusion.

☞ The Republican party has always been the people's party. Had the "salary grab" been passed with a Democratic majority in both houses of Congress, it never would have been repealed, but thanks to the Republican press, the people were allowed to speak in a voice that was unmistakable. And it was to the credit of Congress that that voice was heard and regarded.

☞ The Lansing Republican says: "The last war loan bond outstanding of the issue of 1861 was paid on Wednesday by the State Treasurer. It was a $50 bond due July 1, 1863 and seems to have been held by one Mary King, who received it as a New Year's gift from her grandfather, and has kept it ever since with German fidelity. Eleven years interest has been gained by the State from the non-presentation of this bond."

☞ The Democratic minority in the State Legislature was washed by the "tidal wave" of 1872 almost into teeth so as, amounting to less than a dozen members on joint ballot. It is not probable—nor is it indeed desirable—that the Republicans should retain their enormous ascendancy in the coming Legislature, but we anticipate the election of a House and Senate under the control of a Republican majority of at least two-thirds. This will surely restore the relations of parties in Michigan to about their normal condition.

☞ The President, from his late extensive Western excursion has returned to the White House. It is understood that with or shortly after the meeting of Congress his family circle will include Mrs. Sartoris (late Nellie Grant) and her husband, and Lieutenant Frederick Grant and his bride, and that accordingly the Washington fashionable season this coming season though ending on the 4th of March will unusually active and brilliant.

☞ From statistical reports it is found that the amount of fruit shipped from Grand Haven during the past season, amounts to 246,000 packages. Of these, 200,000 went to Chicago, the greatest shipment of fruit has been peaches. The total number of baskets of peaches and grapes shipped is 150,000, valued at $50,000. This has been the most successful season ever before experienced there, and the shipments have been the largest.

☞ The detailed returns show that Gen Butler was defeated on account of his own particular sins and not as a result of the general "tidal wave." Gov. Talbot, who ran many thousands behind the rest of the Republican State ticket, still carried the Essex district by over 2,000 while Gen. Butler's minority was 971. In some wards in Gloucester and Marblehead the General received fewer votes than were cast for his delegates in the nominating primaries. His defeat was certainly a well rounded and most unmistakable one.

☞ Switzerland has abolished capital punishment, and her new penal code may be thus briefly stated: Homicide committed accidentally, is to be qualified as murder, and punished with from ten to twenty years of solitary confinement. Premeditated murder ("with malice prepensed") is to be classed as assassination, punishable with solitary confinement for life. Murder by poisoning also with the same punishment, whether death is occasioned at once or by slow poison. If death does not result from the administration of poison, the punishment is to be from ten to twenty years solitary confinement. For infanticide, the punishment is solitary confinement for not less than three nor more than twenty years.

☞ It is suggested that by filling suitably constructed sheet-iron vessels to the depth of about an inch with water, it will soon freeze, even when the temperature is but little below freezing point, and that by repeating the addition of water as the first portions become frozen, blocks of the clearest ice, six inches thick, may be formed during a night; and when the temperature by day is suitable, a single laborer will be able to fill a large icehouse in a short time. By pouring water which has been cooled in the vessels nearly to the freezing point over the ice after it has been packed, at suitable intervals, when the temperature of the air is below the freezing point, a compact mass of ice may be formed of more value for use than a much larger quantity loosely packed. Even in winters favorable to the production of ice, the above method may be found the most convenient and the cheapest for filling the ice-houses.

☞ The steamer Lotta Bernard, Capt. Morris, of Duluth bound from Pigeon River to Duluth, foundered on Lake Superior on the 29th ult, during a fearful gale which swept the decks and finally extinguished the fires. The persons on board were one passenger, Willie Blanchard, and four of the members of the crew. Blanchard and one of the deck hands were drowned by the upsetting of a boat. The remaining three succeeded in launching a larger yawl, and after untold privations reached shore at noon on Thursday. After traveling about five miles ten of them came upon an Indian settlement, where they obtained shelter and sent out to those who were too exhausted to walk, the bodies of four who were dead and the other two nearly so.

After the Rinkie.

The Republican defeat—local, State and national—is Waterbury-ish. We don't make no attempt to fertilize its magnificent.

Hard times, Bolterism, "the crusade," prohibition, thirsty in power at the South, too much spitting on the part of the "managers" toward a third term, general discontent, dosged with local annoyances, and so on—if the reader wishes to know the causes of what has happened let him select any or add up all of the foregoing they will suffice.

The destruction has been exceedingly indiscriminate. Hoy. Dix has been sent to private life from a clear mass which he has stood more honor than had any of his predecessors in years. Scores of minor Republican candidates of the highest character have been defeated in localities which ought to have been reliable in these cases. Even this State—strongly Republican from the outset—has aimed excited an Governor who preached the gospel of liberality from the stump during the campaign in every principal town, in the interior. And yet there has been a certain just complaining of police against on to results of many conspicuous candidates. Tweed-feat of Gen. Butler and the removal of Congressman Henry L. Pierce in Massachusetts are cases in point—not to name minor house.

We have long done not a little groaning ourselves in the past at many features of party management, have put on record many Cassandran prophecies, and have declined to "rally to the support" of some candidates whom we did not consider to be fair representatives of the Republican organization and its better tendencies. Quite a large number of gentlemen will probably concede that there was reason in our view on these questions.

As we said at the outset, the defeat is Waterlooish; still it is not a Waterloo. Republicanism has received no staggering a blow as it has ever felt, but no vital part has been harmed. Let it load up its wounds, omit to pick up most of the baggage it has been carrying, and resume a march in which it has stumbled but not fallen.—Detroit Tribune.

A Small Pox Remedy.

A correspondent of the California Herald writes as follows: I herewith append recipe which has been used to my knowledge in hundreds of cases. It will prevent or cure small-pox, though the pittings are filling. When Jenner discovered cow-pox in England, the world of science hurled on an absurdity of fame upon his heels; but while the most scientific school of medicine in the world—that of Paris—published this recipe no pauperes for small-pox it passes unheeded, it is as reliable as fate, and cures in every instance. It is painless when taken by a well person. It will also cure scarlet fever. Here is the recipe as I have used it to cure my children of scarlet fever; how as I have used it to cure small-pox, when learned physician said the patient must die, it cured: Salpitate of zinc, one grain; slightly, one grain; half teaspoonful of sugar; mix with two tablespoonfuls of water; when mixed add four ounces of water. Dose, tablespoonful every hour. Either disease will disappear in twenty four hours for a child twelve years, according to age. It could not compel their possession to use this; there would be no need of pest houses if you raise advice and experience use this for that terrible disease.

FIFTH AND LAST GIFT CONCERT
IN AID OF THE
Public Library of Kentucky,

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The management have determined to have the drawing of the $100,000 Real Estate Property of the Public Library of Kentucky on the 30th day of November next. We can now say that all the tickets will be sold, and that the drawing will be a fair one; and although we are sold or not, the drawing will nevertheless certainly come off on the day appointed.

The especial object of this card is to call a meeting of the ticket-holders at Public Library Hall, on the 30th of November, to make arrangements in connection with the committee appointed by the Trustees to superintend the counting of the tags representing the number of tickets sold. While there is no actual necessity for the presence of ticket-holders, as under our arrangements the interests of all are equally cared for, yet at the same time I would greatly prefer that as many of those interested as can, would attend this meeting and see each for himself how perfectly fair and impartial the distribution must be.

Every arrangement has been made for the drawing—but little more than a month remains for the sale of the remainder of the tickets, and whatever is done, must be done promptly.

POETRY.

Stroke Through the Knot.

I used sometimes, many and many a day,
To go to a house on a meadow and sit
In a room I visited about the place,
And watch a little girl who lived in the house.

Just then, an old man, coming by, gave directions
How to remove a certain stump
Concerning which, lately, he had Written to the owner, who lived in a city.
This looming appeared and not many days after
Men with machinery and horses and oxen
Had gathered in the field, and my little friend
And I stood by the window and watched
All that was done, and saw the workmen
Finally finish their task, and depart.
Then the house was still, and we looked
Out on the stump in the field, and thought
Of the large space it filled under the ground,
And the long roots that crept
Deep down in the earth.

I don't know or care what
Fatherly interest the farmer had in
The matter, but I remember
How he looked in front of the register with a Pleased air, and how he showed How much deeper he was than
Some other farmers, and how
He must have had a hard time
To get it out, and how
He must have had to use
Extraordinary means to get it out.

Then I looked at the little girl
Who lived in the house, and Wondered if she understood
The pleasure which the farmer
Felt in conquering the stump,
And I wondered if she felt
Any interest in the matter,
And I wondered if she knew
Anything about the stump,
And I wondered if she knew
That it was down deep in the ground,
And I wondered if she knew
That it had roots,
And I wondered if she knew
That it was a stump.

And I wondered if she knew
That it was a stump
Which had been a tree,
And I wondered if she knew
That it had been a tree
Before it was a stump,
And I wondered if she knew
That it had been a tree
Before it was a stump
Which had been a tree

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY - - - NOV. 21, 1874

☞ The result gave a majority of 5,912 against Woman Suffrage and 2,275 against the amendments to the constitution.

☞ The Albany Journal says a Democratic ticket for 1876, consisting of for President Gen. William T. Sherman and for Vice President Hon. Thomas W. Ferry.

☞ Elections on Woman Suffrage was carried in favorably for that cause as its most ardent advocates could have hoped. It will, of course, have to try again, and the question of extending the elective franchise will be still more prominent in the next State election than this.

☞ We are happy to learn of the financial prosperities of the Mission Indians. These Aborigines having bought of the Shawnee tribe 13,000 acres of land at the rate of $6 00 on the 12th ult. came expressly with the first money to the money according to the agreement.

☞ The Constitutional Amendments would have improved our fundamental charters considerably. But the people voted that the present Constitution was good enough. They did the same thing six years ago. It is well best to spend another hundred thousand dollars on Constitutional improvement till the vote of this year gets cold.

☞ We give it for what it is worth that the recent outgo of by Beecher and Tilton have decided to withdraw from the variegated bed sacks on the ground that they won't furnish private matters out fit to be made public. It is not possible that the eminent legal gentlemen are such fools as to think that it is in their power to save the reputation of both Beecher and Tilton. One of them must be perjured a rascal, or the people will never be content.

☞ The Chicago Tribune, which stands first in the rank of western newspapers, has again become an organ of the Republican party. Joseph Medill, now of the former proprietors, and a well known journalist, has secured a controlling interest in the stock of the company, and assumed editorial control. While announcing his intention of supporting the Republican party he also declares in favor of specie payments and financial reform.

☞ The existence is conceded that is to remain after the facts of passion, or difference of parties cannot be forgotten, nor why the people should not soberly reflect upon them? For a single short lesson, take the fact that the opposition party has censured the Government and the Republican Administration for the public debt and consequent taxation; and yet the result is the direct result of the war inaugurated by the very men who are now howling over its existence. Will they be more patriotic in paying it than they were in making it if they get into power?

☞ As near as we can gather from the news of despatches and other excitement reports, here and in the Detroit papers, the Republican State ticket is successful by on it is a small majority on Governor, probably not much more than 2,000. The indications are that the State Senate will be very near equally divided, and the House will not contain more than twenty-five Republican majority. Michigan is not yet swamped, but has considerable pretty near swamp. The Democrats are already claiming the defeat of Chandler for re-election to the United States Senate, which they propose to accomplish by a combination with a number Republicans in the Legislature, to elect, as they say, "a moderate Republican."

☞ When an operator in the Western Union Telegraph office in New York wished to communicate with Paris, one recent night, he found that the Parisian operator did not answer his call, and was apparently asleep. He was to learn, and had no time to lose, so he called Plaister Cove, in Newfoundland, and sent the following message: "To Cable operator, Plaister Cove: Please go to and wake up my own true love." This message Plaister Cove hastened to send across the ocean to Valentine Ireland, was in turn rushed on it to London; thence it was hurried to Paris and still onward to the European end of the French cable at Porte: the operator there flashing it back to Plaister Cove. In less than two minutes by the clock the message had accomplished its journey of some 8,000 miles by land and sea, and was answered by the giant whose throbbed off the wire from the Parisian operator, who complained of being disturbed during a refreshing nap. He never could do these things even in the best of the good old times.

☞ The spectacle of a House of Representatives in opposition to the whole nation is by no means an unusual one in our political history. Indeed it has occurred so often that it became for a time almost the rule in our politics that in its second Congress of each Presidential term the Opposition would have a majority in the House of Representatives. That was the case with the second House of Representatives under Van Buren, which met in December, 1839; with that under Harrison, which met in 1841; under Polk, in 1845; under Pierce, in 1853; under Buchanan, in 1857; and under Lincoln, in 1865. It not only seems the Republicans came into power just this year, but has been broken, and now in the election of the House which meets in December, 1875 has been followed again.

☞ In Montreal, recently, a lady was taken suddenly ill, and after two days' sickness was pronounced dead by the attending physician. Three days after, the body was observed to be in a remarkable state of preservation, but the funeral was proceeded with. When the procession arrived at the cemetery the coffin was removed to the morgue in order to gratify the wishes of a friend of the deceased who had come a long distance to take a last farewell. The request was complied with and the coffin had scarcely been opened, when, to the horror of all, the corpse was found to be lying on its side, the head resting against the coffin lid. After the excitement, the grave clothes disarranged, while the left arm was drawn up so as to enable it to support the body, as if the unfortunate woman had risen among us as a resurrectional and terrible struggle for breath. The night was heartrending, and the unfortunate husband of the deceased gave way to the wildest manifestations of grief, while ladies who were present became hysterical or swooned away. It is supposed the deceased had been lying in a trance, and was brought to life through the jolting of the hearse-wheels on the road to the cemetery.

☞ It probably ought to enjoy himself it is the ranking of Odds, who suppresses all the dignity of a king, without any of the responsibilities of a monarch. He pays little court on the backs of the Hungry. The retired monarch is only a pensioner of the British Government, receiving about $50,000 a month. His mimic kingdom consists of a large estate, which is managed directly on will provided minutest manner of contentedness. He subsists on an allowance of about $1,000, and devoted to gout. If society is perfect in form. His offense of state, as he calls them, have their origin and gradations as those who wear buttons them last a date. He misspells to the queen as "my wifed, and confesses to only and give a majority and to the Legislature is elected under Prime Living United states number. Mr. Lincoln's vote on the question of civil using the appointment of Martin Van Buren as Minister Plenipotentiary to Great Britain, rushed the Vice President to give the casting vote against it and called Mr. Van Buren home. That recall made Mr. Van Buren first Vice President, and then President, and conquered the general political power that reached for four years. Our present incumbent of Polk. The vote was James L. Pet on the Legislature, and made him subsequently Senator.

It is estimated that copper the country yes the copper interest of Michigan will contribute 70,000 tons of coal.

Further authorities of the Cathedral Church have caused to have a gravel laid around the Cathedral, for the purpose of preventing the bottom of paint defacement.

A handsome new omnibus has recently been ordered for the line, which passes a corner from the depot to the Cathedral, and on this was to be used Sunday for the first time, but the horses became frightened at the new vehicle, and ran away, breaking the pole, and otherwise damaging it. It is hoped with a less showy conveyance the horses will be more tractable.

The Hermann Volksblatt says that the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company has decided to run a train between St. Louis and Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, which will make the distance between the two cities in seven hours. The present time is nine hours. The distance between St. Louis and Kansas City is 283 miles, and the new train will run at the rate of 40 miles per hour.

The Bourbon Democrats of Missouri are making a desperate effort to defeat Governor Woodson's re-election. They have nominated Colonel John S. Phelps, who was a Union officer during the war, and who has been a Democratic member of Congress from the Springfield district for several terms. Governor Woodson is a Democrat of the Jefferson and Jackson school, and is a candidate of the people.

Importance of a Single Vote.

The following instances have fallen under our notice: One vote in the city of New York returned a Republican member to the Assembly, when made a majority in the Legislature of last State for Thomas Jefferson, and gave him the vote of New York, without which he could not have been elected. United States during the Jefferson and Madison administration, a period of sixteen years long on that one vote. That vote elected Marcus Morton Governor of Massachusetts in an aggregate popular vote of nearly 100,000 — one vote elected William Allen, in the Chillicothe district, to Congress, in the year 1831, and one vote subsequently made him United States Senator for six years afterwards. The following case of the kind is still more remarkable: In 1830, Dan Stone, of Guernsey, was a candidate for the State Legislature. Walking up 20 paces street on the morning of the election, he overtook an acquaintance going to the polls. Who intended to vote the opposite ticket. Stone solicited his vote. "We are old friends," said he, "and I know you will show a friend that mark of kindness. Party spirit was then stronger among quiet. The polite request: "Well, Dan, you are a pretty clever fellow I don't care if I do that vote elected Stone.

Farms & Farming Lands

Bought and sold on commission.

We are now preparing an Abstract of Titles of Emmet County. It will be completed in a few weeks, and we can then furnish Abstracts on short notice.

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable locations of Indian selections of Farming Lands which we offer at very low figures:

No. 1. 80 acres. First rate farming land. Situated 24 miles from Little Traverse Ind. boat; well timbered—beech and maple; sandy loam; will be sold very cheap. Sec. 11 of section 36, Town 36 North, of Range 6 west.

No. 2. 40 acres. Sec of sw¼ section 30 Town 34 North, of Range 5 west. 34 mile from Petoskey City, with 10 acres cleared small log house; will be sold at a bargain.

No. 3. 184 acres. N½ of sw¼ and of sw¼ and fractional part of section 19. Will be sold in separate descriptions or in a body. Has a large creek running the whole length with good water power. Well timbered, and will be sold cheap for cash. This is one of the best chances in the country for a person wishing to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many descriptions of Farming lands near Petoskey City, which we will sell at reasonable prices. Some of these lands have old Indian improvements on, which can be made into farms.

CALENDAR FOR 1874.

Local News.

THE Northport Tribune says that Iwan der Baas, of Manitou Island died lately.

SWEET CIDER at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

THE official canvass shows Greco's majority to have been 464.

REMOVAL.—Rev. Mr. Cole will preach in this village to-morrow (both morning and evening.

THE telegraph is not yet in operation, but an operator and instrument are expected to day.

DRUGS.—Doctor Lewis is in receipt of a full line of Drugs and Medicines, and his customers will find anything in that line that they desire by calling on him.

EASON.—Our statement made two weeks ago that Marion gave a Democratic majority was a mistake. It gave a majority for the Republican ticket.

CAPT. WALTER CRAWFORD, U. S. A. who has been residing in this village for the past two years on leave of absence, has reported for duty, and has ordered to join his company at Fort Shaw, Montana. We expect to occasionally hear from him.

THE STANTON.—Advices from the owners of that schooner state that, owing to the condition of the wood market, and other discouragements, their previously laid plan of laying up their vessel here this winter and getting out wood will probably be frustrated.

CARPENTER & BARTHOLOMEW have received their winter stock, and the public may expect to hear from them soon in a new advertisement. This firm have established a reputation for square dealing and cheap prices, which warrants them a large share of public patronage.

JUSTICE COURT.—John Olney, of Norwood, was arraigned before Justice Bortis, of Marion, one day last week, on a charge of obstructing a highway. He was fined $1 and costs. He has been rearrested on a similar complaint, and the trial is in progress as we go to press, before Justice Miller, of this village.

AFTER the 1st of January the postage on all publications sent by mail must be prepaid at the postoffice in the city or village where they are published, therefore all our subscribers outside of this county are notified that in the future the regular rate of postage will be charged in addition to the regular subscription price.

FOX ROSE & BUTTARS are in receipt of an enormous stock of samples embracing everything needed and all hands are busy putting them in shape to sell. This is the pioneer establishment of the region is known throughout the country as eminently reliable, and their goods and prices are such that the public are always satisfied.

ANTRIM COUNTY.—The officers elected are as follows: Sheriff, Alex. Campbell; Treasurer, R. W. Begot; Clerk and Register, C. Parkinson; Judge of Probate, Wm. J. Getty; Prosecuting Attorney, Fitch R. Williams; Surveyor, Geo. E. Steele; Coroners, B. W. Cap and L. R. Smith. Through some testimonial error the election of Getty has been declared a nullity, and the commission of Mr. Williams, the present incumbent, holds good two years longer.

THE B. F. WADE.—The propeller B. F. Wade has made her last trip upon the lakes as a steam craft at least. Her machinery is to be used in Capt. Pridgeon's new boat and the good old craft is to be cut down into a lumber barge. The Wade is about fifteen years old, and has been very successful, making "piles of money" for her owner. At one time, and not long ago, she was considered the fastest craft on the lakes, and for a whole season the carried the "put up or shut up" flag.

Thanksgiving.

In the days of Greek Dithesm, the people of that age and fatly considered service to their two gods according to the emergency and the imaginary characteristics of their Deities. If prosperity had attended them for a season, they not only set apart a day, but devoted a lengthy period to devotion and the offering of sacrifices to the author of good. If a great calamity overtook them, a season of sorrow followed, as a mark of recognition of the power of the god of evil. But the Greeks had yet to learn that good must be intermingled with evil, that the good may stand forth the greater blessing because of the contrast.

In this age of enlightened, our leaders recognize through the clouds of evil the hand of the Almighty, from whence comes all good, and with true wisdom, and Moses like reverence, point the nation to its duty, and Thursday next has been set apart as a day of Thanksgiving and Praise to the Author of our weal.

From the ungodly omit assent to the wisdom of this custom and with awe and respect bow their heads in secret gratitude. No patriotic heart beats within the boundaries of this great country but what gracile partakes of this spirit of the festival.

The past year has had much good fall across its pathway. Nature has lavishly yielded her bounties, wherewith to afford the exultant and sufficient for the sustenance of the people, and has given us bountifully of the material wherewith to protect our bodies from the rigors of winter and the heat of summer. Our commerce has prospered, and peace reigns.

The year has witnessed the discomfiture of dishonest politicians and rotten political combinations, and the people have been awakened to the danger which threatened the government established by their forefathers. The great party of progress has been disencumbered of many of its most corrupt demagogues, and a lesson has been taught it that, although expensive, will prove a most profitable one.

In view of these and many other blessings, let the people unite, next Thursday, in reverence, at least, for the Almighty hand which has caused these blessings and these purifying events. Let the praise bear no mark of denunciation, and the reverence come from patriotic and thankful hearts. Laus Deo!

THANKSGIVING services will be held on Thursday, at 10.30 at the school house, Sermon by Rev Geo. W. Wood

PERSONALS.—The hymne inspirer of the Ladies' Aid Society, which was to have taken place last evening, has been postponed until next Wednesday.

THE HARBOR.—And now, that preparations are being made for the coming session of Congress, it is true that our people should begin to think of their harbor interests. Let us by letter and petition urge our claims until attention is paid to our wants. Let us be up and doing!

MARINE.—The propeller Idaho stopped here for the last time this season on her way down, on Thursday, and landed the winter supplies for our merchants. The Tom Rankin has made her last trip around the Bay, and has left for her winter quarters at Detroit. The Fountain City is making her last trip for the season, and is expected here hourly on her way up. If she touches here on her way down, it may be considered the last boat of the season. On Pine Lake the steamer Annie is still running, and will continue to run until the ice forces her to lay up.

THE Government appropriation for the present year for the improvement of Cheboygan is $15,000. It is estimated that this sum will secure a channel of 160 feet in width, according to the plan of improvement. Depositors are notified that after this year a charge of one cent per foot will be made for lighterage. Cheboygan will possess valuable commercial facilities.

PERSONAL.—W. Hoan, formerly the popular jeweler of this place, appeared among us last week from his present home in Angola, Ind., wearing a new suit of broadcloth, and sporting a seven dollar gold watch. His success as a jeweler excited the suspicion of our citizens and he was carefully watched. He mysteriously disappeared on Friday, however, but nothing was missed as far as known. On Monday he turned up again this time from South Arm, accompanied by Mrs. Hoan, nee Miss Everetta Hawks, daughter of Andrew Hawks, of the latter Township. This explained his strange conduct, and our people no longer watched their silverware (joke.) The happy couple spent a few days in Charlevoix, as the guests of the editor, and on Thursday departed for their home in Indiana, where Mr. Hoan is engaged at his trade, and is doing well. He has secured an estimable young woman for a helpmeet, and Everetta has likewise done well. We wish them abundant happiness and prosperity.

Marshal MacMahon—His Home Life.

The Marshal contrives to be out shooting, if possible when game arrive; and if any of them should wish to run him to earth among the coins or beet-root fields, they would have to run long and fast, for the hero of Magenta is one of those men who can sit out with his gun at nine and be still getting away unhindered at five many miles after his two retrievers, his aid-de-camp and the Marquis Amelot, his neighbor, and best sporting friend, have had enough of it. He is a tactful sportsman and an excellent shot. Used to the tricks of partridges from his earliest youth he aims steadily and knocks them over, or if preferred, he misses one in a day, his chagrin finds vent in one of those ground objurgations which comes very loosely from an old soldier. For it must be remembered that the Marshal is emphatically an old soldier and nothing but that—no politician, diplomatic or minister of worlds. He lives quietly with a rooted sort of horror, which is endless in his amenities, say to all who talk with him, and though his friends have succeeded in persuading him that he has a saving reason to discharge, yet the pens stubbornly constrains him to variations of poems which are most repugnant to his nature. He has never consented to be translated in private, by the etiquette of a court. In Paris he goes periodically on foot to those his four flipped into brioche at the Rue Vivienne, and afterwards he likes bonbons and breakfast in a private room at Durand's or the Cafe d'Orsay. He has great aptitude for mathematics, prior to the position utterly eschewing evening dress, for the Marshal dislikes—and does many matters unless it be study—put on his knee to go shooting, and it were the need to make his old regimental overcoats do duty as dressing-gowns, furred, and lined with silk, which gorgeous vestment, however, he wears with sorrow and compunction, as tending to effeminacy.

A Terrible Snake Story.

Messrs. H. S. Parkes, Jewish Straley, and John P. Simmons, a party of Orange tourists, who returned yesterday from a three months trip through Dade, Sumter and Orange counties, relate a terrible snake story. They were encamped in Elk Head Mountains, in the North Creek, on the 10th of last September, when they met with a misfortune which cost one of the party his life. The party moved in camp late one night from a day's hunt and ramble over the hills. After a hearty supper, the party lay down on their blankets around the fire, which had been built in the cleft of some large flood granite rocks, and all were soon fast asleep.

Mr Straley was awakened in the night by a heavy weight upon his chest. At first he supposed it was his brother's hand, but as it did not move, and becoming nervous and alarmed, he raised his head and was horrified to find a large mountain rattlesnake coiled upon his body, with his head reared down in the center of the coil. It was nearly daylight, but Mr. Straley was in a paralyzed state, for to lose his mind too make a move, and dared not move. He recovered his presence of mind so far as to be able to arouse the blankets over his face. This movement startled the reptile, which glided from him to his brother, who was sleeping with him. The snake passed from his breast to his brother's face, when in a fatal moment, Henry Straley raised his head to hear it away. There was a large rattle and he had only from the half awakened boy, and the monster buried its fangs in his right hand and a second time in his cheek. There was a wild scream from Henry as the poor boy jumped to his feet, while the snake glided from the blankets to a large flat rock near the embers of the fire. Mr Jenkins there killed it with his revolver.

Poor young Straley was soon suffering the most intense agony. His brother, at his request, cut out a large portion of the cheek in hopes that the poison had not penetrated very deep, and a tight ligature was bound around the wrist of the bitten hand, which was bathed in cold water. But nothing availed to save the poor boy. He died in less than two hours in the most terrible agony.—Denver Herald.

The Lawrence (Mass.) Sentinel says, that a number of months since a Methuen man desired some accommodation at the Boston & Maine Road, but was refused. The actions complained him that he was determined to get square by some means, and at length, noticing that there was no draw in the railroad bridge near the city, he determined to put the company to the expense of building one. So he commenced building a schooner of about 200 tons at a point above the bridge, and now, it is nearly ready to launch, he will soon load her with legitimate freight, sail down to the bridge and demand passage, which the railroad people must grant him whether or no.

Humbug a big influence when a lady faints away whether you bathe her temples with camphor or molasses.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - NOV. 28, 1874.

☞ The town of Cornell, in the upper Michigan Central Railroad, has been changed to Isbpeming.

☞ Regular dispatch on the list of States five more than five per cent of the Strong majority in ohio.

☞ The receipts of customs at the State Ports During the past month has been $8, against 19 during the same month last year, a falling off of 11.

☞ England has discovered an island in Spain for the Virginius business. The government of United States is going to be cheap enough to the mother.

☞ "Oh, save some poor man the rod," shouted, and now. I was glad to know you ran so well" and the whole house went back his fingers for a week. I did some opinion on that order.

☞ The Minneapolis people are discussing the question of the re-election of Senator. The Detroit Post thought down the city somewhere which has 7 votes a strong majority.

☞ The Lieutenant of Big Rapids boys made a contract to shoot 10 men out of 10 legs, which they will stop at last city next spring and put up the lumber during the summer.

☞ Applications have been made at one of the Portage Lake mines for the purpose of allowing eight convicts from the Jackson prison to work underground for a year or so. Mining engineers put in practice is to be thought.

☞ The Saginaw Courier weeps over the death of another Indian. This time it is John Tall Minister Man of the Ojibways. He was seventy-two years old, and turned Christian a number of years ago.

☞ The names of knights of the forbidden any participation in our Democratic the royal family, or any member there of. Such delinquency is, of course, natural. It would scarcely be exercised in the manly of George III.

☞ Lansing will be well supplied with newspapers after January 1st. The Republican will be issued semi-weekly, and a new daily is contemplated by S. B. M. Cracken, which will have a quantity of editorial to choose or thunder from.

☞ Advertise from Virginia of the most every of morton in the Democratic and reverses, from which original gains, upwards ago by death are coming with alarming rapidity and valuable timber lands are a prey to the flames.

☞ For Speaker of the House of Representatives, the most prominent gentlemen mentioned in connection with the Republican ranks are the following: Hon. Erwin G. Wakeley, of Sand county; Hon. Julia P. Sloan, of Lenawee county; Hon. Henry Howard, of St. Clair, and the Hon. Mr. Briggs of Kent county.

☞ Abram Known Ex Knave, one of wealthiest inhabitants of Charlevoix. A gross, was arrested at Paris for the thousands of acres of land, his 2,000 square logs, 2,000 thousand meters, 17,000 cannels, and 120,000 head of cattle. In case of war, he furnishes 1,000 soldiers and horses to the Prussian government.

☞ Antoine Cassois, an old pioneer and respected citizen of Grand Rapids, died last week after a short illness. He was born in Detroit in 1797, and lived it, that city until 1825, when he removed to Saginaw, where he resided until 1832, and has been removed to Grand Rapids. He was an Indian trader for many years.

☞ It is remarked by the Gilder's Age that Tilton has had more invitations to lecture this season than ever before. He has been offered as high as $500 a lecture if he would take it, and his total application cover about $20,000, but he has declined them all, thinking it wisely in to had taste to set himself up as exhibition to earn money out of the curiosity and sympathy recent events have created.

☞ Wisconsin went opposition last year by 15,000 majority; last one year of opposition management there was enough, and the State has come around to its publican rule by a majority of 10,000. So it will be whose love—present adverse results to the Republican cause are the forerunners of future blessings. Republicanism this year has to — suppose to conquer."

☞ Rev. Dr. Summerbell that Rev. Wm. Rice of Mason was many times entertained from the Methodist concern Mr. stopped into his comfort with a Rice-ful lady. He has recently, in the United Court at Mason, succeeded in proving Rice's contract was not the wife of the supposed husband and leaving Rice's home, children his forger husband, and a valuable lot in consequence been entered.

☞ Darkness and pecuniary troubles which have been approaching culmination for several years, reached it last September in the general panic coming of with the shipwreck upon the here and and the made Lake Erie to the Point in Sutherland. The result is rumored has made several efforts to secure landlords to release and assistance, but he has always secured such overtures.

☞ On the 15th of this month the King of the Sandwich Islands—or whole property consisting of the treasure of Hono—will sail in a United States vessel for Victoria, in this country. He will be accompanied by several Kanaka attendants, and will make an official visit to Queen Victoria, after which he will return to Honolulu. The two countries have been on the most friendly terms between the two nations. There will not be any Sandwich Islanders left in the country by Jan. 1st, and gain on to Washington, probably by way of Chicago.

☞ The population of Great Britain and Ireland as it now is stated in the Registrar General's returns to be, now, 29,712,000, or 700,000 more than a year ago. The increase continued at the rate of 1,000 a week. The population of Ireland is 5,424 only 91,000 more than in 1861. The population of England and Wales in 1874 is stated 24,000,000 being 6,000,000 more than double the population in 1811.

☞ It is said that General Butler proposes to form a new party in Massachusetts. It is certainly to be hoped that he will do so. And if his example were only to be followed by Butler-ites other States, now have been retarded by the, the people of his own excellent, the Republican party would be quite a respectable party. But as he all names have the one Butler party, a the principles of no one grab a nation, nothing from the treasure privileges, and reconstruction to every reverse referee.

☞ Work on the new State Capitol has progressed finely during the past season. The legislature Republican of the 15th session the progress of covering the workmen and the fine dome in the course of short, in the shape of finial ornament on the south east corner. The appropriations have been made the basis for this work, and Messrs Gibson & Co. have pushed it with energy. Last year the work reached Nov. 15th.

☞ The Muskegon, Wood and Reporter says about three hundred and fifty men are now employed on the Muskegon River and tributaries the coming winter. We shall not be in the least surprised if the number employed will reach four hundred before next month is out. The large amount is due to extra force to the different log markers and the timber exercised by cutting and putting into the streams this Winter.

☞ Some people are puzzled to know what Mad. Demorest's dress sewing establishment where she have the supervision of the New York Herald was a lunatic asylum. Horace's worst fears were soon set to rest when Mrs Axom while Ambassador of Russia, it is said had there. Does not about the treatment of Father Noah Axom and for Mrs Malcom act Roosevelt for the sum. The latter gives Brownsville Argus $2,750. Thirty Hartford was particularly to him. One that he per-sonally witness in a letter written by Van Rensselaer and returned to us with Roosevelt's annotations.

☞ A book writer, speaking of affluent chemists that a woman can dial two pounds with a mince to which she can trust to say. On the barren sources of time, O, my sweet Hannah! I have found in this my year of great price and three hundred pounds of bosom." Mat Adeler, commenting on this extract, says: "I have no doubt that this is the case, and while I would not rudely tear the sweet poetic beauty of the picture that surrounded us, my experience teaches me that the woman who begin by talking in this sugary manner are nearly prone to throw stilletos and fat cried at their son's kinsman after marriage, and so grow at the pearl of great price because he comes to bed with his feet cold.

☞ A letter from New York refutes a gossip about some of the parties to the affair which has been, before yet, alluded to at the Brooklyn on Jan. The gossiper says that the part of "Mutual Friend" has decidedly risen upon Monroe, and from carpenter, the artist. Monroe looks on yourself then he did last year, and walks talks and moves about like a man who has suffered. But he is mad clear through and af-

Probable Tactics of the Democratic Congress This Winter.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The estimates for the next fiscal year will be at least $15,000,000 less than the estimates submitted last year, though they will be increased in excess of the appropriations made last winter. The deficiency of the revenue is rapidly increasing, and the members of the Appropriation Committee are already preparing for the time when will be brought before the house to fix that deficiency. It is not at all unlikely that the proposal the Democratic party will make when it has to deal with deficiency appropriations will be to abolish customs duties altogether. Those in favor of this measure also claim that such a proposition to the consumer to be relished by the people.

[Cremation of Lady Dilke.

The Berlin correspondent of a London paper writes: "The body of Lady Dilke, who died four weeks ago in London, was burned on the 12th instant at Dresden. The ceremony was performed in the former mortuary intended for burial purposes by Herr Siemens, and the relatives of the deceased lady personally designed to see or present a large number to consider more attentively the experiment. When the company had assembled with the request to offer up a mental prayer, the coffin was placed in the chamber of the furnace; six minutes after the coffin lid of fine mahogany was red hot, three minutes more and the coffin was full of flames, ten minutes more and the coffin was half burnt, another ten minutes and the flames began to crumble. Seventy-five minutes after the introduction of the coffin into the furnace all that remained of Lady Dilke and the coffin were six pounds of dust, placed in an urn. The brother-in-law of the deceased was present."

IN AID OF THE

Public Library of Kentucky,

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The undersigned would respectfully announce to the public generally, and more especially to the citizens of Charlevoix and vicinity, that they have purchased the entire stock of goods belonging to the late firm of Bennett & Co., and have added thereto a large and well selected stock of new goods, and are now prepared to offer to the public the best assortment of goods ever brought to this market, and at prices which defy competition. Having had many years experience in the business, and having bought our goods for cash, we feel confident that we can sell as cheap as the cheapest. Call and see us.

Yours truly,
BENNETT BROS.

Administrator's Sale.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - DEC. 5, 1874

☞ It is said that mackerel are now buying bears, panthers, badgers and other wild animals in the Saginaw Valley.

☞ Hon. John Webster Childs of Washtenaw, wants to be the stranger candidate for the U. S. Senate, against Zach Chandler.

☞ Great Britain is building an eighty ton gun. It will carry a 1,000 pound shot ten miles if it can have about 300 pounds of powder to give it a boost at the start.

☞ According to the census of 1874, as near as accurate tables, Michigan's present population is, in round numbers, 1,320,000 or an increase of 146,000 since 1870.

☞ Austin Blair still has an ardent desire to represent the State in the Senate of the United States. He is spoken of as a candidate against Mr. Chandler.

☞ In view of the Arctic expedition to be fitted out by the British Government Lady Franklin renews her offer of a reward of $10,000 for the recovery of the official records of Sir John Franklin's expedition.

☞ Tilton's "Tempest Tossed" has used up 14,000 pounds of paper already. The presses have been constantly running for four months, and are still running. It is good to be a "scandalous" Brooklynite.

☞ Governor Bagley has pardoned David Church, who was sentenced for manslaughter from Calhoun county, for ten years in the State Prison. He is said to be in the last stages of consumption.

☞ It appears that a trifling sum—$500,000,000—is waiting in the banks of the British Government for parties of the name of Townley. Miss T. came to America with a Mr. Lawrence in 1763. But that is all they know about them.

☞ The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Upset, and Prince Metternich are doing what they can to discourage gambling at Baden. Search'em say they broke two faro banks there, taking about $175,000 from those honest establishments.

☞ At the Democratic relocking in Lynchburg, Va., after the election returns the festivities were closed by Julian Kelly (Gen. Sheridan's rapid friend) who called for "One more good old Confederate yell," which was given with a will.

☞ A Chicago dispatch says the Grangers along the line of the St. Paul and Sioux City Railroad in Minnesota, have petitioned the authorities of the road to continue running trains, and so announce they to have trains run that they suggest that the fare be raised to five cents per mile.

☞ The Democracy is putting its best foot forward which is of course the cerebellum. The New York World is in prodidition as to the cabinet of the next President, who is to be Democratic (?) of course contains the names of at least one rebel general and several who were during the war, aiders and abetters of treason.

☞ "The man who beat Hatter" will will go down into history covered with glory. He is a political Wellington. The newspapers are publishing personal biographies of him, not referring to him as a great hero. His name is Charles F. Thompson.

☞ The infant son of the Duke of Edinburgh was baptized lately "Albert Alexander Alfred Ernest William." The sponsors were Queen Victoria, the Emperor of Russia, represented by the Duke of Connaught, the Prince of Wales, Crown Princess of Germany, and Duke of Saxe Coburg.

☞ In Liverpool, England, they have adopted a novel method to prevent drunkenness. At Mr. Gladstone's suggestion the papers published a list of the drunkards for the week. All who care for reputation, by this arrangement are made more circumspect in their indulgences. What effect would this plan have if cried in this country?

☞ The work of deepening and widening the Sault Ste. Marie canal is progressing as fastly as circumstances will permit. It is estimated that three years and another appropriation of $400,000 will yet be required to its completion. If 500,000 should be appropriated this sum will also be used, the extra amount in putting on the finishing touches probably. Since 1852 there has been expended in widening and deepening the canal, in pier work, and in work for the lock pit, placing lumber on the ground, etc., $450,000. In this work is included that of changing 2,500 feet of the old canal. And in converting 2,000 feet of the incompleted canal there has been expended $350,000.

☞ Hon. Q. Cannon, the Mormon Congressman is to be tried for polygamy and bigamy and lascivious cohabitation next December. Mormonism is on its last legs.

☞ Suffering from want of employment in New York City is likely to be terrible this winter. The Herald reports 75,000 men out of employment which is probably a low estimate.

☞ Mrs. General Sherman has presented her daughter, Mrs. Fitch, with a house in St. Louis, which she has furnished elegantly, while the General of the Army has added $10,000 in cash thereto, and when the rich, rare and elegant 400 wedding presents are taken into consideration, what young lady about to be married wouldn't be the daughter of the General of the Army?

☞ Curiel "treasury notes," payable three months after the entry of Don Carlos into Madrid, are offered in London at fifty per cent, but are not bought. The old money bags of London will not invest in Carlist notes payable in three months after the entry of Don Carlos into Madrid, until they have taken in the gold for a few millions of dollars worth of cotes they hold and which are to be paid six months after the reconstruction of the Southern Confederacy by the United States.

One indication of what an enthusiastic constituency will expect of the Democratic Congress soon to assemble is brought to the surface this morning by our Washington correspondent, who states in the dispatch that since the election "slave claims," being sanctified claims upon the Federal Government for liberated slaves, are being actively brought up, as high as $120 per claim being asked and paid.—Exchange.

☞ Fake estate, according to the documents in the New York Surrogate's office, shows that the receipts from the sales of property and collection of debts, together with interest for moneys received by the executrix, have been $954,425 74. The widow credits herself with $149,480 as amount of loss on sales; $14,554 08 on debts not collected; $124,759 85 as the amount of claims uncollected, and $21,616 97 as the amount paid to legatees, leaving $1,122,824 59 to be distributed to those entitled thereto subject to deductions of commission and expense of accounting.

☞ The opposition to Chandler, under the leadership of the Detroit Tribune is assuming proportions which bid fair to give the Senator a hard battle when the final contest comes. But we have not give up our hopes of his re-election, neither have we changed our opinion, previously expressed, that at this time Chandler is preeminently the best man for the position. We believe with our Traverse City contemporary that unless Republicans unite on Chandler a Democratic Senator from Michigan will be the result.

☞ A Shepherd, of Battle Creek, while hunting deer north of Howard City, lost a valuable hound. When Mr. Shepherd returned to his home in Battle Creek he was astonished to find that his dog had arrived ahead of him; and it is thought that the dog made the trip of 125 miles in about 24 hours.

☞ It is a mistake to speak of Massachusetts having gone Democratic at the last election. To be sure, Talbot, for Governor, who was personally obnoxious to a large class of Republicans, was defeated by Gaston, the Democratic candidate, who is popular with all classes. But upon the minor officers, upon whom there was no personal issue, and where the electors voted according to their party predilections, the Republicans had a majority of over 22,000.

☞ The most feature of a new plan on trial in the British Navy, for raising sunken ships, are closing hermetically the hatchways and all openings in the upper parts and pumping them dry. The air thus introduced rises toward the under side of the deck, and not being able to escape presses the water down and out through the holes made in the ship's bottom. The vessel by this means will be rendered buoyant and rise to the surface.

☞ On Saturday night the steamer Winslow, arrived at Detroit from Lake Superior with a cargo of over 600 tons of coke, barrel and ingot copper worth in the aggregate $292 000. She also had on board 150 tons of pig iron and a general assortment of merchandise. The total value of the boat and cargo is estimated at $440,000. So far as the copper is concerned this cargo is acknowledged to be the largest ever brought down from Lake Superior at any one time.

☞ Fake estate, according to the documents in the New York Surrogate's office, shows that the receipts from the sales of property and collection of debts, together with interest for moneys received by the executrix, have been $954,425 74. The widow credits herself with $149,480 as amount of loss on sales; $14,554 08 on debts not collected; $124,759 85 as the amount of claims uncollected, and $21,616 97 as the amount paid to legatees, leaving $1,122,824 59 to be distributed to those entitled thereto subject to deductions of commission and expense of accounting.

But we have not give up our hopes of his re-election, neither have we changed our opinion, previously expressed, that at this time Chandler is preeminently the best man for the position. We believe with our Traverse City contemporary that unless Republicans unite on Chandler a Democratic Senator from Michigan will be the result.

☞ The Canadian courts are going through the contested election cases in the Dominion Parliament with considerable rapidity. They manage these things better in Canada than with us. Contested election cases there are not settled by the legislative body which the contest-ants claim election, but are brought to regular trial in the courts. A decision against the candidate holding the certificate of election does not give his opponent the seat but makes a new election necessary. In the case of Sir John A. Macdonald, the court has just decided the election void, but said that personal bribery was not proven. The pertinency of this last point in the decision is explained by the fact that under the Canadian laws, Sir John Macdonald would have been forever disqualified from holding office if he had been proven guilty of that offense.

Local News.

South Arm is frozen over.

A Fresh stock of candies at the Drug Store of Dr. Lewis.

Graham flour at Carpenter & Bartholomew's

The depot at Petoskey has been completed, and one at Boyne Falls is now in process of construction.

CAPT. WAY had a barrel of flour stolen from the Lisher warehouse one day last week.

LOGS.—Geo. W. Esterly & Co., of this place, will get out 1,000,000 feet of hardwood logs this winter, besides a quantity of hemlock and basswood.

TAXES.—The rolls are in the hands of the several township treasurers, and at present every man to pay his taxes now, and save the percentage.

TOWNSHIP BOARD.—There will be a meeting of the Township Board at Myler Green's law office on Monday evening next.

LARSEN.—Robert Miller, Esq., of this place has leased his blacksmith shop to Davis Gillard, of Marion. Mr. Miller is forced to do this because of the serious and protracted illness of his wife.

NOTICE.—The telegraph operator at Charlevoix wishes to inform those boys and others, who throw stones and stones at the telegraph wires, that to break or otherwise obstruct a telegraph wire is a penitentiary offense.

Fresh fish at Carpenter & Bartholomew's

THE MASON county Record says the white of the locomotive of the construction train can now be heard, and there is no doubt of the completion of the road to Ludington next week, it now being within five miles.

CALL AT FOX, ROSE & BUTTARS' when you you are in town, whether you wish to buy anything or not, and if you are not convinced that they can sell as cheap, or cheaper, than any store in the region, trade elsewhere.

HENRY MORGAN, Esq., who lately left Charlevoix to engage in business elsewhere, returned this week with renewed energy and additional capital, and proposes to continue in business here. Besides getting out a large quantity of pine from his land near the railroad, for Nelson's mill, he will purchase shipping-wood, ties, etc., from the people around Pine Lake and South Arm.

"IN WHITTENBERG.—In our issue of Oct. 3d we published what we believed to be the truth concerning the "celebrated Shawnee orator" who had visited Charlevoix a short time previous. The article brought out much wahrd criticism from certain of the clergy, and others, and we determined to ascertain whether the "tutored savage" had been slandered or not. Accordingly, we addressed letters of inquiry to Sturgeon, Mich., where he claimed to reside, and to Kalamazoo College, of which institution he claimed to be a full graduate. From Sturgeon we were not able to get a reply to our questions, but from the authorities at Kalamazoo College we received a letter, which stated that Gillespie "never graduated at that institution, and was never even admitted to a College class as a member." Also that "he was there for a short time for the avowed purpose of studying for the ministry, but remained only for a little time, having very little power to study." Our informant further states that "he was regarded as having some Indian blood." In so far as we have misstated the facts relating to the identity or nationality of the individual, we respectfully retract; but we have evidence to prove that as a medical practitioner he is a Nothing; and the result of our investigations, is submitted as evidence of his hypocrisy.

THAT order at Carpenter & Bartholomew's is not yet gone and is selling at the very low price of 30 cents per gallon.

ATTACHED.—The case of the Norwood Highway Commissioners against John Otley, alluded to in our last issue, resulted in the conviction of defendant, who was fined $10 and costs. He has appealed the case, and secured the legal services of Hon. S. C. Moffatt. The action brought against him was for obstructing a highway laid out across his land; on claiming that it was not a legal highway.

Go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's to buy your clothing. Men's cassimere suits, $10 50; men's heavy overcoats, $8 00, boys, overcoats, $4; undershirts and drawers, 50 cents each.

ADVICE.—An exchange says, "If the times are hard stop your paper, but do not shorten the allowance for whiskey or tobacco. A good paper in a family is a great comfort to the wife and children, but that is no reason why you should provide them with a weekly luxury at the expense of a daily necessity."

THE Traverse Bay Progress says a steam saw mill is soon to be erected at Clam lake, Antrim county, by parties from Hillsdale, whose names we could not ascertain. They have purchased 350 acres of land along the lake, of the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad. 12,000 feet of hard timber daily is what the mill will be capable of cutting when completed.

WHOOP.—The Traverse Bay Eagle truthfully says:—The dog tax law like the prohibitory liquor law, should either be repealed or enforced. Laws that remain a dead letter upon our Statutes are worse than useless, and in case of the dog tax law, work great injustice to a part of the community.

We have received a copy of charles R. Brown's "Government of the State of Michigan, embracing an abstract of the Laws and showing the duties of State, county and township officers." As a work of reference it is valuable.

THE COUNTY FINANCES.—A final settlement has been effected between this county and the State, and the result shows a balance in our favor of only about $250, which will barely pay 50 per cent. of the county indebtedness to the several Townships. It is a lamentable situation—at least for the Township of Evangeline—which suffers severely for want of what is due her. The "non-commutable" condition of the books and the payment of our Asylum account by the Auditor General, explain the delay in settlement, and the small balance found in our favor. There is every probability that the delinquent tax list of 1874 from nearly every township will equal if not exceed that of last year, otherwise obstruct a telegraph wire is a penitentiary offense.

The article brought out much wahrd criticism from certain of the clergy, and others, and we determined to ascertain whether the "tutored savage" had been slandered or not. Accordingly, we addressed letters of inquiry to Sturgeon, Mich., where he claimed to reside, and to Kalamazoo College, of which institution he claimed to be a full graduate. From Sturgeon we were not able to get a reply to our questions, but from the authorities at Kalamazoo College we received a letter, which stated that Gillespie "never graduated at that institution, and was never even admitted to a College class as a member." Also that "he was there for a short time for the avowed purpose of studying for the ministry, but remained only for a little time, having very little power to study." Our informant further states that "he was regarded as having some Indian blood." In so far as we have misstated the facts relating to the identity or nationality of the individual, we respectfully retract; but we have evidence to prove that as a medical practitioner he is a Nothing; and the result of our investigations, is submitted as evidence of his hypocrisy.

Next to the question of the Papal supremacy in England raised by Mr. Gladstone, in the church circle, is the question of the validity of the Archbishop of Canterbury's baptism and confirmation. He was baptized during infancy by an old Scotch woman when he was supposed to be dying. He was confirmed when a young man by Bishop Bagot, who after-wards died and his infant baptism and confirmation could be had now only christened. He told him that he must be baptized again and then come and be re-confirmed. Mr. Tait, which was then "Canterbury's" name, refused. He has since ordained Three Hundred clergymen himself alone, confirmations are all declared invalid if his own was. The Bishop of Winchester has been asked to interfere but has declined. The re-opening of the question naturally agitates many of the Episcopal Church who received holy orders from the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Swearing her never been really reduced to a fine art in Wisconsin until recently. Even an old screecan will have occasional use for it. A writer says, in the columns of Prairie ing and prescribed the most horrible and pathetic witnesses of the last days of the ill fated city. When the workmen were digging in 1863 they struck into a small cavity the nature of which was of course a mystery to them, without breaking further into it they poured plaster of paris down the crevices that were already opened and as soon as the plaster had hardened, the crust of lave was carefully removed, and lo! the form of a human being in his death struggle, perfectly preserved. Buried in the lava that hardened about him his body has crumbled to dust, and left this wonderful mould. Several bodies have thus been reproduced—one of them with the features perfectly preserved, so that there is still some expression in the face. In one some parts are imbedded in the pumice and so female holds dying near each other are called mother and daughter. There is nothing at Pompeii more touching than the despair depicted in the attitude of this group. It was pleasant to get out into the narrow streets where the sun was glaring, and there we sought to forget the horrors of the museum."

☞ Enjoy the Christmas Turkeys, or trial for destruction can soon be applied.

☞ The completion of Sumner Hotel has caused new arrivals to come at that point.

☞ A reverend negro is preaching at Vicksburg Miss. on Sunday. A great many of both colors were black and killed and the subject had to be raised out below the coat collar on the ground.

☞ The Manistee Board of Supervisors repudiates the indebtedness of that county to Barry county in the payment of the Voorhees bond, on the ground that it was not legally and justly contracted. The matter will be brought before the county's decision.

☞ The commission of a notary public is to disappear. It has passed the Indiana Chamber of Deputies by an immense vote. The notary is practically useless, as nearly all the Indiana legislators, and it deserves to share in the sad fate of its fellow-officials.

☞ Gov. Bagley signed his own Thanksgiving and Manistee by doing himself a personal favor. About seven feet have already been taken out, and the coal of good quality has been struck. At that rate Governor Bagley will complete his coal by Pomeroy's vacation. Coal has been found near Dimondale.

☞ A strange story comes from New England: Mrs. W. H. Howard of Braintree, Mass., was lately walking in the streets of that town, ignorant of by her husband, when they met an ex-convict Plymouth, who was some time under administrative. Just as the Howards came abreast of the ruffian he gave a whoop which was to sudden in its effect upon Mr. Howard that she dropped dead at her husband's feet. She was a robust middle woman, and her death was pronounced by her physicians to be the consequence of fright.

☞ We have before and this side all important paper by Dr. R. D. Kedzie of the State Board of Health, upon the danger of poison from arsenical wall paper. It is demonstrated that the presence of arsenical coloring matter in wall paper tends to bring about catarrh, dyspepsia, neuralgia pain in the bones and joints enlarging chronic rheumatism, low fever, general debility etc. Cases are cited which show diseases traced directly to the presence of arsenical wall paper in the rooms occupied by the persons diseased, which disappeared when the cause was removed.

☞ A Washington special states that several prominent Democrats who have arrived there, express themselves freely to the effect that the burden of their party do not look upon the late political result as a Democratic victory, but as a rebuke visited with thrill, and will, some party, if whether they can make it a victory. They ascribe the Republican defeats to the general dissatisfaction of the people at that party, and do not look upon their democratic ones as persons upon whom the Democracy can rely to any extent, provided the Republican leaders give proper heed to the tenor of the elections.

☞ All who are any amount in a business a financial, or in a social point, are benefited as often as their names are brought before the public. How the press the unmeasurable advantages of advertising. It is the most effective and the most legitimate way to win it to become known in a new town. No person, in either ancient or modern times, has made his mark in a business, a political, or social point of view whose name had not become popular by publicity. Attempts to run up position of popularity could all are obscure who are not generally known, and how can a person in business become known who does not advertise?

☞ Every man who is in the habit of getting drunk should read this touching, perhaps truthful little story from the Detroit Free Press, and immediately reform: — Wednesday afternoon a half-drunken man named Coop, living in Canada, was wandering around the Potomac, accompanied by a big dog and having lots of money. Yesterday morning he was found in an alley sleeping a drunken sleep, and his dog was keeping watch over him and would allow no one to come near until the municipal officials had slept. The dog had been attached twice with a knife, and there were evidences in the alley, showing that three had come to rob the man and that the dog had fought them off."

CALENDAR FOR 1874.

Local News.

S. K. Bagley, postmaster at Atwood Antrim county, has resigned.

Logs.—I. H. Sillaway of Torch Lake will put out 2 000 000 of barkwood logs this winter.

Lake Up.—The steamer, Just made her last trip on Thursday, and has gone into winter quarters just above the bridge.

The trip between Grand Rapids and Chicago is now made in six hours and a half.

Go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's and buy a set of nice furs for a Christmas present.

Oysters.—D. S. Way, left a can of oysters on our table yesterday and desired us to state that he is selling them at the very low price of forty cents per can.

Returned.—Wm. A. Morris, formerly of this county, but late of Utah Lake, has returned to his farm in Marion, where he proposes to remain.

It now appears that Wm. Ball has a majority of about 27 over Wm. Mitchell, the Eighth Congressional District, of which Emmet County forms a part.

The Northport people are discussing the question: "Resolved that no more wood bonfires is an injury to Leelanau County."

Trance.—Parties from Montreal recently arrived at Petoskey who are said to own and propose getting out large quantities of square timber in that vicinity.

Notice.—The town is hereby notice that the law relating to north running at large will be taken up and strictly forced. Keep up your cattle if you do not want them impounded.

If you want a ball of goods cheap, go to Fox, Rose & Buttars.

Crimpsfield Chronicles.

Another Arrival.—Mrs. Dr. Cook, of Traverse City, arrived on the Grand Traverse Herald, a new girl baby.

Torch Lake.—We expect that a short time during the beginning of the week at the Palmer House, Torch Lake. Fifty true models of magnitude to point for Frank Lewis and his lady. Their many ways of "making it lively" for their guests make them a host and hostess in whom the public will always find their choice.

Enterprise.—For the benefit of the citizens of Charlevoix county a company is organized; the process of [illegible] proprietion bills has already been commenced, and no more fees will be paid toward calling the attention of the [illegible] our wants. Shall anything [illegible] citizens will make a start?

Prices marked down to cost for cash by Fox, Rose & Buttars.

Dear Snow.—The Big Rapids Pioneer says: A severe snow storm prevailed during last Saturday night and Sunday morning at Northport of Clam Lake and in the vicinity there and Petoskey the [illegible] from two to three feet deep. The [illegible] ing train from Petoskey, which was due here at 1:05 P.M. was delayed by snow so that it did not reach Big Rapids [illegible] 4 P. M. WORK.

Strong arms keep the hands from rusting,
Work holds the soul in healthy quietness;
Through it the heart and the soul keep the body in tune.

Each life has some power for conquest;
Each is more than a helot in its passing;
Some sick but it long in fellowship reaper,
Let the heart of labor be strong.

While the days are dreamless and waning.

Through the endless life blessing following,
Those harvests gained through labor,
Blessing the distant hour, and time—the future.

What the hand has to do but it do with its might;
Strong nerves keep the cheeks from sinking.

Who is the best man to represent Michigan interests in the Senate? If we are to think aside just now and take a man who has made no record, or a bold one of one, then of course Zachariah Chandler is out of the question. The Papal Struggle in Germany.

The crowning and widespread discussion concerning the burning of the pastoral letter to ordinaries upon the evil allegiance of Roman Catholics which have resulted from the publication of Mr. Gladstone's pamphlet, and attention again to the history of the contest between the government of Germany and the Roman Curia of the honorable. The question at issue to Germany now becomes of any date a practical one in any country of Europe. We therefore present a brief outline of the history of the struggle between religion and civil authority.

Until the promulgation of the Vatican decrees in 1870, Roman Catholics in Prussia were as free as any other sect. They Bishops had control of parochial resources and the ecclesiastic party had great influence in Court. In 1850 the new Constitution in Prussia gave all citizens complete immunity in the exercise of their religious convictions. The Ultramontane party, which had first to recognize a secular government before any thought of claiming the privileges of the Church, was thus allowed to organize and develop its strength. In the Parliament of 1870 the Ultramontane party fancied a danger in the temporal power in the growth of a great German empire under Protestant leadership; and as most of the members lived at work to arouse an enmity between South and North Germany, and cause a breach in the German empire.

In 1869 the Vatican Council was held at which the Prussian Bishops attended. It promulgated those famous decrees declaring the dogma of infallibility and the supremacy of the Pope over all things. This did not long the government of Prussia into collision with the church authorities, and the powers of the Papacy at once was made Napoleon, who had been the protector of the temporal power of the Pope, lost a prestige and then an exile. Rome, no longer defended by French bayonets, was entered by Victor Emmanuel and made the capital of united Italy, and Germany became a free from the authority of the Pope and Council of Rome. He refused to do so, and the Ultramontane war upon the German government was begun at once. In this conspiracy the sorcery of Jesuits was put into active work by the agents of Ultramontanism, and the arts of the Jesuits were employed among the Roman Catholic people a feeling of bitter hostility to the government.

The first legislation to punish and prevent Ultramontane usurpation was the act of December 10, 1871, which enabled a special officer for clergymen to insist upon the oath of allegiance to the constitution. In the early months of 1872 the act regulating the Jesuits was adopted and the decree for the expulsion of that order was enforced. In the same year a law was enacted for the inspection of parish schools by the state. It was to this last law that the Roman hierarchy made the most violent opposition, declaring that the decree of infallibility be taught in the schools and absolutely bring the Catholic teachers who refused to teach it. This resulted in opposition called out from the German Parliament in the act of 1873 for the Jesuits and known as the Falk decrees. The first provided for the appointment of civil officers to fill vacancies in the ecclesiastic offices when the Church refuses to present candidates for public purposes. The first reserves to the state the power of a Catholic organism in Germany was the victory of Prussia in the war of 1866. That victory drove Catholic Austria out of Germany, and placed Protestant Prussia at the head of the German Bund. The Prussian Church was the leader of the Ultramontane party in the German Parliament, and by this party the Ultramontane Catholics took advantage of this to begin an active propaganda in the interests, and to rally them to the standard of the Pope's temporal power. Female Democratic Journalism.

The Independent Press, a strong-minded" sheet published at Grand Rapids by a trio of strong minded females, has already established for itself a record of lofty purposing that of any Democratic organ extant. Nearly every issue contains base and ungrounded attacks upon the President which any male journalist of that party would blush to place before the public eye. The last issue of that paper contains an article purporting to be original, which is only a muscle of its bile. It says:

"President Grant has, in his official career by spinning to the highest offices those who had given their valuable gifts. Those then he has been continually a shed head, taking gifts from everybody. On railroads and steamboats he has habitually past in line, and at hotels he has regularly got off without paying for his board and lodging. At the same time he has been steadily becoming rich."

The first portion of the quotation was cast in the same mould from which emanate a majority of the Democratic slanders. It is falsity has been repeatedly established, and can be re-established if necessary. The charge of "swellhendism" also falls, faceless when intelligent readers recognize it. In every case when the President has gone abroad the courtesies of Railroad and Steamboat Companies have been extended to him, as a fitting and appropriate compliment to the Chief Magistrate of the United States. The charge of "gift-taking" is a well-worn and ever useful Democratic cudgel of a use, as harmless as it is false and scurrilous. No, even the New York Sun has ever given an individual case where the President has ever encroached the prerogative of accepting personal testimonials of friendship which are common among friends. If he has received valuable gifts in token of his great services, the occurrences date prior to his occupancy of his present office, and no candid reason can be given why he should not receive them. Again the female says:

"What a contrast to the conduct of Grant is afforded by that of the last Democratic President the much abused Jas. Buchanan! He was scrupulously careful to make no gifts to receive nothing from his friends; he gave away, from his means and earnings, more than himself by private benefactions or purposes at the expense of the Government, than were ever got out of his own pocket."

Indeed we say "what a contrast between the eminent and patriotic general, and the man who delivered his country's arms into the hands of the enemy, and would have followed by the betrayal of the country had his train of power continued long enough! Much Abused! This sounds not unlike a few samples of Southern journalistic spleen that have come under our notice. She says further that "Buchanan drew nothing from the Treasury but his salary." Neither has Grant drawn one penny but what has been provided for by the Constitution and the law.

This female Don Quixote of the Democratic retinue press can afford to lash the President even if she does depart from facts inasmuch as she wears the garb of womanhood, which is a broad work against the manner of expression which she launches out against the President and Administration. The people have placed their seal of grateful recognition upon General Grant, and he is proof against such vile attacks as the one from which we quote.

☞ Congress is in session, but has done nothing of great interest yet. We will keep our readers posted on Congressional news of importance.

☞ The coming Legislature will, in all probability repeal the Prohibitory Liquor laws and the office of County Superintendent of Schools.

☞ A letter from Archbishop Manning was read in all the churches of his diocese on the 29th, in which he says those who decline to accept the doctrine of papal infallibility cease to be Catholics.

☞ The Grand Rapids Eagle is now reveling in "another harrow!" In the alleged appearance of an old lady lately deceased who was a weaver and since her demise has been seen sitting at the loom where she used to work.

☞ The "Answers to Correspondents" fellow of the Chicago Inter-Ocean has gone crazy. When his intellect fled, abandoned him his base, there were found before him these queries: "Is it correct to say 'pass these volumes?'" and "what is the plural of 'tailor's goose' and 'daddy longlegs?'"

☞ There is a suspect that the Titus-Beecher suit will fall through.

☞ It is a suspicious omen. But the last news from the stations for obesity. Its traits of character clear weather and a successful observation. The first report is an English season in India. It will be some weeks before any of the American expeditions are heard from, and the public will regret most sincerely any mishap to Lord Wales's or Pelix.

☞ The Mansfield returned from Europe by the steamship Britain, Friday. On the way home the ladies sickbed the idea of sitting at the same table with the brazen image, and complained to the captain to that effect. His reply was that it was his business to treat politely and protect in their rights as passengers all persons who behave with propriety on board his ship.

☞ A brace of negro preachers in Elberton, Georgia, recently engaged in a dispute, while sitting in the pulpit, as to which should conduct the services. In the course of the argument one of them called the other a li—l liar, and then they clinched. The congregation thought at first they were wrestling in prayer, but when the little wads of wool began to fly over the pulpit they knew the tussel was deadly. It required the efforts of all the brethren to part them.

☞ Somebody sent out a rumor that Hon Lewis Lull escaped, while his officer was taking him back from court, where the petitioner for a habeas corpus in behalf was denied, to his comfortable quarters on Blackwell's Island. The report was a canard, of course, and a silly one. Why should Tweed try to escape? Isn't he the Hon three too? And isn't he treated like a prince? He is no common thief, neither is he set to breaking stone.

☞ An exchange says: "Zeph Chandler's existence of re-election to the U. S. Senate are beyond question, now. Austin Blair has come up on the opposition side, and Austin is enough to turn the stomach of any Republican." There seems to be a peculiar flatness in putting Blair forward as the opposition and "reform" candidate. He pocketed the salary "black-jar" grab; while Chandler promptly returned it to the Treasury, almost before ink was dry with which the infamous bill was written.

Some lady crusaders having crusaded a saloon in Hobart, Ind., opposed their prayers with swearing, and they had him arrested for profanity. The justice said that the case to hand fixed the character of

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - DEC. 26, 1874

☞ Congress is asked to appropriate $ 150,000 for the improvement of the Illinois River.

☞ Nineteen children living in Livingston county boast of having the same father and mother.

☞ It is proposed by some members in Congress to reduce the President's salary to $25,000, the old rate.

☞ A gigantic lobby is said to be present in Washington to secure favorable action upon the Northern and Southern Pacific railroads and the cotton tax-refunding scheme.

☞ The world came to an end on Friday—at least the Adventists said it would. It is still a pretty good sort of a world to live in, albeit it has much of sorrow and misery in it.

☞ The daily that is to burn at Lansing during the session of the legislature, it is rumored, is established in the interests of the liquor sellers of the state and will labor for the repeal of the prohibitory law.

☞ New York originates fifty-five to sixty tons of mail matter daily. The efficiency of the postal service of the country is increasing. In 1853 one letter went wrong in each 570; in 1874 only one in 1,000.

☞ We understand that the state central committee of the Prohibition party have resolved on making an effort to raise $ 15,000 to pay for eighteen agents to assist in the work of thoroughly organizing the party throughout the State.

☞ The Prosecuting Attorney of Huron County has been instructed by the Secretary of State to prosecute the Supervisor of Caseville Township for failure to make census returns of his township to the County Clerk.

☞ Paris has decided to put upon the crowned Venditrix Coronæ, a statue of the First Napoleon in Roman costume. This has given rise to the rumor that he was to appear as an Unshman, it having been stated that the Latin Corporal was to appear in his toga.

☞ The U. S. Supreme Court has disposed of a number of cotton claims against the government by deciding that cotton bought of the so-called Confederate government was subject to confiscation, because its purchase tended to aid the rebel cause, and that government being a conspiracy, had no right to make contracts.

☞ Wilbur F. Storey, editor and proprietor of The Chicago Times, was married on Wednesday, Dec. 2, to Mrs Eureka C Pearson a widow thirty-five years of age Mr Storey is twenty years her senior. Immediately after the ceremony he is said to have decided her a half interest in The Times which, as it is valued at one million of dollars, makes a neat little marriage gift of half a million.

☞ The small boys in Vallejo, Cal. tested moral or religious instruction. The Vallejo Independent of Oct. 7, says: "A little boy scarcely six years old was standing on one of the principle corners up street yesterday crying piteously. One of our officers approached him and asked him what was the matter. The youngester blurted out: 'I don't know where my father is. I told the d—d wacker not to go too far or he would loose me I'."

☞ A careful observer at Washington reports quite confidently that no measure providing for resumption of specie payment by contraction of the currency can be passed, and no radical and strong bill designed to accomplish specie payment by speedy and direct methods is likely to prevail. But he thinks a moderate bill, which will not disturb the volume of the currency materially nor embarrass business and industrial interests, which will lead steadily though slowly toward the desired end, will stand a good chance of success.

☞ Two burglars, named Douglas and Mosher, were shot one night recently in Hoosikine, while attempting to burglarize a house. Mosher was killed instantly, but his companion lived long enough to confess that himself and dead rival were interested in the abduction of little Charlie Ross, of Philadelphia, but he could not now tell the whereabout of the boy. A later dispatch to the Detroit Evening News from which paper we glean the above states that the child had been recovered. If this is true it will prod a ray of joy and glad ness into the hearts of every father and mother who love their little ones.

☞ What is 33 cents a bushel cheaper in New York this year than it was last year, but still dear. Pan. Minnesota. It is only 9 cents cheaper than last year. The reason is in the price of transportation, which is twenty-four cents less than last year. Although the North West the clothes in sense at the market it is to a large extent compensated for by the reduction of freights.

☞ Germany has launched her seventh ironclad and is pushing on in April she will launch another. South also projected a fleet of twelve armored corvettes of 3,000 tons each, for harbor defense. Even with these additions her navy is small compared with that of other European powers. England has thirty-eight ironclads, eighteen of which are turret ships. France has twenty-eight and Italy, Russia, Austria and Turkey have fifteen each.

☞ The developments of the Von Arnim trial, which has just been concluded, amply justify the original arrest, and show that Bismarck was neither a blunderer nor a coward in his action. Count Von Arnim lacks a grand guilty of very serious malfeasance in office as the diplomatic representative of the German Government, and his sentence seems a very light one which is only three months. The result appears to be a rather personal triumph for the Chancellor of the German Empire.

☞ Miss Cushman is said to have made more money than any other American actor except Forrest. Her wealth is estimated at a quarter of a million. This may be too liberal a rate, but it is to be remembered that her engagements have brought of late years at least $400 a night. Other stars, however, have done well Madame Nilsson is immensely rich, while Joe Jefferson, Chanfrau and other veteran comedians are in independent positions.

☞ A Washington dispatch says: General Butler has at last disclosed himself privately in some of his friends. He tells them that, in his opinion, the republican party, as such, has cast its last presidential vote; that disorganization is certain. He is looking forward to other things, and the two great measures upon which he intends to plant himself are protective tariff and paper money. The first with an eye to the east and the last as a bait to catch the west."

The Empress Josephine's Handkerchief.

A correspondent of the Paris American Register writes, "I have so often heard French persons criticise the unmanageness of English and American ladies to manoeuvre, in the use of the feminine toilet, that I was quite delighted a few days ago, to perceive some old chronicles to that effect that it was impossible for the French to compete as products as we. Un- reason of the Empress Josephine's handkerchief will suffice to show how much some women occasionally needed outward conversation. An action was brought once upon a time against one the stage, even in the most tearful moments of the play would have been somewhat fully himself; and it was only in the beginning of the present century that a celebrated actress, Mlle Duchesnois, dared to appear with a handkerchief in her hand. Having to speak of this handkerchief in the course of the piece she could never summon enough courage to call it by its true name, but referred to it as a light tissue. A few years later a translation of one of Shakspeare's plays by Alfred de Vigny having been acted, the word handkerchief was used for the first time on the stage amidst cries of indignation from a great part of the house. I doubt if even to this day Prose chignitre would barry handkerchiefs if the wife of Napoleon I. had not given the signal for publishing them. The Empress Josephine, although really lovely, had ugly teeth. To conceal them, she was in the habit of carrying small handkerchiefs, adorned with costly laces, which she continually raised gracefully to her lips. Of course all the ladies of the Court followed her example, and handkerchiefs have rapidly become an important and costly part of the feminine toilet; so much so that the price of a single handkerchief of the trousseau of the Duchess of Edinburgh would make the fortune of a necessitous family."

FIFTH AND LAST GIFT CONCERT

Public Library of Kentucky.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The management have determined to have the drawing of the Fifth and Last Gift Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky on the fifth day of November next. We believe that all the tickets will be sold, and that the drawing will be a full one; but whether we are sold or not, the drawing will take place certainly come off on the day appointed.

The general object of this effort is to call a meeting of the ticket-holders at the Public Library Hall, on some day after the drawing—to be appointed by the trustees—at which new arrangements in connection with the concert will be submitted for approval, and the new committee of the gift concert will be elected. We will also submit a detailed statement of the receipts and disbursements of the concert, so far as the same can be made up, and the ticket-holders will have an opportunity of hearing and examining the vouchers, and otherwise satisfying themselves that the affairs of the concert have been fair and honorably conducted. Every ticket-holder has been given by the drawing—but little more than a month remains for the sale of the remainder of the tickets, and whatever is done must be done promptly.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Charlevoix, holden at the Probate office in the village of Charlevoix, on Thursday, the twenty-fifth day of November, in the year one thousand, eight hundred and seventy-four.

Present,—Hon. Richard Cooper, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of John Noble, late of the Township of Marion, county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Alice Noble, widow of said deceased, praying for reasons therein set forth, that administration of the estate may be granted to Bernard Burns, of Charlevoix county, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the eighteenth day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of the Probate Court then and there to be holden, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county of Charlevoix, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. RICHARD COOPER, (true copy.) Judge of Probate.

COURT.—Judge Ramsdell has adjourned the Charlevoix Circuit Court until the 20th of January, and Emmet until the 28th. The official notices will appear next week

FRESH Oysters and Hominy at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

THE Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad, the proposed terminus of which is Cheboygan, finding itself on such high land that it is making to get down and follow its present route, the Company have made up their minds to back up, and are negotiating with the G. R. & I. Company for the privilege of using their track.

CHRISTMAS passed off as cheery as a marriage bell; everybody enjoying themselves, whether in the family-gathering, the ballroom, or behind the merry sleigh-bells. In fact, Christmas in Charlevoix was observed in good, old-fashioned style. Chanfrau's party was a success, passing off with an unpleasantness, and plenty of genuine enjoyment.

THE newly elected Prosecuting Attorney of Emmet County, Ford, who was driven from Elk Rapids, and also from Northport for selling liquor, has, by virtue of his high office, commenced liquor prosecutions at Petoskey. In return, the "dealers" with whom he has meddled say he has grossly violated the revenue laws by using concealed liquor, and they propose to turn the tables on him

CARPENTER & Bartholomew have left a few more pairs of those Sheep Skettie Over Shoes.

AN extraordinary effort is being made by our citizens to induce Congress to make a appropriation for the improvement of Pine River, and, it is thought, with fair prospect of success. As the matter rests now, everything stands in an indefinite sort of shapeless uncertain expectancy, business is stagnant, and the "blues" are depicted on the features of our business men. But though the clouds we discern a ray of sunshine, which will soon lighten up everything, and set the ball in motion.

LADIES fare at Carpenter & Bartholomew's at cost. Call and see them.

DEER are becoming thick in this vicinity. On the peninsula between South Arm and Pine Lake one settler has killed seven since the first snow. Benjamin Rice, of Marion, has killed two lately within three miles of this village, and hunters are out after more. The law prohibits the killing of deer after January first.

A Petition is being circulated by citizens of Antrim and Kalkaska counties for presentation to the Legislature of this State, praying that body to attach a small strip of land lying north of Round Lake, south of Torch Lake and west of Torch river, at present attached to Kalkaska county, to this county. The object of the move is to enable the citizens of Antrim county to legally assist in constructing a bridge across Torch river for general convenience, as at present all persons living east and northeast of Round lake are compelled to make the circuit of Round and Elk lakes in order to reach this point, when by the construction of a bridge across the head of Torch river, the distance would be much diminished.—Traverse Bay Progress.

MANSFIELD'S REPORT.—It may have appeared to some that the statement of the Charlevoix tonnage was included in Col. Mansfields Report, from the fact that we included it in the table of last week. The figures were taken from our Marine list and added to Col. Mansfield's figures, in order to show the contrast.

Mad Dog.

There has been considerable excitement in town during the past few days on the appearance and doings of a supposed mad dog. The dog first made his appearance in Elmwood township, last Sunday morning among the pigs and poultry of Mr Gardner, biting the pigs and scaring geese and snapping at and tearing the clothes of two or three members of Mr Gardner's family, but biting none of them or him. The dog was here shot at and wounded, but made his escape, nor was seen after discovered at the house of a neighbor, Mr. Kilpatrick, where he first bit a pig and afterwards Mrs Kilpatrick carrying and tearing her foot in a fearful manner. From here he went to the house of another neighbor, where he bit one or two dogs, and then started towards Traverse City. It was not in the road by Mr. Cowan's saw, horses and sleigh. The dog refused to give the road and Mr. Cowan drove over him but without injuring him. The dog then continued to town and attacked and bit a little girl by the name of Higgins, quite severely in her foot. Time elapsed about noon on Sunday and the dog was seen not eight of, but in the vicinity of Mr. John Cook was passing along the sidewalk in the vicinity of the Bay House on his way to church the animal sprang at him and seizing him by the foot, tore his boot in pieces and lacerated his foot badly. The next morning a girl living at Center Germain's, whose name we have not learned, was also bitten in her nose. In the meantime some five or six dogs are known to have been bitten, and many others sport likely were. The supposed rabid animal was finally shot on Monday. To the credit of those bitten we believe, with the exception of Mrs. Kilpatrick, were attended to by Drs. Ashton & Kneeland within a very short time after and the wounds thoroughly cauterized. Mrs Kilpatrick was attended about 24 hours after being bitten. There seems to be many doubts as to whether the animal was really suffering with hydrophobia, and it it quite likely was not, but be that as it may, the fact remains that at least four persons were attacked and severely bitten by a savage and ferocious cur, and that there are not less than 100 dogs in Traverse City, If not as ferocious and that no one of these worthless and dangerous animals have their owners paid the tax required by law. Of all the dogs in town only three have paid a license tax We call upon the legal authorities to do their duty and see that the law is enforced at once.

FIFTH AND LAST GIFT CONCERT
—IN AID OF THE—
Public Library of Kentucky,
A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The announcement now determined to have the drawing of the Fifth and Last Gift Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky on the 4th of November next. We believe from all the interest we have heard, and that we are selling of the last one, but whatever all are sold or not, the drawing will certainly take place on the day appointed.

The special attention of the public is called to the fact that the Library is for the benefit of all the people of Kentucky, and the arrangements in connection with the concert are approved by the Trustees. The supervision of the counting of the tags representing copies of tickets sold. While there is certain necessity for the presence of Judges, Trustees, or public officers at the drawing, the presence of all are especially earnest request, as the same could be attended with great confusion to those unfortunate persons would attend this meeting and are said for business and the public fair and impartial the distribution must be.

Every arrangement has been made for the drawing—the little boxes that contain the tags are of the smallest size, and whatever is done must be done promptly.

TOLD AT NIGHTFALL.

It was a stormy September evening. Our atmosphere and my respected self—Charles Billingsbear, gunsmith—were sitting in the front bay window of his delightful little villa at Prescott near Rome. Both over the rounded hope of wealth now amid a fine old antique. Beneath a heavily the gloomy Campagna stretched like a dead sea, and without the villa all the dear, unfortunate bloodshed lull, slowly, slowly falling.

Day and I had been old friends and schoolfellows in England. He was then a poor lad, and I was a year or two younger, but the kindly feeling between us had ripened into friendship for me all the longer and stronger for his reverential. He was a poor lad, and I was a rich one, but we were equal.

I may as well say at once that I am a gentleman, and that I have always been so, or at least I have never done anything to forfeit my claim to the title. I have had my faults, and I am not going to conceal them. I have been a spendthrift, a gambler, a duellist, a libertine, a drunkard, and a good deal else that is bad, but I have never been a coward, and I never, by word or deed, took an unfair advantage of any man. I have been a sinner, but I have never been a hypocrite. I have had my own way in all things, and I have never been ashamed of it. I have had my own way in all things, and I have never been ashamed of it. I have had my own way in all things, and I have never been ashamed of it.

Day was a poor lad, and I was a rich one, but we were equal. He was a poor lad, and I was a rich one, but we were equal. He was a poor lad, and I was a rich one, but we were equal

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - JAN. 2, 1875

☞ Congress adjourned on the 23d inst., to meet again on the fifth of January, 1875.

☞ Senator Carpenter, of Wis., has been elected President pro tem. of the Senate, vice President Wilson, being unable to perform the duty, owing to ill health.

☞ The quadruplex system of telegraphy—sending four messages over one wire simultaneously, was successfully tested on the long circuit between New York and Buffalo. Two hundred and thirty-three messages were sent and received over a single wire in an hour.

☞ Some White Pigeon men claim to have secured a patent for preserving butter and other perishable articles fresh and sweet without the use of ice, by simply packing packages with the pulp of pasley wood which is furnished in sheets suitable for the purpose.

☞ A Bay City business man recently gave his note payable in 60 years, and one of the Bay City Banks discounted it. The note was not discovered until the maker of the note asked the banker if he knew a man that note would become due. He had taken it for granted that it was good 60 days.

☞ The Hon. Geo. H. Jerome and ex-suite, arrived at Detroit on the 18th, with 15,000 saloon brought from California. Only three fell dead on the journey. The horses are sixty days old. Mr. Jerome was summoned away by telegram, but his assistants left again for Sacramento where the fair are to be placed in an Arabic River.

☞ So small a ratio only as the weighing of postage stamps both have consisted, clerks in the Government cost of plant $1,000,000 or 3 per cent. of the amount of stamps sold in a year. The department has never been able to ascertain the values who are engaged in it but has learned enough to know that to be a counterfeiter becomes unprofitable.

☞ President McMahon has decided to have a military display on a grand scale during the coming spring, for the purpose of testing the efficiency of both the artillery and infantry in military tactics and has given orders to the various commanders to attend to the preparations for a series of manœuvres, to be participated in by the whole French army, which will probably take place in May. It is expected that many foreign military officers will be present to witness it.

☞ A letter to the Eagle informs it that Yankee Robinson, the well known showman, especially well known to most has invented a machine that bids fair to make a millionaire of him. It is a contrivance that will hoist any kind of rolling stock on railroads on the track, and in a few minutes. Working models are now on trial in Chicago.

☞ Eugenie recently went to see Victoria and Windsor Castle was the scene of the visit. A splendid suite of rooms was fitted up for the guest, she was allowed sugar in her tea, and everything was done to make her comfortable. As the Empress of Russia recently sent to see Victoria, with a large retinue of the attic and drank cold tea out of the nose of the teapot these attentions to Eugenie are the more noticeable.

☞ Governor Dix signalizes the closing days of his term of office by doing one excellent thing and refusing to do one bad thing. He has confirmed the action of Mayor Vance of New York city in removing the two Commissioners of Charities and Corrections, Brown and Steen, by whose connivance Tweed was given such extraordinary privileges as a convict on Blackwell's Island, and he has refused to pardon Edward S. Stokes, the murderer of Jim Fisk. There was great pressure brought to bear upon him to take the reverse action in each of these cases but he has done his duty faithfully in both. The result is that Tweed will be compelled to resume his prison uniform, take his meals with the other prisoners, and be treated in other respects as the other convicts are. The refusal to pardon Stokes makes it certain that he will serve out two years more of his sentence, as Governor-elect Tilden is known to be decidedly against his pardon.

☞ The wildest men who have escaped to the Black Hills and are now among them, are invaders who have no claim upon the mercy of the and men or the consideration of anybody. They entered the [illegible] in the face of the protest of the [illegible] against the laws of the country, and the decrees of the [illegible] government can compel [illegible] the number of them [illegible] in the Black Hills [illegible] troops have been ordered to discourage their start and deter others from entering some of the Indian agents are now [illegible] the white miners, being accompanied by military forces.

☞ The acquisition of Alaska by the United States, says the Republican, has been the occasion of a great deal of ridicule, and the grateful worthlessness of the territory has been very generally admitted. It appears, however, that the purchase may result in quite a fortunate one. The [illegible] after having cried for a home and years in bound are prepared to [illegible] their treasures, pulled by engrating and in looking around over the [illegible] for some place of settlement which shall at once be habitable, possess a comfortable climate, and at the same time be [illegible] of home, they have hit upon Alaska. The report of the commissioners they sent out is entirely satisfactory, and they insist that the country is not only capable of enabling a life, but also profitable to settlers.

☞ The Americans have also been generous in their aid, and recently my friend, John Anderson, of New York sent me $1,000.

I repeat it. I have asked nothing, and have always known how to conform myself to my circumstances. The fact however, that my son Mesotti (who may have been deceived, but who still shares my fullest confidence), having become involved in pecuniary embarrassment, was obliged to negotiate a loan on my security with the bank of Naples, has disclosed my want of funds, and suggested to some of my Italian and foreign friends, the propriety of coming to my relief. I have accepted the generous offer of Dr. Ilion, but yet realized that of my friend Anderson of $1,000, already received; an amount of 1,000 francs from the municipality of Reggio Calabria; one for the same amount from the municipality of Salerno; 1,000 francs from my friend Signor Dellbanni, of Milan; 100 francs from the Workingmen's association of Gussalia; 200 francs from Signor Paulo Cadei; five francs from Giulio Mancinelli, a laborer; and 500 francs from the municipality of Velletri. All the rallies to make me rich and to place me in a position where I ought to decline any further subscriptions, and especially those from associations of workingmen, of whose sympathy I am justly proud, but which, coming from those whose resources are greatly [illegible] than mine, I consider it a sin to accept.

To remain as we then, to express my most profound gratitude to my benefactors.

G. GARIBALDI.

☞ It is due to the Indian Queen sent say that it is not responsible for [illegible] Charlevoix, Norwood road on south line, two acres cleared at the junction of the State and Norwood road. Price, $1,500.

123 Acres 14 miles from Charlevoix; half mile on Pine Lake; good log house; four acres cleared. Price, $1,000.

10 Acres 3 miles from Charlevoix; two acres cleared. Price, $300.

175 Acres three and a half miles from Charlevoix; 70 acres into timothy; good barn Jacob River; legal fences. Price $1,750.

284 Acres on State road 5 miles from Charlevoix; two small brooks running through this; no improvement. Price, $1,136.

180 Acres 5 miles from Charlevoix on Co. road; heavy growth of hardwood timber; brook. Price, $360.

167 Acres 5 miles from Charlevoix; between Antrim and Ironton No. 1 pine on this, balance mostly hemlock and maple. $300.

80 Acres 2 miles from Charlevoix, 40 rods from Pine Lake; lake shore road passes through one end. Town road through the other; timber, maple. $480.

120 Acres 3 miles from Charlevoix, on Ironton road; front brook on this; no improvements. $360.

Farms & Farming Lands

Bought and sold on commission.

We are now preparing an Abstract of Titles of Emmet County. It will be completed in a few weeks and we can then furnish Abstracts on short notice.

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable lots, those of land in the county for farming purposes which we offer at very low figures.

No. 1. 80 acres. First rate farming land, situated 21 miles from Little Traverse bay, four well fenced, with orchard and maple; split rails enough. Logs will be sold very cheap. Eighth of section 20, Town 36 North, of Range 6 west.

No. 2. 40 acres. Sou of nw section 10 Town 34 North, of Range 6 west. 30 miles from Petoskey City, with 10 acres cleared small log house; will be sold at a bargain.

No. 3. 156 acres. N½ of ne¼, and ne¼ of nw¼ of east half of section 36. Will be sold in separate descriptions or in a body. Has a large creek running the whole length, with good water powers. Well improved, and will be sold cheap for cash. This is one of the best chances in the country for a person wishing to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many descriptions of Farming lands near Petoskey City, which we will sell at reasonable prices. Some of the Lands have old fashion improvements, and a can be made into farms.

Those of our subscribers owing us on account, may bring us wood and apply it on their subscription

CHANGE.—F. J. Lewis has changed the name of his hotel at Torch lake from "Palmer House" to "Lewis House."

PURCHASED.—Newton Balch, of this village, has purchased of D. H. Norris, his residence on Main street, opposite the residence of M. J. Stockman

CHOICE Michigan dried apples, cheap at Fox Rose & Buttars's.

BIG.—Hon. John S. Barrow, of this place, has been confined to his house by illness during the past week. He is around again, however.

R. COMSTOCK has the sub-contract for carrying the mail between Charlevoix and Petoskey in accordance with the increase of service lately ordered.

THE Progress says: "Uncle BillyKing" of Vicksburg, was probably by every body in this section died on Sunday. His funeral took place on Wednesday.

THE iron works at Frankfort are closed for the season, and the present expectation is that they will remain closed through the next season. The company buy no wood.

THE Grand Rapids Post says that the American Indians are in a majority in Emmet county, is the only one in the State to cast a majority of its votes in favor of woman suffrage.

A FRIEND.—Our harbor agitators have got Senator Chandler woke up on the subject, and he promises to do all he can for us. Success seems more certain with the Senator to help us.

JOHN HALL, a prominent merchant of Mackinaw, recently died of pneumonia, after an illness of only four days. The deceased was well known in business circles and among all steamboatmen on the lakes

STAGE ROUTE.—Wm. Coster, of this place, is running a daily stage between Charlevoix and Petoskey. This arrangement gives daily connection with the railroad, and should receive an appreciative patronage.

DIED.—Wm. Alexander, of South Arm Township, who has been sick with throat and lung disease for the past year, died on Tuesday. His remains were interred in the village cemetery, the funeral having taken place here yesterday.

"WHOOPING GEESE to the poor, lendeth to the Lord;". He shall have his full reward; but no tongue can describe, no pen can picture the punishment in store for the man who owes a poor printer and won't pay him.

RELIGIOUS.—Preaching to-morrow, both morning and evening, by Rev. Mr. Cole

THE Herald says: Hon. S. C. Medill, yesterday received a telegram from Hon J. A. Hubbell, informing him that the bill to amend an act for the restoration of Indian reservation lands to market nitro passed last February, had passed the House and would soon pass the Senate.

DAILY MAIL.—The Postmaster received official notice on Thursday, that the mail service between Petoskey and Charlevoix has been increased to six times per week, commencing with January 1. The given us first-class mail facilities, and is decidedly a big step out of the woods.

SHORTY Hulbert, a chance moment to make your lips smack, at Fox Rose & Buttars'.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.—On this, the second day of the new year, we extend a happy greeting to all the friends and patrons of the SENTINEL. May throughout the year, and all the years of the future, peace, plenty and happiness may reign among them, is the hearty wish of the editor.

DELIGHTFUL OAKS.—Rendered that theatre-going, dancing and novel-reading are delightful, and should be encouraged by the public," is the question for discussion by this association next Monday evening. Robert Miller, affirmative, and Henry Morgan, negative, are the chief disputants.

THE Grand Rapids Times says that the $60,000 hotel at Petoskey is likely to prove a failure. Several gentlemen of Grand Rapids have not still think of putting up a small, neat hotel structure at that place, its cost not to exceed $10,000; and from this modest fact has grown the enormous $60,000 item now going the rounds of the press.

REVERSE.—There is a certain black, bob-tailed, cropeared, villainous, near stealing cur of a canine dog in this town, that the editor of this paper has sworn a solemn oath to kill at the first opportunity that presents itself; and we are backed by several of the leading and responsible citizens of Charlevoix, whose appreciation have been mingled with cores against the unprincipled depreda tor for the past three months. The dog must die!

We learn that Mr. James A. Cameron, late of Charlevoix, has built a hotel where he resides, in Canada, and will not return here permanently. By the way, we have positive evidence that Mr. Cameron is smuggling goods across the line, which may result in trouble. (?) Lest week he sent a pair of Alexander kid gloves to the editor's wife, wrapped up in a newspaper. The idea was as novel as it was wicked; but we forgive him.

FROZEN OVER.—Round and Pine Lakes are frozen over, and the young of both sexes may be seen almost any pleasant day over the glassy surface of our little pond. Davis, our operator, went out a little while yesterday, and returned with a gash in his head, two black eyes, his arm in a sling, and a spralned ankle. We expect to hear no further than this, but have been informed that he is badly "disheaved" by frequent and sudden "cut downs." He says he likes it.

"KEY AGENT."—A man made his appearance at Boyne postoffice some time ago, and announced himself as an agent of the Department to examine mail-keys, and demanded those of that office. "Uncle Johnny's" wife, who was in charge, not being the fool that the "agent" took her to be, refused to comply, when he sought to bring her to terms by threats of removal, etc. Mrs. Miller not being one of the kind that is easily frightened, went to an other room, and returned with a gun, which she cocked and pointed it at the individual, at the same time lovil ng him to "get." He "got."

Senator Chandler.

At the expiration of his present term Senator Chandler will have served a quarter of a century in the high office he now holds; and it is but congratulation to say that he has rendered his state and the country more valuable services than any other man who has represented Michigan in the national Congress. He has been there longer than any other Michigan Senator. Gen. Cass served seven or eight years and did a vast amount of talking but really accomplished nothing. He left no impress upon national affair.

Not so with Senator Chandler. He has made few long speeches; but what he has said has been plain, pointed, practical. He has taken hold of the business in hand like a business man, and worked with an energy and zeal worthy of the highest commendation. And he invariably passes his measures through to a successful result. In public as in private business, he knows no such word as fail. What he takes in hand is bound to go through and that, too without unnecessary delay.

During the war there was no more useful man in the Senate—not one—than Mr. Chandler. He was terribly in earnest in his opposition to the rebellion. In the darkest hour of those fearful days, he was hopeful, resolute and determined. He never yielded for a moment to fear or discouragement. With him it was onward and on! He has much of that magnetic power which gives a positive man influence over the lukewarm and timid, and he used it in war time to good purpose.

As a member of the Committee on the Conduct of the War, he labored untiringly year in and year out, and accomplished an incalculable amount of good. A complete history of Senator Chandler's services on that committee would show that the State and Nation owe him debts of gratitude which they can never pay.

For what Senator Chandler has done we honor him. We believe him to be actuated to-day by the same patriotic motives that governed him in the days of the rebellion. And because he has been thus faithful, and also because he is the unquestioned choice of a large majority of the Republican party of Michigan, we advocate his re-election. We cannot believe that—despite the number of the Legislature, elected by Republican votes, will offer any factious opposition to the election of one who has served the State and country so long and so well.—G. T. Herald.

☞ The Western Rural and the Western Farmer have consolidated.——A Madrid dispatch announces that the Republican army numbers 200,000 men fully armed, and that 40,000 more are waiting for arms from the United States.——The Grand Duke Nicholas, son of the Grand Duke Constantine, and the nephew of the Emperor, has been declared insane and placed under the guardianship of his father. He was associated with the diamond scandal of a few months ago.——The statue of Stonewall Jackson, executed by an English sculptor, for the city of Charleston, is nearly completed. It is well to perpetuate the memory of such men.——Before the price there were 3,000 saloons in Chicago; now there are only 2,000.——A writer says captain spells it with a "k" because he says his command put so well as if he had published a spelling book.

SATURDAY, - - JAN. 2, 1875

☞ Congress adjourned on the 23d inst. to meet again on the fifth of January, 1875.

☞ Senator Chandler, of Mich., has been elected President pro tem of the Senate, vice President Wilson being unable to perform his daily owing to his ill health.

☞ The quadruplex system of telegraphy—sending four messages over one wire, simultaneously, was successfully tested on the line extending between New York and Chicago two hundred and thirty-three miles. Two hundred and thirty-three messages were sent and received over a single wire in an hour.

☞ Some White Pigeon men claim to have secured a patent for preserving butter and other perishable articles fresh and sweet without the use of ice, by simply using packages with the pulp of poplar wood which is furnished in sheets suitable for the purpose.

☞ A Bay City business man recently gave his note, payable in 60 years, and one of the Bay City Banks discounted it. The note was not discovered until the maker of the note asked the banker if he knew when that note would become due. He had almost forgotten that it could mature in 60 days.

☞ The Hon. Geo. H. Jerome and assistants, arrived at Detroit on the 15th, with 18,000 salmon brought from California. The trout fail died on the journey. The fingers are sadly sore yet. Mr. Jerome was summoned away by telegram, but his assistants left again for Traverse where the fish are to be placed in Au Sable River.

☞ So small a casualty as the washing of postage stamps which have cancelled, cheats the Government out of about $1,000,000 or 3 per cent of the amount of stamps sold in a year. The department has twice been able to unearth the villains who are charged in at least one instance with the crime, but the evidence was insufficient.

☞ President McMahon has decided to have a military deposy on a grand scale during the coming spring for the purpose of testing the efficiency of both the artillery and infantry in military tactics, and has given orders to the various commanders to attend such preparations for a series of manoeuvers, to be participated in by the whole French army, which will probably take place in May. It is expected that many foreign military officers will be present to witness it.

☞ A letter to the Eagle informs it that the Nestor Robinson, the well known showman, recently walked over his many fine, intended a machine that bids fair to make a millionaire of him. It is a contrivance that will hoist any kind of rolling stock on railroads on the track, and in a few minutes. Working models are now on trial in Chicago.

☞ Eugenie recently went to see Victoria and Windsor Castle was the scene of the visit. A splendid suite of rooms was fitted up for the guest, she was allowed sugar in her tea, and everything was done to make her comfortable. As the Empress of Russia recently went to see Victoria, and had to sleep in the same bed, drink cold tea out of the nose of the teapot these attentions to Eugenie are the more noticeable.

☞ Governor Dix signalizes the closing days of his term of office by doing one excellent thing and refusing to do one bad thing. He has confirmed the action of Mayor Vance of New York City in removing the two Commissioners of Charities and Corrections, Brown and Stern, by whose connivance Tweed was given such extraordinary privileges as a convict on Blackwell's Island; and he has refused to pardon Edward S. Stokes, the murderer of Jim Fisk. There was great pressure brought to bear upon him to take the reverse action in each of these cases, but he has done his duty faithfully in both. The result is that Tweed will be compelled to resume his prison uniform, take his meals with the other prisoners, and be treated in other respects as the other convicts are. The refusal to pardon Stokes makes it certain that he will serve out his years more of his sentence, as Governor-elect Tilden is known to be decidedly against his pardon.

The white man who leave camp in to the Black Hills and are now making there are invaders who have no claim upon the mercy of the red men or the protection of medicine. They entered the [illegible] against the laws of the country, in the face of the protest of the [illegible] against the laws of the country, [illegible] to save their lives from the dangers of their own rashness. A Chicago man woke his wife the other night and, in a satisfied tone of voice, informed her that he had swallowed a dose of strychnine. "Why, you fool," said she, "he still don't may come up."

The Denver News records the incident for the benefit of those who dentist women's customers: "A man was about dying in this city, and an acquaintance, and the following telegram to his wife, who was in Chicago: 'Your husband is dying. Come quick.' She came, replied: 'Don't die now. If he does leave him even to the undertaker.' He's one of those 'I'll come dead.' The wife couldn't beat that. Don't die."

The Indianapolis Sentinel cannot believe discovered a rule to find sister-in-law to the origin, method or New York Tribune, and the Tribune reporter replied that he always to inquire of the officers and ask about the book. They are studded that fairly like stars. A message to that account, they come down from that mountain followed by words running the following town with the cry of "Fire!" The greatest excitement ensued among the people, and the fire companies were soon on the ground, when it was discovered that they had been run into the country on a false alarm of fire. The editor of the Tribune was indicted for the offence, but the case was quashed on the ground that the paper was published in Chicago, and not in Indianapolis. The editor also mocked on his return the exact location of the town he had run down, and proceeded to march in solemn procession upon the arrival of the train, and a reporter was sent on the advance and error, that his statement was correct in every respect. The new theme brightly upon the rock which the people had to create out there, and it is now a thriving town. It may also be added that the editor of the Tribune was not indicted, and found that he was in no way responsible. All this is said to show what a newspaper can do when it sets out to work, when any sentiment favors the purpose, he should be a man with the backbone. The Court proceeded to a case of the Republican, and the wind ward and the editor promptly responded. It was a case of two papers and one bonnet. It was a case of two papers and one bonnet. It was a case of two papers and one bonnet.

☞ It appears from the returns of the late census in France that one-third of the population of that country are totally destitute of education, being unable to either read or write.

☞ The Democratic caucus resolved of the next Congress do not take kindly to the idea of making Hon. Samuel J. Mace Speaker. Mills, of Texas, says he'll take may sing with us, but he can't lead the choir."

☞ Great spring and English snells are coming for a grand battle hunt on the plains. The hunt is to be conducted on a magnificent scale. Twenty scouts, headed by Buffalo Bill, will clear the ground.

☞ On the 24th, Mr. George L. Jocelyn, son of the Hon. Dr. Jocelyn, President at Albion College, and Miss Geneva Turner, daughter of A. H. Turner of the Eagle, were married at the residence of Hon. Dr. Jocelyn.

☞ Ex-Governor Wickliffe, of Louisiana, was arrested for the murder of Dan. O'Hgerty, of the New Orleans Bulletin. It is claimed that the latter knocked down the former with a club and jumped upon him, whereupon Wickliffe stabbed the aggressor.

☞ Beecher having made another statement through the Brooklyn Union has made some improvement on his old ones. If he keeps on making statements, and in each statement corrects the weak points which are found to his knowledge by the criticism of his former ones he may finally get up a story that will look "within a" plausible.

☞ The New York Times says London letter says: "After Majesty's ship Basilisk has just returned to England after a circumnavigation of nearly four years, news brings word that a large archipelago of islands has been discovered in the neighborhood of New Guinea, and that two mountains in this region, each about 13,000 feet high have been named Mount Gladstone and Mount Disraeli.

☞ Democrats used to think it very disgraceful for Republicans to filibuster in old days when the responsibility for the conduct of the government rested with the Democracy. But they will undoubtedly resort to all the dodges known to parliamentary law in order to prevent Republicans from reaching a just and wise settlement for the financial question.

☞ The meeting of the Louisiana Legislature as was expected, was the scene of disorder and rebellion rarely witnessed on such occasions. The military had to be employed to eject those members not legally elected, but who yet took to the authority under solemn protest. Affairs in Louisiana are in a terrible condition, and we hope Congress will do something to settle the turmoil.

☞ One of the most horrible and heartrending marine disasters on record is reported by cable dispatches to have occurred in mid-ocean on the 17. of November. The dispatch states that the emigrant ship Cospatrick from London for New York was burned on the 17th of November in latitude 37° north, longitude 29° west, and all on board numbering nearly five hundred souls, with the exception of three of the crew perished.

☞ As an illustration of the high esteem in which Senator Ferry of this State is held as a partisan stalwart, by his colleagues, the Republican Senators at their recent session decided to make the Select Committee on Rules a standing Committee and subsequently the Senate by a unanimous vote placed Senator Ferry of Michigan at its head. This is considered a merited acknowledgement of his ability and marked services in making a thorough revision of the voluminous and complicated rules of the Senate.

☞ A new witness has been upon the stand in the Beecher-Tilton suit. He testified that he was a gem-importer, and was acquainted with Francis D. Moulton. Two days after the publication of the charges against Beecher by Mrs. Woodhull he questioned Moulton regarding the truth of the allegation, and he pronounced them "a mass of wondrous fabrics," and added, with inexplainability it has not a shadow of proof, and if Beecher's enemy is not sufficient refutation to smother from such a source you do not deserve to have your mind satisfied." On cross-examination witness stated he was not and never had been an intimate friend of either Moulton, Tilton or Beecher.

TELEGRAPHIC

FROM LANSING.

Synopsis of Legislative Proceedings--The Senatorial Outlook, etc.

Special Dispatch to the Sentinel.

LANSING, Jan. 8, 1875.

The Legislature convened on Wednesday. J. H. Hoyt, of Tuscola county, was elected Speaker of the House; H. O. Watling, Sergeant-at-Arms; D. L. Chapman, of Ingham county, chief clerk; H. R. Hubbard, for many of Traverse City, engrossing clerk; E. S. Finch, of Allegan county, Sergeant at Arms.

Thomas McMahon, of East Bay, (son of Senator Mitchell), has been appointed a messenger boy in the House.

A Republican Senatorial caucus was held last evening. Fifty-seven Republicans took part in the caucus. On informal ballot, Chandler received fifty-two votes, J. Webster Childs, three, John J. Hegley, one, and Judge Campbell, one. Mr. Chandler was declared the unanimous nominee of the caucus.

A New Ruling for Spain.

As a result of the rapid decline of the Carlist cause, and a sincere desire for a settled government, Prince Don Alphonso has been called by the Cortes to rule Spain, and the armies and relics of government have been turned over to him. Prominent Carlists have declared in favor of the new King, and the European powers are getting ready to recognize him.

Sudden Death of E. B. Ward in Detroit.

E. B. Ward the Michigan millionaire, fell dead in the streets of Detroit, on the 24th a fit of Apoplexy. Capt. Ward is extensively known as the most extensive iron manufacturer of the Northwest, and his wealth is estimated at $16,000,000.

☞ A young, married woman, residing in North Pickham, Eng., a few months ago, dreamed that she would die on Dr. Eve's anniversary of her wedding day. To her husband and relatives she mentioned her strange dream on several occasions, and it seemed to prey upon her mind. At last the dreadful day came—the 6th of last month—and so impressed was she that it made preparations for her last so sure that she actually made a present to one of her friends in a coin of money wherewith to purchase mournings. Strange to say, before night arrived the poor woman was a corpse.

☞ The Spiritual Scientist announces that there are two gentlemen in Decatur, Ill., named H. H. Kachel and Lotter Hunter, who have the remarkable mediumistic power for physical manifestations. They can stop a stagger rich on the high way by spirit power, it is only requisite being that they should sit down, one on either side of the road and hide their faces in their hats to produce darkness. This attracts a power sufficiently strong to form a chain, as it were, across the road, and it is impossible to force a horse by this obstruction. The driver may be ignorant of the locality, and fail to see the human forms at the side of the road, but the horse is affected as above stated."

Various.

A Detroit stationer received the following telegram from Grand Ledge the other day: "Send to Hibegraph of mottoes of 'My God to Thee,' 'Jesus Loves Me,' 'God is Our Refuge and Our Strength,' and 'Come to Jesus' by express immediately.

——For full three Kalakua wears a fashionably cut black broadcloth swallowtail coat, stiff white shirt and a diamond of the back-toe pattern, a pair of red hair ribbon in his button-hole, three immense plain gold rings, a bracelet on his left wrist, a turndown collar and a black tie. He also wears a pair of pants.——The law of Minnesota won't allow a father to thrash a child over sixteen years old, but he can mail his dear wife from store till night.

——Four hundred emptives have been discharged from the engraving and printing bureau of the treasury department at Washington.——Internal revenue receipts for December will reach about $9,000,000; and the receipts for the last six months of 1874 will be over $ 3,000,000.——Admiral Dot, the little fellow who recently formed one of the attractions of Barnum's great show, is dead. The burial was attended by the American flag, the Skeleton, Circassian Beauty, and other carnival associates in the collection of wonders.——The suit of Josephine Bonfield against the estate of the late James Gordon, Jr., to recover the value of two promissory notes, with interest, amounting altogether to $22,000 has resulted in favor of the plaintiff.——Gen Sheridan has been sent to New Orleans by the Government, which does not appear to please the New Orleans people.——Chas. Grosser, of New York, relates the shooting of burglars on the spot. We have a dim recollection of something which said always catch a thief before you hang him.——Fisk's estate, which was in his life, roughly estimated at untold millions, is in a mild, melting way and may yet become bankrupt altogether.——A dead human body was discovered on Wednesday of last week at Adrian packed in a barrel in a freight, and consigned to a medical students at Hudson.——The House of Representatives will probably pass the Senate bill without many amendments.——Canadian merchants coerce members of vessels of various sizes.

☞ A mormon paper at Salt Lake shows the number of polygamists in the Territory at 1,000 men, 3,000 women, and 9,000 children, and the cost and how, by legal punishment of all, at $2,000,000 and thinks that the courts would have around them 3,000 crying women and 9,000 crying children. This is probably a pretty accurate computation. One of the beauties of the polygamous system is shown by a statement that within a stone's throw of a prominent church in Salt Lake is the residence of an aged Mormon who is the husband of a woman and her two daughters. Thus his first wife is his mother-in-law, his stepdaughters are his wives, his first wife is half-brother to his other wives, and a sort of uncle to his other children, and—you can study it out farther if you want to.

☞ A Detroit paper of the 25th contains the following: "We have made mention two or three times of late of a wild animal that is prowling about the woods and fields in Maple Grove. The beast has again been seen. Last Tuesday morning, about eight o'clock, as a farmer was driving along the road he saw the creature in the woods about fifty yards off rearing up against a tree, and his first inspection then makes the length of the animal from nose to tip of tail no less than eight feet. One man declares that coming home late one night he was followed by some large animal, and hurrying in his house and closing the door, the stranger reared up and looked in at the window, thus affording a full view of the beast, which resembled that of a great bull dog. Several parties who claim to have seen him describe him as about two feet high and from five to eight feet long.

☞ In addition to Mr. Chandler, the following persons are candidates for U. S. Senator: Republicans, Ex-Gov. Bagley, Judge Campbell, Gov. Bagley, Dr. H. H. Potter, Judge Christiancy, Wm. A. Howard, H. Washburn, James F. Joy and Eben Ward. Granger, J. Webster Childs. Democrats, Henry Chamberlain, Democrats, Henry Chamberlain, H. N. Walker, Wm. Newton, W. A. Moore, O. M. Barker, D. V. N. Lothrop, A. C. Baldwin and Darwin Higbee. So the office will not go begging.

LITTLE Traverse Bay has frozen over.

THE new depot at Boyne Falls is nearly ready for occupancy.

DR. Lewis has a fine assortment of fresh confectionery.

SEE advertisement of Wm. J. Vote, in another column.

THE Straits of Mackinaw are frozen over at Cheboygan.

——Gitrys, this "old fool an ass" is the way they call readers in Charlevoix.

REV. G. W. Hutchins, the Petoskey preacher, was presented with a muffler and a splendid overcoat on Christmas eve.

YOU will not realize that it is hard times if you go to Carpenter and Bartholomew's to buy your goods.

SNOW.—During the week snow has fallen almost constantly, and the "beautiful snuff" has reached the depth of about two feet on a level.

THREE men in Osceola county were recently arrested and held for trial on a charge of stealing timber from lands of the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad Company.

SNOW on the track frequently delays trains on the northern part of the Grand Rapids & Indiana road. Two were stuck all one night and part of a day near Petoskey last week.

DONATION.—The people of Norwood and vicinity held a donation on the evening of the 30th, for the benefit of the Rev. J. J. McAllister, and the result foots up about $74.

WHAT do you think? There is talk of organizing a brass band in Charlevoix. We fancy we already hear the dulcet tones of the cornet and the clash of cymbals float out upon the evening air.

CHARLEVOIX MARKET.—Butter, 25c; lard, 15c; potatoes, 50c; hay, $6.50 and $7; meal, $3; pork, one shilling; sugar 10 and 12; coffee, 25 to 42; tea, 60c to $1.20.

CARPENTER & Bartholomew have just received some very nice Soapless cans bearing the inscriptions, "God is Love" "God Bless our Home" "Welcome." etc.

RESIGNED.—There will be a children's meeting to-morrow at the usual morning hour—sermon to the children by Rev. Mr. Cole. Preaching in the evening by the same clergyman.

WOOD.—H. A. Lumbard, of the Traverse, is putting out 3,000 cords to market wood this winter. Capt. Hartwell, of the schooner Andrews is also engaged in getting out wood.

G. W. Croutter has removed his stock of drugs to his new store building on Bridge street. It is a fine building, and has the handsomest front of any building in town.

THE employes of the Traverse Bay Eagle recently presented Mr. Sprague, the editor, with a handsome gold pin, made up in the shape of a printer's composing stick.

GOOD MUSIC.—The music for the Charlevoix Club Dances is furnished by Mr. C. C. Mann, of Torch Lake, assisted by the Blakeleys. Prof. Mann is a fine musician and an excellent caller, and these parties are very enjoyable.

FROM the Cheboygan Independent we learn that the batching house of Moses Bealy & McAliley, in that county was destroyed by fire on the 14th ult., together with about 800,000 whitefish spawn in good order. The Independent hopes for the rebuilding of the establishment.

THE Detroit Post says that the free banking clause is perhaps the most interesting feature of the bill, and we suspect will dispel a great many fallacies in regard to the advocated demand for banking facilities which it is supposed to consult. It will probably prove that there is not only "money" enough in the country, but that the blocks are located where they are needed, and that sound banks can be located anywhere else; that currency drawn to those points where it can be used to the greatest advantage, and that it can be issued and withdrawn only by those and communities who have, workid brag and accumulated capital.

THE Detroit Tribune says that the free banking clause can hardly cause any very great immediate expansion of the currency. We have practically had free banking in the West and South under the Boutwell bill of last May, for eight or nine months, and there have been very few applications for further banking facilities. Mr. Thurman was quite safe in declaring that the increase of national bank currency under the bill would not be in the next year over $1,000,000, which would be an expansion of the currency of only $7,000,000, as under the law $6,000,000 of greenbacks would be retired. The general feeling of the friends of specie resumption about the bill was well expressed by Senator Sherman when he said that he should vote for it in spite of all its defects, because it contained a pledge to return to specie payments in 1879. Cardinal Cullen on Irish Affairs.

Mostly Anti-Home Rule.

During the visit of Messrs. Mealy and Sankey to Dublin, Ireland, Cardinal Cullen issued a "pastoral" warning Orthodoxy against these "speculating preachers," as he styled the American revivalists. The National newspaper, a leading Catholic journal in Dublin, edited by A. M. Sullivan, Esq., M. P., the leader of the Fenian party in Commons, and to which Gladstone for "Home Rule, dealt with the Cardinal's pastoral in the following very spunky and honest manner, which is in every respect worthy of Mr. Sullivan:

"With much regret we notice indications of an attempt to excite the hostility of our Catholic population against the religious service conducted in the city by some Protestant missionaries from America. We trust we shall not appear in vain to the spirit of tolerance of honorable leadership, of respect for conscience, in the breast of Irish Catholics, when we call upon them to crush the slightest attempt at intolerant denunciation against the religious exercises which some sections of the Protestant community are holding under the auspices of the gentlemen we refer to.

"The deadly danger of the agegentate spirit as all from the opposite pole; from religious indifference, from skepticism and unbelief, comes from the direction of Huxley, and Darwin and Tyndall, rather than from Moody, or Sankey, or Hargreves. Irish Catholics desire to see Protestants deeply imbued with religious feeling rather than tinged with rationalism and imbedding in long as the religious service or our Protestant neighbors are honestly directed to quickening religious things in our own body, without denying expression of intentional light to us it is our duty to pay the homage of our respect to their honest convictions; in a word, to do as we would be done by."—N. Y. Witness.

Russian Etiquette.

As soon as the imperial party were seated everybody else sat down; it would have been gross rudeness for anybody to sit while they were standing, and if the emperor had risen at any time during the performance it would have been the etiquette for every other person in the house to follow his example. This is the case everywhere, no matter where the Emperor may be, and the rule of etiquette includes all the members of the royal family. Royal and imperial personages are no doubt greatly bored by the constant ceremony going on around them, and most of them would be glad to escape at least a portion of it. The Empress Eugénie succeeded in doing so to some extent when she had the Tuileries re-arranged after the model of the Petit Trianon. She removed a series of frequent soirées, and the rules governing those who were permanently placed at the entrance-door of the grand suite where they may still be seen. Here are some of these rules:

1. At each one who enters here receives his rank, his list, and above all, his escort.

2. Those of the first rank have the comprivilege and very extensive that resources them.

4. Every stairhead at setting, or rising, makes no way but against regarding another.

The Fourth rule did away with the necessity for all to rise when any member of the royal family passed through the hall. It did away to double-it great relief to all concerned. A gentleman who has lived in St. Petersburg for some time says that the entree of the court, with one rule, a meeting he happened in a little circle which consisted of the Grand Duchess Marie, sister of the emperor. Conversation went on quite empty, and the Grand Duchess was in the best of spirits. After a time she said, in the most friendly way:

"I never favor to ask of all of you. I want to join that party on the other side of the hall, and I don't want to break up the conversation. If you rise when I do they will of course see it. Now I want all of you to keep your seats, and I think I can get there without disturbing them."

Of course everybody obeyed the injunction and paid no apparent attention to her departure. She succeeded very fairly in her effort, as she managed to get quite in the midst of the party before she was discovered. She dropped into a seat with a merry laugh before more than half the number saw her, and rose to an upright position.

Not many years ago an American Minister when presented to the Emperor could by sit down while His Majesty remained standing, and fortunate it was for the squared and by-on-arms country for its that he was there. They were in a brief conversation in the way. The Emperor not to see of the case as the time for a remark which he consequently dropped abroad that he was one unconversant of such a grave infraction of etiquette. They. H. Kent, in Harper's Magazine.

Do you know why young men like the third term? One reason is—a brother who managed to talk with her Adolphus after the old folks had retired. "No I don't." Well, replied his sarcastic sister, "it is because you're one too many.

When a cultivated Louisvilian meets a stranger at a watering-place he forthwith feels called upon to air his Persian. He blows, smiles and remarks, "allows myself" and grows enthusiastic over the Parisian accent of the reply. "Wahnshongtrewe you?"

Grand Traverse Teachers' Association.

MINUTES.

Pursuant to the call of the Executive Committee, the teachers of the Grand Traverse region met at Traverse City at 2:30 o'clock p. m. Monday, Dec. 28th, 1874. The meeting was called to order by C. D. Page, chairman of the Executive Committee. On motion Supt. Ladd was chosen chairman of the meeting and J. A. Price secretary. On motion the programme of exercise as prepared and presented by the executive committee was read and adopted. After a few preliminary remarks by the chairman, Rev. A. J. Wyckoff delivered an interesting opening address, setting forth in a very happy and well-timed manner the importance of the teacher's work and pointing out very clearly many of the advantages to be derived from meeting together to exchange thoughts upon school plans and purposes. His address was followed by remarks from the teachers present, all of whom expressed themselves as fully alive to the necessity of an association, and willing to lend their aid to further the enterprise. Rev. O. H. Spoor then spoke half an hour on the same subject with good effect. On motion the meeting adjourned until Tuesday at 9 o'clock a. m.

TUESDAY—The association met at nine o'clock and was called to order by the chairman.

The first thing on the programme being the permanent organization, the association proceeded to adopt a constitution and enroll its members. On motion the chair was requested to appoint a nominating committee of three to present the names of persons for the various offices. The committee, consisting of L. Roberts, C. D. Page and Miss Lucy Coates, presented the following names:

President—E. P. Ladd.

Vice Presidents—A. J. Morrel, Wexford county; Miss Lucy A. Coates, Bonaparte; Rev. Salmon Steele, Leelanau; A. R. Campbell, Leelanau; Rev. O. N. Coulter, Antrim; L. Roberts, Grand Traverse.

Rec Sec—Miss Lizzie Kellogg.

Cor Sec—J. A. Price.

Treas—Mrs L. Roberts.

On motion the report of the committee was received and the association proceeded to the election of officers, resulting in the choice of the persons nominated by the committee.

Miss Lucy A. Coates then favored the association with an essay entitled "Practical Common Sense," which was followed by a general discussion of the points presented and appended by the writer. The meeting then adjourned until two o'clock p. m.

The afternoon session was opened with a very pretty and appropriate poem entitled "The Acquisition of Knowledge," by Miss Nellie W hon, after which C. D. Page presented an essay entitled "The Good Teacher and his Patrons," which in turn was followed by a general discussion. After a short recess Miss Nellie Wilson read an essay on the subject of "When to begin," in which she pointed briefly and pointedly the necessity of commencing the work of education properly.

The Query Box then brought out considerable discussion and many practical ideas. At 4:30 p. m. the association resolved itself into a business meeting and proceeded to arrange for the place of holding the next meeting. After some discussion it was agreed upon to hold the next meeting in Wexford county, the time and place to be determined by the executive committee.

The Association then adjourned until 8 o'clock p. m when we listened to a very able and interesting lecture upon the "Public Schools," by Rev. O. H Spoor. The broad and liberal views advanced by the speaker were received with universal favor. The views of several prominent citizens, Hon. D. C. Leach, Dr. Ashton and others added much to the interest of the occasion.

The association then adjourned, all feeling strengthened and encouraged for the work before them.

CONSTITUTION OF THE GRAND TRAVERSE UNION TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Feeling that because of our necessary isolation we, as teachers, are liable to become careless of improvement and lose even in the prosecution of our duties, and that by occasionally meeting together to exchange thoughts upon general work and educational interests generally, we may receive new inspiration and awaken dormant energies, we also obtain many valuable practical methods and suggestions which may prove helpful in the prosecution of our respective labors, therefore: We the undersigned teachers of the Grand Traverse region do hereby agree to form a permanent organization, having for its object the consideration of all questions relating to the school work or affecting the general interests of the cause of education and taking such action as shall be deemed proper for the promotion of the art of teaching.

The following Constitution shall be our guide:

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1. This Association shall be known as The Grand Traverse Union Teachers' Association, and the place of holding its respective succeeding sessions shall be determined by the Executive Committee.

ART. 2. Any person interested in the cause of education may become a member of the Association by signing the Constitution and paying the initiation fee.

ART 3. Any person interested in the cause of education and who may desire to participate in the exercises of any session may become an honorary member by a vote of a majority of the members taken at said meeting.

ART 4 The officers of the Association shall consist of a President, one Vice President from each of the counties represented in the Association, a Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, and Treasurer.

ART. 5. The Executive Committee shall be composed of the officers of the association, any three of whom shall constitute a quorum to transact business at any regular meeting of the Committee.

ART. 6. The officers of the association shall be chosen at each succeeding meeting by a vote of a majority of the members present.

ART. 7. It shall be the duty of the President to preside at the meeting for which he is chosen chairman, enforce all rules and regulations, and give the casting vote in case of a tie. He shall also give due consideration and weight to the suggestions of the Executive Committee on all matters. He shall also act as Chairman of the Executive Committee.

ART 8. It shall be the duty of the Secretary to record all the proceedings of the meetings of the Association and of the meetings of the Executive Committee.

ART. 11. It shall be the duty of the Corresponding Secretary to conduct such correspondence as may be directed by the Executive Committee.

ART. 12. It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to collect all fees and assessments or moneys due the Association, hold the funds in charge, and upon the order of the Secretary, signed by the President pay from the treasury all expenses incurred by the Association. The Treasurer shall give bonds to the Association a detailed report of all receipts and disbursements during the term of office.

ART. 13. In order to create a fund to defray the incidental expenses of the Association, members shall pay an initiation fee of 0.25, and the Executive Committee may make such other assessments as are required.

ART. 14. This Constitution may be altered or amended by a two-thirds vote of the members present.

J. A. PRICE, Secretary

"Will you remove by rail," was a true elect. I witnessed the following incident one night last week at the depot of a neighboring town. I heard loud and angry voices proceeding from the rear of the car. I fell into this a sleeping car, and you can't come in without a ticket." Begorra I had a ticket." Where is it?" "I've lost it." "If you really had the misfortune to lose your ticket, perhaps you can remember your berth." There was an interval of silence. Paddy evidently conjured his thinking powers. "Och, be jabers I've remembered it now. I was born on the 26th of October, 1826."

He related of George Clark, the celebrated negro minstrel, that, being examined as a witness, he was severely interrogated by the attorney, who wished to break down his evidence. "You are in the negro minstrel business, I believe?" inquired the lawyer. "Yes, sir, was the reply proudly, "but that rather a low calling?" demanded the lawyer. "I don't know that it is, sir," replied the minstrel, "but it is so much better than my father's that I am rather proud of it. "What was your father's calling?" "He was a lawyer, replied the minstrel, in a tone of regret that put the audience in a roar. The lawyer let him alone.

Giving Help to the Heathen.

A man about twenty years old wearing a battered plug hat and seedy clothes looked up sharply as a man who had been treated to an ordinary entered a Grand avenue saloon yesterday, and leaning over the bar whispered to the proprietor:

"My dear sir, I am canvassing for subscriptions for the benefit of the heathen."

"Ish dot so?" replied the saloon-keeper, rinsing a glass.

"I am my friend, that is so," continued the man, taking out a very greasy pass-book. "Yes, I am collecting money for the poor heathen, who are living in a state of vice and ignorance. Some put down $10 some $2, some $1—all give something. Here is the book, and you can subscribe such an amount as you think best."

"Ish it a lettion to dem gammon gvanel?" inquired the saloonist, as he looked at the book.

"No, sir, you do not understand my object. I am collecting subscriptions for the benefit of the heathen and you can set it down at your own figure and give such an amount as your conscience directs."

"Vere is dem heathens?" inquired the beer-seller, looking coldly at the stranger's hat.

"In Africa," replied the agent, "in far-off Africa, where all is gloom and loneliness because the heathen has no education."

"And vat gountry is Africa in?" inquired the saloonist.

"My dear man, Africa is a country—a great big country far over the deep blue sea. Is it possible that you have never heard of Africa?"

"I had lived in Toledo and Chicago, but I didn't hear some one ever say a word about Africa."

"Well, that is neither here nor there. I am authorized to collect subscriptions for the heathen, who is running about in a state of sinfulness and nakedness, and who must have bread for his mind and be bred to revere that he should live for something besides his life."

"Vah, das is so," replied the saloonist, in a reflective tone.

"You contribute whatever sum you think best, and I forward it to Boston by first mail, where it is turned into Bibles, and the Bibles shipped to Africa. Most people esteem it a privilege to be allowed to subscribe to the fund. Will you write your name down?"

"I thinks I will," replied the man, and he bended his head, after much labour, wrote his name on one of the pages and handed the book back with the remark:

"I dunno if you can't read it."

"That is all right; but you have expected to mark down the amount of your contribution. Let's see—will you say a dollar?"

"What?"

"Will you give the sum of $1 for the heathen?"

"Ha! What you spake about?"

"Will you give me a dollar to forward to the poor benighted heathen?"

"Money—gif you money?"

"Yes—for the heathen."

"Gif you von dollar?"

"Yes, a dollar for the benighted race who are dwelling in darkness."

The saloon-keeper looked at him for half a minute and then, reaching down for a club, said:

"I vill peter co—out py dat door! I vas got dat goods to get dat leathen some-clos by do poor master, and dot is blenty! If you shtay here some leetle while more I shall hit you soft du glub on de head!"

"My dear—"

"Go out mit dat door!" yelled the saloon keeper, running out from behind the bar, and the canvasser had to go.

A widow was weeping bitterly for the loss of her husband, and a friend tried to console her. "No, no," said she; "this one have my cry out, and then I shan't care anything more about it."

A householder complained to a plumber because he had sent a boy to put in a fauce, instead of doing the work himself. The plumber reminded of the legal maxim, "Qui facit per alium facit per se." It settled the question.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - JAN. 16, 1875

☞ In the Senate on the 7th inst. Mr Ferry obtained leave to introduce a bill for the relief of Reuben Goodrich, which was referred to the Committee on Public lands.

☞ Kalakaua's salary is said to be $20,000 per annum and he could have much more for the asking on account of the poverty of his country. There is a fine estate on Oahu $200 (£) on every horse and $5 on every ox now owned and run.

☞ Over $20,000 have been expended in all and in the hunt for Connie Ross, 47 counties containing his description and photographs, 300,000 have been issued, at a cost of $6,000; over 700 have been reported who proved to not be the right child, and as many as twenty-five detectives have been employed in the search at one time.

☞ We notice that the Piankeshaw land scrip, which the travel the coming days of the Edmonds's term in the State Land Office has not included in the bag of a single acre for the State. All of the State lands illegally disposed of have been restored. The land has not been generally known and it is due to the authorities that we should publicly should be given to it.

☞ A lighthouse at New London has long seen in badly functioning contemplance cause, owing to the new system resulted in the discovery that the channel was caused by a hummock which had been left in the bottom under the floor, which has been now blown. Before many days dinners by the continental nations of the year will have been through the mail and laid to the copper sheeting which now keeps the vessel from sinking.

☞ A telescope of gigantic proportions is now in process of construction at Paris. It was begun in 1867, by M. Lois Tasseau, without much aid, after interrupted the work which was not resumed until after the close of the French-German war, when M. Wolf undertook its completion. Its power will exceed that of any instrument of its kind in the world. It is hoped, being 48 feet and its diameter 6 feet 8 inches. Its mirror will be of glass, and the surface will be faced with gold or silver.

☞ Weston the pedestrian, has recently performed the remarkable feat of walking 500 miles in six consecutive days, coming out of the trial with about half an hour the start of old Father Time. The first time made was on the 329th and 330th miles. These were each made in the very short space of ten minutes and eighteen seconds each. The feat was performed in Newark N. J., and its success fal accomplishment was the subject of very extravagant enthusiasm on the part of the spectators.

☞ Pike's friends declare that when he was killed by Sioux Bill his estate was worth fully $1,000,000 and that it has been stolen by unprincipled lawyers who got at it, and his many enemies who were determined to rob the widow, and that they can show where tens of thousands of dollars have been allowed by the courts without justice. His annual income was about $250,000, but he spent it in riotous living, and himself but he had 200 desperadoes in his pay who would do anything from stuffing ballot boxes to fracturing a skull or cutting a throat. It is also said that Pike's private purse was largely filled from authentic sources, and will present the strangest, most startling phases of intrigue, corruption and villany ever heard of in America.

☞ The great bonanza lately discovered in the celebrated Comstock lode at Virginia City, and which extends through the consolidated Virginia, California and other mines is making an excitement on the Pacific Coast last has never been equaled. The increase of market values in the stocks sold on the Stock exchange at San Francisco amounts in the month of December to over one hundred millions. Experts estimate the value of the ore in sight in the mines some whose mentioned at $1 thousand feet. The largest owners of the mines are Flood & O'Brien & Co., composed of four persons—Flood, O'Brien, Mackey and Fair—who are supposed to be the richest men in Europe or America. Either than the Rothschilds, and only taking second place to the Khedive of Egypt or the Diamond King of Brazil. Senor Cabral. There is no doubt that it is the richest discovery of bullion ever made, and is one of the notable events of the century and is destined to make as era of unexampled prosperity to the Pacific States.

☞ The new year opened with the entire political loss in this world. Spain having thrown up the sponge as much on her own account as that of Carlos. Don Alfonso has been proclaimed King by the nation army and ministry. A regency has been formed under the Presidency of Canovas del Castillo without a portfolio. We have yet particulars will arrive out to-day. Meanwhile the great interests confided to Don Jos Quesada-Isidoro has received the following in Paris: "All the municipalities in Spanish are unanimously in the presence Alfonso. We pray Your Majesty to immediately to your son. We congratulate you on this grand triumph achieved with your magnificent." This telegram is signed by Don Primo De Rivera and Canovas Del Castillo. Extraordinary preparations were making in Spain for the reception of the young (17 years old) Bourbon. The Duke has telegraphed his blessings and the great powers have authorized the ministers at Madrid to enter into relations with the new power. ——— Now for future, it would look promising. With imaginative daring, with a genius scarcely to all Cubans, many of whom have pronounced for him. It is reported that Don Carlos of Spain is determined on a vigorous prosecution of the war, not withstanding the retirement of the monarchy. The government will accordingly direct the resumption of active operations in a few days. Don Carlos has issued a proclamation called at his headquarters at Vera, January 6th in which he says that, as the head of the Spanish Bourbons he cannot stay with pain and sorrow the the suicide of his cousin Alphonso, whose usurpation he has led him to the overturned of the same passions as caused all this and his mother. He says that he will resume his rights to his throne and lead the fight continued.

Various.

It is said that the late Major The owner of New York city, has a income of 25,000,000 to his heirs.——Twenty years ago the sun for the Upper Peninsula of Michigan was erected on the north portion of an evening.——If you want to buy realtered, go to Ann Arbor on the 2d inst, when you will have a chance to buy the heavily illustrated and handsomely bound of a mortgage foreclosure.——Lieut. Col. Frank Wheaton of Rahway, has been commissioned colonel in the regular army.——In February, 1864, Dr. McCurdy, of Salem, Ohio, lost a gold watch with chain and seal. One day last month, it was found in a pretty good condition but one dollar covered with earth and leaves, where it was probably dropped nineteen years before.——Governor Wood, of Illinois, has refused to make the case of Mrs. Surratt, of Washington, who was convicted of complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln, and executed by hanging.——The Republican majority in the Illinois House of Representatives is reduced to one. Lehigh Democrats are elected both seats in contest. The balance of the Legislature is unchanged by the last vote. It stands Republicans 77, Democrats 76. This politics was made by the resignation of Hon. Isaac N. Arnold, of Chicago, and Hon. Lyman Trumbull, of Alton, both Republicans, whose terms of service in the United States Senate expired March 4th next. Their successors will be chosen by the present Legislature.——The Republicans in Maine have nominated Governor Chamberlain for re-election. Governor Chamberlain is a Republican who has been elected by the Democrats and Liberals. He is a radical Republican, and was elected by the Democrats because they could not elect a Democrat. The Republicans have renominated him because they could not elect any other Republican.——The Democrats have nominated Hon. Joseph Williamson, of Bangor, for Governor. He is a Democrat who has been elected by the Republicans

Teaching Hints.

Teaching school and keeping school are two widely-different affairs.

A popular teacher is not always a good teacher, nor an unpopular teacher a poor one.

Whipping is the fruitful parent of most school disorders.

Ventilation tends to secure pure blood, sound body, active brain and good lessons.

School fires should be built a little previous to a quarter to nine o'clock.

If teachers survey at school hour their pupils it seems as though the pupils were the most interested.

School-homes were not built for playhouses—notice recesses and nootings.

Teachers should try to associate with the people among whom they teach.

Remember that reading, spelling, writing and cyphering are the topics we shall use most and consequently ought to know the best.

Order is said to be Heaven's first law but It would seem to be the last law of some teachers.

Schools may be spoiled by too much kindness as well as by too much vigor.

Teachers should prepare each lesson as regularly as pupils should.

Six hours work per day is the school day of hay teachers only.

Why do many pupils "go through" text-books many times and then not know their contents?

A well recited lesson is not always a well-known lesson.

The moral culture of pupils is as worthy of cultivation as the intellectual.

Industrious, orderly, kind teachers usually find the same qualities in their pupils, for "as the teacher, so is the pupil."

Written work should be required in every branch of study.

Some teachers expect their pupils to progress, but make no effort to progress themselves.

A reading exercise is something more than a pronouncing exercise, a parse exercise or an inflection exercise, and requires as much study as any other school task.

Lazy pupils always like concert recitations—they call them splendid.

Teachers who use the textbook at every recitation rarely see by actions that they do not know the lesson they are hearing.

Never fail to inspect all written work unless you wish the neat poorly done.

Our best teachers are the best advertisers to educational works—poor teachers don't need them.

The art of questioning properly is known to few teachers and practiced by fewer.

A tidy school room is an honor to the teacher.

"Study your lessons for time" generally secures its study one-fifth of a time.

Many educational ladders have the lower rounds missing.

Not "how much" but "how well" is the motto of a good teacher and the foundation of good scholarship.

If teachers would see ourselves as others see us fewer bad habits would be copied by pupils.—Hamboo (Wis.) Republican.

The Signal Service on Pike's Peak.

You remember that the United States Government has placed a signal station on Pike's Peak, at an elevation of 14,336 feet, and executing the order at Bounty, is at the organization in the territory of Colorado, occupying the dwarf one-story rock-house we have so often seen in the other pictures of Pike's Peak. We suppose that the fastness even it is called to provide as well as it can, for the comfort and safety of those who are appointed to do it, the cost, expense and hardship must be terrible. Provisions are frequently two years behind, for the mules frequently lose their footing and roll down the mountain side, and the men are sometimes for months at a time cut off from all communication with the outside world. Our engraving represents the station as it appears in winter, when the snow is piled up around it to the depth of many feet, and the men are compelled to tunnel their way to the entrance. Among the instruments are various thermometers, wind gauges, and other meteorological instruments, which are sent up to the station by way of the mules. Every man connected with the station has to undergo a rigid examination before he is appointed, and it is no wonder that quite a few men have proved unequal to the task.

The duties of the officers in charge of the station are various and difficult, as upon them devolve the responsibility of reporting to the Government the weather prognostications for the ensuing day. Among the instruments necessary to their work, in the ordinary course of events, are the barometer, which tells us, you know, when it is going to rain, and the thermometer, which tells us how hot or how cold it is. Without the hygrometer the barometer and thermometer would be useless, and without the latter the former would be of little value. The use of a self-registering thermometer, an instrument peculiar to the signal service, is to record the highest and lowest temperature, the velocity of the wind is recorded. To the meteorologist they are indebted for a register of the rainfall. A rain gauge, also, is used, which tells how much water has fallen, as well as snow, hail, thunderstorms, the Eagle and the Daniel, mean-ing the operator's name, are also recorded.

Any time. Now, it is a part of the duties of these officers to take seven daily observations of the state of the weather, which increases, and just the observer must get upon the roof of the house to take some of the observations, and how information comes down on the inside portion of the house. Perhaps one of the observers has to go out for a few minutes in pursuit of the house to prevent himself from being blown away while in the discharge of his performance duties. In the cold rain they assure themselves by taking the telegraph wire with them for operating, resulting from a most literary of select selection books. They have no postal facilities, and receive no mail during the winter, unless they come down on some steamer and get it. Fuel sometimes runs short, and the observers will soon be worth their weight in gold. Their supply of water is obtained by melting snow. They wear the Norwegian snowshoes, an article of dress, once used in Russia, and twenty inches at its greatest width.

How do they manage to live during the long winter? The supplies are carried on to the rocks mules during the pleasant months of the fall, and they have to live on sufficient store; but they run out of all delicacies and even some of the necessaries before the spring, and it was reported that they suffered to the part of cold. Not to be caught in the same predicament next winter, they have a supply of fresh meat on hand, consisting of hens, pigs, grand head hares, besides occasional green vegetables and dried potatoes, lately sent to them in packages, sauce, condensed milk, green sages, tomatoes, dried apples, flour, coffee, tea, chocolate, sugar and spices, butter, lard, baking powder, potatoes, eggs, cheese, onions, vinegar, molasses, chow-chow, pickles, rice, corn meal, hard tack, carbonaceous, the extracts, etc. Formidable, as is the list, there is not one article too many, for the men who surround themselves to attempt an ascent to Pike's Peak deserve to be well fed, and much better pay than they probably receive. Such a theory, however, is one but exists or prizes ers ever led.

Desperate Wrestling Contest.

One of the largest and most determined wrestling matches on record was concluded at Paterson, N. J., on the 16th of December between James Bailey and Thomas Cleburne. The men wrestled in Greco-Roman style, but two or three fair back falls were taken and one shoulder, or two should-er and a fall, between the ground to be held to constitute a fair back fall—for which a purse was offered, and the championship of the county, in the Bon mond, Coleman group as Bailey by the back and neck. A desperate struggle ensued, and the contest was very pretty pedaling of a flowering tree that Mr. Hoerner had made from old wire. Mr. Hoerner has made from old wire a number of articles in this line, such as picture frames on the walls. With the wisdom exercise of Mr. Beecher, Mr. Tilton is to testify touch as favor in the same manner. Mr. Beecher and Mr. Tilton are to be on the witness stand, and otherwise. The moment that motion in the Livingston county cottage are to be decided in the Plymouth pastor, one by one, on the witness stand, for him to identify. In the copy of the "Life of Christ" there was found the "true-inwardness" letter and another letter which has never been published and which Mr. Moulton has reserved for the trial. The impression that has been prevalent that Mrs. Morrison H. Bradley, Mrs. Florence Tilton, Miss Susan B. Anthony and others to go to Mrs. Tilton's aid to have every one present, inasmuch as all confessions or admissions of Mrs. Tilton will not be admissible, and only the confessions of Mr. Beecher, and collateral circumstances, will be allowed to enter the evidence. Those persons and others, whose names have not been made public, are to be kept in touch on the criminal trial, and will be called at that time.—New York Sun.

A very good-looking young lady entered the Police Station at Detroit, recently, and wanting to get a Sergeant, she said: "I want a policeman." As soon as he could recover from his surprise he said: "We have no fire wardens and seven crying here self—have you any clothes?" She was very sanguine as she explained that she wanted somebody to go and help take care of an insane woman.

Unsuccessful Effort of a German Goul to Beat Down a Ticket Agent.

From the Detroit Free Press.

Yesterday afternoon an old man appeared before the Detroit and Lansing Railroad ticket window at the Central Depot, and asked:

"What do you ask for a ticket to Lansing?"

"Twenty, sir," replied the agent, writing his thumb and reaching out his hand for the money.

"Two dollars and sixty cents!" exclaimed the stranger, pairing his head out of the window.

"Yes, sir, that is the regular fare."

"I had stems here by Detroit forty years," said the man, getting red in the face, "and it never cost over two dollars in the—"

"Two sixty is now regular rate, and you have to pay it if you go by the road," the agent.

"I shant get you two dollar and not more," said the stranger.

"Never, I do it."

"Well, don't you see Detroit fill I was?" growled the old man, and he went away and walked around the depot. He expected to be called back as he left the window, a man often is called back to "come along" when he has been scuffling in a clothing drawer. Such an event did not occur and after a few minutes the old man returned and called out:

"Well, I get you two dollar and ten cents."

"No, I can't do it," replied the agent.

"Well, den I don't go so help me gosh! I have lived in Detroit three years, and shall buy before my name was known and went to grow up and die town, and I shall not be moved."

He walked off again looking back to see if the agent would not call him and after a third second he returned to the window, threw down some money, and said:

"Vell, take two dollar and twenty cents and gif me a ticket."

"My dear sir once you understand that we have a schedule of prices here, and can't must go by it?" repeat the agent.

"Vell, den, I always put Detroit on dem and yan?" exclaimed the stranger, much dier than ever. I buys leetle tickes, five over tears, and I shall see about this my to the Sheriff of Police."

He walked off again, and as he saw the locomotive backing up to couple on the train he went back to the window and said:

"Tell me's dickette for two dollar and forty cents and I vill see the platform."

"Can't do it," repeat the agent.

"Well den, py golly, I tickes to ten what I does! How is dem to—Dollar and sixty cents, and I goes to Lansing and never comes back! No sir, I shall never comes back, or I shall come out on the road! I buys paper for dem horses, and buy grocery, and I shall show you that I shall not puddings more and de town!"

He went on the train

Ben Franklin and Boy.

A little incident worth relating happened to Benjamin he had become a married man, and was living in small village then not four miles from Philadelphia. Benjamin's great circus and menagerie had just arrived from Bloomsburg, and was going to give a performance in the evening, and Benjamin's boy was seized with an irresistible desire to attend. So at the dinner table he asked permission of his father to attend the circus in the evening. "No, not," my son, you can't go to the show. It is no safe place for me, as I consider it; how much more dangerous must it be for you; I will not allow a spy of mine to attend a circus performance where I myself would wish to be seen. Go to bed, my boy, and your mother and I will go to prayermeeting. To-morrow I will buy you a testament for your reading."

He went to bed but not so.

An hour afterward Ben rose his wife and two lawyers sound asleep in the house the brilliantly lighted circus ring's fare glowed with enjoyment, and no one worked more industriously upon a big one of twisted dog-tail tobacco. Once he lowered his head and showed a bad case of ringworm from the mouth and showed he swore the same.

A smothered cry of pain came up from below.

Snarled Ben: "Gracious I do believe I have spitten in some one's face."

Said his wife: "Too bad! but oh! just see that man bend the crab!" and they both became engrossed in the antics of the clown.

Next morning at breakfast the boy appeared with a swollen eye.

Said his father: "My son, what ailed thine optic?"

"Some blamed fool spit in—that is—I mean I don't know what ails it," and he continued fed.

Ben and his wife exchanged significant glances and wisely held their peace, and the promised testament wasn't attended to afterward by either father or son.

The extent of the movement now on foot for supplying the Eastern market with live stock from this country is indicated by the facts that the projected company will first build steamships adapted to the transportation of live stock; that they will create a depot in Texas, and buying from the herds in that and contiguous States, will supply the British market with fresh meats. Since the late European war, the price of meat has risen in Germany, whence England used to get a large supply. The home supply is less than the demand.

Local Newspapers.

Americans read more newspapers than any other people, and have more, better and cheaper ones to read, because they are the most intelligent, active and progressive nation on the face of the globe, and the perfection to which the American press of this day has attained, will ever be the marvel and pride of our age and race.

But we desire especially to call attention now, to the space so well filled by the local press, which makes special effort to bring into prominent relief the business and interests of some particular locality, and while it leaves the broader field of the enterprising dailies, selects some paper and sportive upon which to concentrate all its efforts.

To secure success in the midst of such active competition and in the face of so many disadvantages, it is apparent that the local paper must have the united and generous support of the people whose interests it has, as it were, exclusively taken in charge. Obviously none can give this so much as those expended for its benefit. Obviously none can give this so much as those expended for its benefit. Obviously none can give this so much as those expended for its benefit

Senator Chandler's Successor.

Republicans will gracefully accept the result of the Senatorial contest which, although it has retired to private life one of Michigan's truest sons has placed in his stead an honest and patriotic representative, one of her Republican party, and a pure and experienced statesman. Judge Christiancy, of the State Supreme Court, the choice for silent, as well as able and famed jurist, a man of very extensive learning, and well deserving of the State. To them deservedly is the defeat of Zachariah Chandler. He retires, after a continuous service of eighteen years with well-earned and merited laurels and history will record his valuable services long after the generation that have passed away.

On the 15th the petition of Joseph St Clark and forty-nine others, of Charlevoix Mich, for an appropriation to improve the Pine River, was introduced in the House, Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The Progress says a man known as "Big Jim Bailey" fished on Pine River near Torch Lake, got into a mess with Pat Hackett last week, and received a pummeling. Smith was intoxicated and quarrelsome—"looking for a fight," as the saying is.

Resigned.—Robert Miller, Esq., of this village, tendered his resignation as Justice of the Peace, this week, and the Board unanimly accepted it. Mr. Miller has performed his duties with credit, both to himself and the township, and we are sorry to see him retire.

Frozen.—Pine River, below the bridge, has been frozen over sufficient to bear up men and cattle, during the late cold snap. It has never been known to occur before. The circumstance was not attributable so much to cold weather as to lack of current caused by a heavy south-west wind.

Quarterly Meeting will be held to-day and to-morrow, at the school house. Presiding Elder Miller and Rev. Mr. Worthington of Traverse City, are expected to be present. Mr. Worthington is called the orator of the Michigan Conference, and he will probably preach to-morrow evening.

Masonic Ball.—The Masons of Grand Traverse held a grand ball and reception at the Gaston House, in Traverse City, on Thursday evening last. The telegraph tells us that 59 members were sold, and everything passed off in a pleasant manner. Amos Fox and lady were in attendance from Charlevoix.

Notaries Public.—His Excellency has appointed the following Notaries Public for this region: For Charlevoix county—W. A. Smith, G. W. Miller, Wm. Hayward A. Bittner. For Antrim county—Roland Ralph, J. H. and P. M. Woodcock. For Manistee county—I. R. Presley, P. P. Cross. For Grand Traverse—Ambrose L. Chambers, P. W. Hackett, L. Gray.

An Honest Man.—Wm. Evans, age one Fountain house, while traveling through this county was taken sick, early in the week, and died. He had evidently carried on a work at the house of Hon. John S. Dixon. On his departure, being in destitute circumstances, he would rather pay in consideration for gratitude. He thereby left, however, he was a check for 200 to Mr. Dixon from Vineland N. J.

To Build Not to Be.—The Progress says that the Senator, representative and Supervisors of Antrim county are to meet at Highland's hotel, at the head of Torch lake on the 20th inst. for the purpose of discussing matters relating to the welfare and development of that county. The question will whether the county should be bonded and others on the county, shall be determined, and the location of the county buildings and all other matters of importance.

Pine River.—Some one told Hon. Joseph Smith Ann lately, that the Government appropriated an item of $10,000, on the understanding made by our representative then, if County. The Attorney knows all about it, and has quite good hopes for the item. He telegraphed his acceptance to the Governor, and took quarters at the Fountain City House until the needful piece of legislation by the Senate. Through the influence of some of the dodge-clubbers and organs, he was allowed an audience with him on Monday evening, on Tuesday morning and getting in four very cold. The news came on Tuesday that it was a hoax, and Hon. Joseph returned home.

Pine River Improvement.—Joint Resolution.

The following joint Resolution introduced by Mr. Green, during the session and the improvement of Pine River, and which passed the House last week.

Whereas, The improvement of Pine River, Charlevoix County, Michigan, is of great importance to the commercial interests of the State, and to the people residing in the vicinity of said river; and

Whereas, The Government of the United States has been applied to for the improvement of said river, but has not been acted upon by reason of the insufficiency of the appropriation for the improvement of said river; and

Whereas, It is the duty of the State to aid in the improvement of said river, when the General Government shall refuse to do so; therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Michigan, That the Governor be and he is hereby requested to memorialize the Congress of the United States to appropriate the necessary sum for the improvement of said river, and that our Senators and Representatives in Congress be instructed and requested to use their influence to procure such appropriation.

Resolved, That the Governor be and he is hereby requested to transmit a copy of these resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

The Weather.

The storm across the mouth could spoil to have been the most severe on all points of the country. It has been severe for the past 10 days, commencing on Saturday, the 16th, at Omaha, 24 below zero; 22 at Yankton; 18 at Sioux City, Iowa; 20 at Fort Sully; 12 below zero; 33 at Fort Randall; 20 at St. Cloud; 20 at Winona; 24 at Red Wing; 32 at Hastings; 30 at St. Paul; 35 at Hudson; 34 at Prescott; 13 at Fort Wayne; 24 at Clayton; 6 below; 46 at Milwaukee; 22 at Chicago; 25

Compare the above with Spring Lake only 10 degrees—Spring Lake Independent.

Quarterly Meeting will be held to-day and to-morrow, at the school house. Presiding Elder Miller and Rev. Mr. Worthington of Traverse City, are expected to be present. Mr. Worthington is called the orator of the Michigan Conference, and he will probably preach to-morrow evening.

Masonic Ball.—The Masons of Grand Traverse held a grand ball and reception at the Gaston House, in Traverse City, on Thursday evening last. The telegraph tells us that 59 members were sold, and everything passed off in a pleasant manner. Amos Fox and lady were in attendance from Charlevoix.

Must people like onions, but dislike to eat them because of the bad breath they produce in the mouth. They can be completely destroyed and rendered odorless in a half gallon of water for the space of a minute or two. Pour in the cold pepper, salt and butter, and when cooked a few spoonfuls of sweet cream. No taste of onions will remain in the mouth, nor can it be detected on the breath.

The Situation.

The situation in regard to the secession movement appears to be almost over. Sixty-seven votes are required to elect a Senator, and the Democrats have sixty-five votes in joint convention. Two Democrats, Messrs. Hill and Hall, of Ingham county, have declared that they will not be bound by the action of the caucus, but will vote for Republican candidates. Thus there are but two votes to spare, even should Messrs. Hill and Hall vote with the Democrats. As the latter have not declared that they will do so, it is probable that they will remain in their seats, and thus prevent a quorum from voting. Should they vote with the Democrats, the latter would have but one vote to spare, even then half of the Democratic members would be required to be present to form a quorum. Should they not

EXPENSIVE FURS.

The subject of furs, hints to my text the Empress of Russia's visit to Paris to her way to the south from England where she visited the residence of her daughter, the Duchess of Edinburgh) confinement. The finds the majority of the furs worn on her arrival is said to be of the value of 100,000 francs, consisting of the richest Siberian sheepskin. No less than 228 skins were employed on the cloak, each skin being estimated at 300 francs. [illegible] and valuable fur is worth upward of 220,000 francs. Mme. Adelaide Patti, the Marquise de Caux, received as a present from the Empress Alexander during the late visit to St. Petersburg, a set of magnificent furs of the value of 50,000 francs. The may be said to [illegible] some purpose. The outgoings of the Marquise when she arrived in Paris created no little sensation. Black horses, bells, fine and even carriages were alleged to be the Russian style! Nothing was wanting, the pretty prima donna herself being grandest without and leaving no [illegible] for the curious which were passing but on the Parisian boards in the new part of Valentin, in "The Huguenots" now to her admirers there.

Colored Masonry.

The introduction of Masonry among the colored men in this country was by the issuing, passing and raising of thirteen colored men into a traveling lodge attached to the Irish Lodge stationed at Boston, Mass., on the 6th of March, 1775, the the 29th of September, A. D. 1784, Prince Hall Grand Lodge was formed in Boston with the above named lodges. In 1827 the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was instituted, and in 1847 the National Grand Lodge was formed. There are nearly 100,000 colored Masons in this country.

The project of the tunnel under the English channel has been officially announced from the French government to the Legislative Corps. Among other plans this is suggested that the means of ventilating the entire bore should be placed in the hands of each government, so that, in case of war breaking out between the two countries, the work may be rendered useless. It is calculated that a force of 2,000 horse power, operating for two months, would be sufficient to pump the water out of the tunnel.

A man was seen coming out of a Texas newspaper office with an axe, gouge, chisel and his nose spread all over his face like a piece of raw beef, and no one showed off. The policemen who interviewed him, he replied: "I didn't like an article that appeared in the paper but we don't want terse the man who writ it. He war thar, stranger."

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLIARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - JAN. 30, 1875

☞ Grand Rapids now claims a population of 28,000.

☞ The Detroit people now cross over to Canada on the ice.

☞ Gen. Burnside's friends are proclaiming that they are sure of electing him Senator from Rhode Island when the Legislature meets next month.

☞ The Beecher-Tilton trial is now going on in New York. The result will be looked for with deep interest by many millions of people.

☞ Over $16 000 have been subscribed to endow the Williams professorship at the University. The amount named is $25,000. Jay A. Hubbell and T. W. Palmer of Detroit gave 1,000 each.

☞ The women of Michigan all take an interest in politics now. They are divided into two great parties, the war cry of the one being "Woman for office holders," and that of the other, "Women for baby-holders."

☞ Andy Johnson, in his wonderful egotism says: "Grant is a little man, not only physically, but mentally, and so is Sheridan a little man a little upstart. It would not require a very remarkable pair of scales to measure the brains of either or both combined." Wonder how many soldiers could be induced to believe that Andy knows what he is talking about.

☞ In New York Francis Kernan, Democrat, was elected on the first ballot, and Ex-Vice President Hamlin, Republican was equally fortunate in Maine. In Massachusetts, two ballots were had with out resulting in an election. Congressman Dawes was elected, and was probably he elected. In the Pennsylvania Legislature, only one ballot was taken, Wallace Democrat, being elected.

☞ Several years ago an invalid named Russell was appointed Postmaster at Hillsdale. A few years after his appointment he died, and his daughter, a very estimable young lady was appointed in her father's place, and has continued to fill the position honorably and with credit until this month, when she has been ousted to make room for a prominent political candidate and in protest of over 200 of the business men of the city. The petition that asked for the appointment of her successor contained but five names and one of those five signed the protest also. Justice with a vengeance.

☞ During the current year national banks paid to the government over $8 000,000 in taxes, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue estimates that at the expiration of the year the amount will reach $9 000,000—$300,000 more than was collected during the preceding year.

☞ The name of the mysterious giver of $5,000 checks to charitable objects in England, has been brought to light by his death. His name was Atwood, and gave away by these recent donations $2,000,000 and left $5,000,000 for his distant heirs —for he was a bachelor without immediate kin—to scramble over.

☞ The foreman of the jury that convicted Stokes supports the latter's petition for a pardon by the statement that the verdict was the result of a compromise, a number of the jurors, including himself having been in favor of absolute acquittal because they thought Stokes was justified in hotter-ing than he had acquitted.

☞ Beecher's Boston worshipers are expending this little story in behalf of the good man: "A lady on Beacon Hill was the happy possessor of one of those pretty parlor ornaments, a globe full of gold fish. She sneered one of the largest of the fishes Henry Ward and named the other Jay. A moment of suspense on the other day. Henry Ward ate Tilton up. Luckily there was no mutual friend in the case, else, perhaps, he would have met the same fate."

☞ At a ball in Ulster, N. Y. the other night, a mock marriage was indiged in and two couples had lots of fun. When it was dying out, further fun was introduced by the statement that the dignified party who had with owlish solemnity pronounced them one was a justice of the peace fully qualified, and that it would take a greeler magistrate than he to untie the knots he had tied. Then there was weeping and wailing on the part of the girls, for both were engaged to other parties than those to whom they had thus been bound.

☞ A fire broke out in the Navy Department at Washington on the 25th, which was extinguished. Much damage was done, but investigation shows that the building is as much damaged by water as by flames. It is thought that the fire originated from a defective flue, as the room where it was first discovered was not occupied. Nearly all the papers destroyed can be replaced. The secretary's office proper in the wing of the main building was not damaged.

☞ Harvey Washington, the nephew of George Washington, who has been practicing law at Washington, D. C. for many years, died a few days ago, at Shreveport La., whither he had gone to open an office. He had no family, was about eighty years old and seemed to be quite alone in the world, in spite of the noble blood in his veins. He knew of no relatives living except a few nephews and nieces, in whom he expressed but little interest. Mr. Washington, who had lived an eccentric life, left considerable property.

☞ Ohio reports this year, through her Governor's message, that the debt falling due will exhaust all her sinking fund and require over a million of dollars to be raised by taxation. Michigan is sharply looking about to anticipate the payment of her bonds with the surplus in her sinking fund, which, with its resources is more than ample enough to provide for every dollar of the debt when it becomes due. Not more than one or two States in the Union are in as sound and easy a financial condition as Michigan to-day, and they have no debts at all.

☞ The indications are that the present Legislature will make some radical changes in the law relative to the liquor traffic. A special committee on the subject has been appointed in each branch, that in the Senate consisting of Messrs. Gray, Fish, Jones, Grenzel and Redfield. Two are understood to favor taxation, two prohibition and one license. The House committee consists of Messrs. Heimer, Hollon, E. H. Green, of this District, Churchill, West, Knight and Lansing since a majority of whom are known to be opposed to prohibitory legislation. These Committees will probably agree in due time upon some method of taxing the traffic.

☞ A Rome dispatch of the 24th says: Gen. Garibaldi landed at Civita Vecchia yesterday evening. He was received with the most enthusiastic demonstrations by the people, and conducted through the town by a torchlight procession. The General arrived in Rome to day. He was met at the railway station by the mayor and members of the municipality and received with great demonstrations. The Roman Houses are proclaiming in favor that "we expect to make the Democratic party the great anti-slavery party of the nation," when Chief Justice Chase, then Senator from Ohio, was endeavoring to reorganize the Democracy of that State upon an assured anti-slavery basis. In this State, in 1851, when the "Hunker" element of the Democratic party, with a keen prevision that the coming power of the Democratic would be controlled by pro slavery influences, sought to defeat the nomination of Mr. McClelland for governor of this State, the Free Soil party, which at the previous Presidential election had cast nine 10,000 votes, refrained from putting any candidate into the field against McClelland in order to support the anti-slavery side of that contest. In 1852 the votes of Free Soil stock had declined. Littlejohn, who came from the Democrats in 1848 to support Van Buren and Adams, went back to the Democrats and voted for Pierce, and Hoit, who in 1848 came from the Whigs, went back in 1852 to vote for Scott. This was when Chandler was a Whig candidate for governor upon a platform pledged to maintain the "settlement" of the slavery question and a faithful enforcement of the Fugitive Slave Act! Judge Christiancy was Free Soil candidate for Governor during two years more on the organization of the Republican party, 1854. Judge C. was one of the faithful and influential friends of the principles which have since become national. Repeatedly during that year of conventions, in Jackson, Kalamazoo and again at Jackson, the platform, wisdom, zeal and patriotism of Judge Christiancy through all the vexatious issues of those months, was eminently conspicuous in the results attained. These vexations spring mainly from the efforts of the Whig party, then hopelessly disorganized, to rehabilitate itself in the fresh garments of the Free Soilers. The attempt to capture the Jackson Convention and nominate Chandler for governor instead of Bingham, who was then in nomination as the Free Soil candidate was very nearly successful. The plans of that campaign resulted in a victory for the Republican party, the fruits of which still endure, and what they were and how they were executed Judge Christiancy could tell all about if he chose.

The present generation of active politicians know of Judge Christiancy only or mainly for the integrity and ability with which he ran through the bristle of the Supreme Court bench during the last seventeen years. They need not fear that the record in the Senate will not display the same marked characteristics of ability, integrity and faithfulness which have hitherto been so eminent in his public services. He is a Republican, "dyed in the wool"—not "made up and dipped for the occasion"—and his constituents may rest with entire confidence that in the possible different duties before him in his new sphere, he will never fail to use the true principle for the solution of every doubtful problem, that he will have no other thought than the judicious application of that principle; and that in the performance of any of the duties of his senatorial position, he will be as effectively out-spoken by any personal considerations as he has been when pressing arguments and forming and delivering opinions on the bench of the Supreme Court. And this will be a great gain. Detroit Tribune.

Reported Expressly for the Sentinel.

The following inventions were patented during the week ending January 26th, 1875:

Wm. Bell, Jr., Cleveland, O., Improvement in Machines for Making Wire Nails.

Strange Preservation of a Corpse.

In the town of Elmwood, Fleming County, Ky., is an old private burial place, where ten dead of several prominent families are deposited. About twenty years ago Daniel Fickling—one of the most prominent members of the community—buried at this place, and presently laid his daughter Lizzie, aged about four years, beside her. Fickling was buried by his side several years ago. Mrs. Lucy D. Rogers, daughter of Mr. Fickling and wife of Elder John L. Rogers, died and her dust was deposited with that of her husband. Her infant child died about three weeks after its mother, and was buried in a metallic coffin in the same grave. Last Saturday, at the instance of Charles L. Eckles, of Memphis, son of Daniel Fickling, the remains of the above mentioned persons were disinterred, with a view to their removal to the country at Farmington. Each corpse had resolved its native dust with the exception of the infant buried seventeen years ago. That was in a state of perfect preservation. Even the color of the eyes could be distinguished, the hair black and long; the face did not have the pallor of death, but had a bright flesh color. A small gold pin fastened the burial shroud around the neck. The clothes in which the infant was dressed resembled white wax work and the whole appearance of the corpse was so natural as seemingly to bear the features of death, while of its mother nothing remains but the decaying bones.

No man can read about all these bargains without a determination to have his wife sleep on the front side of the bed.

In Troy, the other night, Robert Smith was shot during a bar-room fracas, the ball hitting him in the stomach. He fell exclaiming "I'm shot" and was carried home and placed in bed. The doctor refused to probe the wound for the ball, as it was evidently in his stomach, and probing would only aggravate matters. Smith lay three days gradually growing weaker and paler, when the doctor, examining the position Smith was in when he received the fatal shot, found the hole the bullet had made in its passage, but marveled much that he found no corresponding rent in the lining of the garment. Further search brought the bullet from its hiding place between the fabric and the lining of the pants; and the quickest one in the world that of Smith, who, on this discovery, bounded from the bed a well man, with the glow of health in his face, and with the severe pain of the last few days all gone from his inwards.

A correspondent of the Cleveland Leader describes one of the tombs in the famous Milan Cathedral. Procuring a permit and a priest, we descended by the subterraneous chapel, the richest in Europe. Here I had the pleasure of coming in contact with the most distinguished and wealthiest dead head in the world, the late lamented St. Charles Borromeo, who died 200 years since. "None knew him but to love him; none named him but to praise." He was a cardinal, bishop of Milan, and good to the poor, and for his many virtues was canonized. His remains lie in a rich coffin of silver, and through the crystal sides you see the dead and withered skull grinning skull grinning in the midst of rich robes, rare jewels and flowing gems. The coffin is hung with costly offerings, and the ceiling of the chapel is covered with bas-relief in solid silver, representing events in the saint's life. In this little chapel 10x12, $4,000,000 have been lavished. In the coffin hangs a gold cross containing seven emeralds, each as large as a chestnut, incrusted in diamonds. This little ornament is worth $100,000.

The Zorich Cremation Society now counts upwards of 600 members, and it has latterly given evidence of a resolve to bring its views to a practical bearing. It has opened negotiations with Prof. Siemens, of Dresden, for a furnace for consuming the bodies. A committee has also been appointed to look out for a suitable place for establishing a columbarium (where urns with the ashes of the deceased are placed in niches).

Grand Rapids is moving for a Superior Court, the lawyers of that city have perfected a bill which the Legislature will be asked to pass. The salary of the Judge is placed at $2,500; the State to pay $1,500 of that amount, and Grand Rapids $1,000

Horse Discipline.

The instrument by which Caligula tore to pieces the body of Macro is described by Dion Cassius as a kind of bed, the sides of which were composed of many rows of sword points, three in number, so that the wounded could not move without being pierced. Nero had a machine for the same purpose, which was constructed in such a manner that the bottom floor of the room moved as well as the ceiling, so that the victim was crushed to death between the two. THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - FEB. 6, 1875

☞ The Township Board of Traverse, Grand Traverse county, has issued an order for the killing of all dogs not licensed.

☞ Jerry Mellen Benson who served five years under the late Napoleon, died at Detroit, Jan. 15, aged 61 years.

☞ It is easy for the multitude who use kerosene lamps to keep 2 good chandeliers at Pittsburg constantly engaged in making lamp chimneys.

☞ An old cologne of Flint remarked lately that when a man who owns cows is stands a chance of going to one of three places—to sea, to sea, or Ann Arbor.

☞ A Detroit House of Correction convict is the son of a wealthy New York merchant who owns four wholesale stores in different parts of the country.

☞ Two hundred and forty-three persons perished on the lakes in 1874, against 221 in 1873, and 219 in 1872. The estimated damage to property lists up $3,034,050 against $3,760,000 in 1873.

☞ The examination of the cedar of Navy Department shows that arrangements had been under way to burn the building. Trains of rope and waste paper were laid about the floor connecting with pipes of rosin, shavings and broken fly kindling wood. It is believed that the fire was the act of an incendiary. Detectives are at work.

☞ Thus the way a colored preacher is said to have arranged his hearers for mutual convenience: "De fore part ob de church will please sit down so de hind part ob de church can see de fore part, for de hind part can't see de fore part ob de fore part persist in standin' before de hind part to de utter exclusion ob de hind part by de fore part."

☞ In the Senate, on the 25th inst., Mr. Chandler presented a petition of citizens of Michigan, soldiers in the late war, praying an amendment of the homestead law so as to authorize a wounded soldier to enter upon and improve 160 acres of the public land by proxy, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

☞ The Idaho Tendrocrat is a new paper edited by two ladies. In their introductory, among other things they say: "We shall have a fellow feeling in our bosoms for all struggling and oppressed humanity everywhere.—Now we submit. It proves that any two women who will allow 'a fellow feeling in their bosoms' are not calculated to conduct a respectable family newspaper.—Exchange.

☞ Pure buckwheat flour, when baked into cake, as is usual, is apt to rise heavy on the stomach; the fact has given rise to the remark "As obstinate thing and improper otherwise, not Graham flour with the buckwheat—a little more than two much buckwheat, with one other Graham or unbolted flour. This mixture is found a huge quantities and kept on hand for use. The Graham will make it light, and digestion and make it palatable and wholesome.

☞ The Missouri Legislature has elected Carl Cockrill, an anti-Schurz democrat, to the U. S. Senate, as Mr. Schurz's successor. He is of course a Democrat. Missouri has lost as able representative in the retirement of Carl Schurz and his seat means likely to remain vacant. Mr. Schurz although elected as a Republican has acted largely during the past few years with the Democracy, but they only paid him the compliment of a few votes.

☞ About one thousand persons, including many members of the General Assembly, municipal officers and citizens, visited the chapel at the Ohio Penitentiary lately, to witness the marriage of Thomas Mars and Nancy Scott, two convicts whose term of service for burglary having expired. The parties were engaged to be married at the time the burglary was committed, and rather than be separated from her lover, the woman plead guilty and consented to an imprisonment of two years.

☞ "Old Abe," the pet eagle of the 8th Wisconsin regiment during the civil war, is still alive, and domiciled as a pensioner at the capital of its native State. The bird was in nineteen pitched battles and as many as eighteen skirmishes, and had several feathers cut out of his plumage by a Confederate bullet. He would enjoy a brisk fight as well as any soldier, and his keen screams of defiance are said to have been often heard distinctly above the din of musketry and cannon.

☞ That gallant, patriotic Democratic organ, the Toledo Blade, has been elected to the U. S. Senate from Rhode Island. He is worthy of the honor, and will doubtless make a wise, faithful and discreet legislator.

☞ His name is Andrew—called Andy for short—and he has just been elected U. S. Senator from Tennessee. There was a long and excited contest. On the fifty-fourth ballot Johnson had 47; Henry 13; Stephens 21; King 4; Ewing, 11; Nobody 2; Henry 3; Stephens 21; King 4; Ewing, 11; Nobody 2; King, 3; Ewing, 9. The president-elected Andrew Johnson elected United States Senator amid the wildest excitement and enthusiasm.

☞ The Lansing Republican says that the paper "devoted by Horace Greeley" is sinking pretty fast. In Brighton, Livingston county, we learn that it has but one subscriber for its weekly, where there used to be 80. In Lansing it has only 25 where there used to be 1200. Since Jay Gould, the Erie Railway cronies can get control of enough stock to declare from the manipulatory of its financial assessment it has largely declined. A single number will work under the head of "Scandal Literature" contains 14 columns of Beecher-Tilton filth.

☞ The Lansing Republican says that a telegraph operator named J. S. Mosher[illegible] was recently convicted in the Hudson county (N. Y.) court, of misdemeanor, for carelessness in ordering the conductor of a train on the Erie Railway to proceed, when he had been instructed to detain that train. His only defense was an unsuccessful impeachment of the testimony of the conductor of the train which caused the collision. The penalty for manslaught is from two to ten years in the State prison.

☞ The Washington Capital has a correspondent in London, who writes that a lady of leisure-freedom remarked to him the other day that she believed they had an old church ruins in America they gardens medium" replied the correspondent, "an old of church ruins. Invoked Pyramids, Church ruins and Christmas Church ruins and others put like them Ireland around. The honorable assignment brought her off ere to hear an me, and said something in a feeble way about its being rather damp you know."

☞ The most experienced member of the next Senate is likely to be Senator Hamlin who was recently elected by the Legislature of Maine. He has served four years in the lower house, and twenty-two years in the Senate including the term of four years during which he was the presiding officer of the body being vice-president. Now he will have six more years. He is a man of unblemished reputation, and must, in any position, reflect honor on the State he represents.

☞ The House of Representatives is engaged in a prolonged over the Civil Rights bill, which bids fair to be the grimmest contest of endurance which has ever taken place in the House of Representatives. Both sides are still determined, the Democrats to delay action on the bill by filibustering, and the Republicans to stand by their guns until the factious opposition is exhausted or beaten, and will consent to a fair discussion and action upon the bill. It seems to us that the Republicans have acted in this matter with great forbearance and leniency. They have offered to give the Democrats a fair opportunity to debate and propose amendments to the bill. The Democrats on the other hand boast of their intention to filibuster until the 4th of March rather than permit the bill to come to a vote. The action is factious and unexcusable.

☞ The Supreme Court of the State of Nevada decided that the American doctrine of marriage makes all marriage contracts void which are entered into without the consent of both parties, and under which the parties continue to live afterward in the acknowledged relations of husband and wife. The validity does not depend upon the form or ceremony. Indeed a ceremony may be dispensed with. In the absence of any proof to the contrary, all marriages entered into any foreign country are to be held valid with out reference to the laws or ceremonies prevalent there unless they can be proved to invalidate the marriage. Here as such marriages are valid, wherever contracted, unless some express law or statute can be cited which implicitly invalidates them.

☞ At the straightforward record of Judge Christiancy on the Republican side is understood—and we can add to it that he refused to support Greeley, and that he voted the Republican ticket in this city at the late general election—the Democracy are not as happy as they were. They see that instead of capturing Republican votes for a Democrat, they were captured en masse for a Republican. We have a right to make this claim for Judge Christiancy, from his past record and his present declarations, and it will be a great pleasure to the people of this state—a majority of whom are still Republicans—if the Lansing Democrat as it has been. On the contrary question he stands exactly where he has been often heard distinctly above the Republicans.

White Sheep Corn Says.

The St. Louis Republican had an interview with General Sheridan a few days ago on the New Orleans business, in the course of which that officer expressed himself in a manner which must strike the Democratic heart with pain and disgust. The Interior Democrats seem to say a few weeks ago that in its opinion the report of General Sherman's sympathy with these southern banditti was most absurd as well as unfounded. This was eagerly kept in motion by the Northern Democracy, and caused the eyes of these President hunters to glisten at the possible prospect of having as eminent soldier for their candidate in 1876. But Sheridan put a damper on their hopes. And what will disgust such men as Thurman Bayard, Seligs, Hancocks and others still more, he does not think Phil Sheridan a brawler, a fanatic, nor even with the Chicago Tribune, "an unblooded Irishman," "unlicensed" and "politicious," who does not understand the complex questions presented in the Louisiana difficulties, but following a line of action on the contrary, the following is his opinion:

General Sheridan said [illegible] a man, nowadays to say one word here and another there in the course of a day, and then call it down to the Democracy, and believed in a manner [illegible] that New Orleans would become more [illegible] than it is to-day. He thought it [illegible] and that is the kind of a man Sheridan is. But he is also prudent and discreet, and will do nothing to compromise himself or precipitate events.

Regarding the disturbance of the troops by several citizens he thought not.

The military could not decide as to the rightfulness or wrongfulness of the claims of the contending parties; that could only be done by the action of the people themselves as to the legality of the election, and the President, as an executive officer, had no opportunity to decide whether the one party or the other was entitled to exercise the power. Louisiana. He thought the President, having once recognized the Kellogg government, had made up his mind to sustain it until declared by Congress or the Supreme Court of the United States to be illegal.

* * *

As to the question whether a fair election has been or can be held in Louisiana, is a matter for careful consideration. The present condition of affairs in Louisiana is absurdly.

The last sentence is almost a literal reiteration of the words of Sheridan in his first dispatch. It is now in order to raise a howl against Sheridan.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The following appears in the Times Berchet letter is refuted by the New York Tribune.

Gen. Tracy took the cross questioning of Mr. Mouillesaux the point where it terminated on Wednesday, and after a few unimportant answers, the questioner came to the consideration of the real point over of examination alleged to have been written Mr. Beecher's dictation. During the examination upon this theme there was profound silence in the court room, and every eye was turned on the witness. He seemed curiously at ease and displayed no hesitancy in replying to Gen. Tracy's significant questions. The first admission made by him was that he could not remember any letter in which Mr. Beecher addressed him as "My dear Frank," except the one which was asserted to have been written at the defendant's dictation. The witness was examined carefully and at length concerning the manner in which the letter was written. The stenographer of the city followed Mr. Sherman read the letter as he said, for the purpose of having it in connection with understood. Immediately after reading Mr. Sherman took a seal and read added to the end. "Now and the words "good" as to make the word "good night for myself." The remarks of counsel ensued at this point, first arose from the [illegible] of the question in the grand jury. The jury is composed entirely from witness in counsel and from counsel for witness. In addition to this, Mouillesaux had produced Mr. Sherman then stated that two different times in his session and the latter. Another report of conversation was brought up by counsel. Some of the jurymen looked sharply first at the plaintiff and then at Mr. Mouillesaux, as if expecting an explanation from one or the other. Mr. Mouillesaux smiled significantly. Mr. Morris was greatly excited jumping to his feet, he asked for the jury to be [illegible] hearing it. He, with Mr. Pinkerton, were over it hastily. Then Mr. Morris resumed Mr. Sherman of having tried to create a false impression. He recalled with humor it was plain that the pen used in writing the letter did not flow over the ink freely, and in this way he accounted for the difference in the appearance of the several parts. He stated that counsel for the defense will endeavor to prove by experts that the letter was written from the original form, and it is asserted that this point, in connection with the fact that the letter was written by Mouillesaux, will form the basis of an appeal to the jury to consider it void. The assertions made by counsel for the defense plainly annoyed Mr. Tilton's lawyers.

Farms & Farming Lands

Bought and sold on commission.

We are now preparing an Abstract of Titles of Emmet County. It will be complete in a few weeks, and we can then furnish Abstracts on short notice.

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable lots, [illegible] which we offer at very low figures.

No. 1. 80 acres. First rate farming land [illegible] under from Little Traverse bay, four well timbered—beech and maple soil—rich sandy loam; will be sold very cheap. Eq. of sec. of section 30, Town 36 North, of Range 6 west.

No. 2. 40 acres. Sw¼ of nw¼ section 30 Town 31 North, of Range 8 west. 2½ mile from Petoskey City, with 10 acres cleared small log house; will be sold at a bargain.

No. 3. 186 acres. N½ of se¼, nw¼ of sw¼ and fractional one half of section 32. Will be sold in separate parcels or in a body, has a large creek running the whole length, with good water powers. Well improved, and will be sold cheap for cash. This is one of the best chances in the country for a person wishing to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many descriptions of Farming Lands near Petoskey City, which we will sell at reasonable prices. Some of the Lands have old Indian improvements, and can easily be made into farms.

☞ Don't watch to subscription for the SENTINEL.

Dr. LEWIS is again about [illegible] to give a grand ball the 22d of this month.

Hon. E. H. Green represented Charlevoix Lodge F. & A. M. in the 32nd Lodge, lately held in Detroit.

Brown Sue comes out with a new advertisement this week which cannot fail to attract attention. Consult it.

Horse-race.—Sprague, of the Traverse Bay Eagle, is hearing [illegible] and has a wire from his office to the [illegible].

E. Carpenter of this village was appointed a superintendent of [illegible] the Board of Supervisors at [illegible] sion.

Ahn Hodges.—An Indian [illegible] Little Traverse had his arm [illegible] wrestling on Monday. He was [illegible] to Charlevoix for treatment.

Loss—Between this office and the Fountain City House, a checked shawl. By leaving it at this office the finder will confer a favor upon the owner.

Sessions Ix.—Judge Ramsdell who left here for Traverse City via Petoskey, on Tuesday, is snowed in at Walton Junction.

Robert Miller, Esq., has again taken possession of his blacksmith shop. Mr. Gifford having been compelled by ill health to throw up his lease.

The elder Mellor, who lives near the head of Pine Lake, came down on Saturday in take out his final papers of citizenship, but being unable to find anybody who could testify to his good moral character, he returned home unnaturalized.

The new schooner being built by Messrs Campbell & Rose, in this village, is being hurried toward completion as rapidly as the weather permits. The frames are all up, and the outside plank are being put on. The owners are negotiating with Buffalo parties for her canvass.

The Operators sent to the offices of the Western Union Telegraph Company between here and Traverse City have been withdrawn by the company. The Charlevoix office is in charge of W. A. Smith, and P. J. Lewis dispenses lightning at Torch Lake.

Nearer Relief.—We learn that Mr. Custer who runs the stage line [illegible] this place, got lost on one of the [illegible] tween Cheboygan and Petoskey in the storm Wednesday, and narrowly escaped freezing to death before he could find his way off.

Favorable.—A late letter from Senator Chandler states that he shall ask for an appropriation for Charlevoix harbor, and if the Engineer's report was favorable he knows of no reason why we should not receive it. From the fact that the Engineer's report was favorable, we think the situation is encouraging.

Accident.—Mrs. J. S. Dixon, of this place, met with a serious accident on Monday night last. In crossing the corridor of the second story of their residence, in the dark, she accidentally stepped over the stairway, and fell the whole length of the flight, cutting a serious gash in her head, and otherwise bruising her. She remained senseless until morning, but is now rational, and rapidly recovering.

Junior or Probate.—On the 29th Hon. Bagley appointed Wm. Harris of Norwood, Judge of Probate for Charlevoix county, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Richard Cooper. We are of the opinion that the appointment will give general satisfaction to the people of the county. Mr. Harris, is a man of good judgment, and one who deserves well the appointment.

Resources.—Meetings have been held in this village nearly evening this week when the weather would permit. There has been preaching by Presiding Elder Miller, Revs Cole and Whitney, and considerable religious interest has been manifested.

—There will be preaching to-morrow both morning and evening, by Rev. Geo. W. Wood.

The Wires.—The wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company, between this place and Traverse City sized up terribly against the late fierce storm, while between the latter place and Muskegon it was badly damaged. On Tuesday, before the storm, some choppers in Marion fell a tree across the wire, but it was promptly repaired, and during the heaviest of the storm communication was kept up with our sister village.

The shrieking coughs is raging at Traverse City.

The Club dinner on Thursday evening, notwithstanding the bad weather was a success. These parties are greatly considered, break up at 12 o'clock and are a source of much genuine and harmless amusement among the young people. The music is truly exhilarating, and would make a Baptist deacon dance if there were a spark of human nature in his body.

Wanted a Local.—On Tuesday we [illegible] from Hon. [illegible] Leads editor of the Grand Traverse Herald:

TRAVERSE CITY, Feb. 4.

W. A. SMITH, Charlevoix:

A lively snow-storm for twenty-four hours. No trains. Send 2 lbs. a local.

H. C. LEACH.

We judge from the tenor of the dispatch that Traverse City is subject to blockaded roads, and therefore is a quiet place for locals, as well as Charlevoix and its editor.

The Storm.—The severest storm of the season prevailed throughout Wednesday and Thursday of the week. Although the mercury only reached three below zero, the terrible wind and blinding snow rendered it extremely unpleasant to be out of doors. No mails have arrived from either way since Wednesday, and at Traverse City on Lakes have arrived since Monday evening. The railroads not high [illegible] and no [illegible] possible to [illegible].

Circuit Court.—The [illegible] cases disposed of before Circuit Court on Saturday:

Case of A. Fox vs Henry Nowland—appeal; verdict of jury in lower court reversed, and verdict given for plaintiff; damages, $20. 87; costs, $13.88.

The appointment of A. Bullard as Deputy Clerk was confirmed.

The following named persons were admitted to full citizenship: Joseph Clark, George Clark, Forbes Murray, Neil P. Campbell, Henry Vance and Wm. Vance.

Musquitoes.—If the Detroit doctors get all the lying mosquito-makers of Bush wants who infest this locality, it will be because their slippery tongues help them out of the scrape. Nothing but a dead and [illegible] corpse can escape their snares and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Result of the "Democratic Victories."

It is worthy of special remark that every "democratic victory" that has been gained North or South since the close of the rebellion has been virtually a triumph of the pro-rebel element of that party. The first onslaught on Democratic victory of every war was made in Georgia, where, soon after Alexander H. Stephens the Vice President of the "Confederate States," was elected to Congress, left Europe, a rebel general, passed Union lines to Washington. The next apparent Democratic victory was in Ohio, about two years ago, [illegible] pardoned by the Federal Government on parole of the Confederate Senator. As time and circumstances dictate his full loyalties for election to the Iowa House of Congress appear a flock of men who were either rebels in sympathy or with the rebellion, three of the same style of "patriots" have recently been chosen United States senators, namely, Cockrell a rebel General, Pratt Missouri, Kansas a rebel sympathizer, and New York, John McDonald, another bitter unpardoned rebel from Indiana.

As the case is so long and it is before the Democracy and country, the United States Congress into the Congress of the "Confederate States?" In the Tennessee Legislature, yesterday, was Jeff Davis' son among those who were elected Democratic members.—Chicago Journal.

It would that King Log has been pumped from the flock to the Democratic Board of Masters at the mere sight of the Mule's heel. We might believe this statement, did we not know that the former, referred to in fable, gives to and takes of quickly.

Which Should Have the Child?

It is reported of Solomon of old that he said but a single case to decide as between two women, two women each claiming the motherhood of the child. To-day for the settlement of the whole living proposition, we don't see how any one such case can be found. The true mother is not that revolting wretch that would sacrifice any other and the feelings of any, to give her other one all they possible. A specimen somewhat to the opposite has been in the custody of a police station at Chicago, a ragged, dirty, and sick child. The station matron found that the child had no mother, giving the poor little neglect was deliver, vaccinated to interpret and took the basket and child to Mr. Lonzo Kellogg's room, since which the station matron he is glad to find out that the youngster is exactly. The poster and his wife never made glad for they were childless, with strong paternal desire originated. Then Mod the baby pudgy out of the basket and found a treasure of another sort. It was a [illegible] of money, and it was counted. Soon as the station matron found of the parents' good fortune she demanded the basket and its contents. Of course the poster refused to give them up and hence the question of right between them. It would not take a souvenir to decide to which of the men the mother, could she be consulted, would intend he should.

An English journal says "A decidedly novel amusement has been regarded during the last few days. It is to walk a hair to the telegraph by the side of the railroad, and enable the telegraph clerk at the nearest station to tell him by electricity from the station whenever there is a train on the line, the idea being that as soon as the driver of a train saw those lights burning in what being his engine is installed, and remain standing until he received instructions to proceed.

One of the Paris dramatics has this story figured "Labouleye" A dancer girl who liked to see in comfort and do nothing asked her fairy godmother to give her a good genius to do everything for her. On the instant the fairy called the dwarf, who dressed and washed the little girl and combed her hair. All this was done in a shady that she was happy, except for the thought that they would go away. "Do prevent that," said the godmother, "I will place them permanently in your ten-pretty little fingers." And they are fastened.

"Are you going after that sugar" said a Marquette (Mich.) matter to her boy who was on the street. "Aren't going after that sugar?" Then he took a pretty saucy and impudent tone, but just then he happened to see his father coming up the road and he said he only was going after lozenges. "Why, of course I am not—I didn't know you needed it right away."—Mining Journal

SATURDAY, - - JULY 15 1875

☞ Ex-Gov. and Senator Buckingham of Conn., died recently.

☞ Hon. Thos. H. Durand of Flint, was elected Grand Master of Masons of Michigan at the recent session of the Grand Lodge.

☞ Senator Carpenter was defeated at the late Senatorial election in Wisconsin. Hon. A. Cameron is the newly elected Senator.

☞ A telegram from Washington last Monday announced that during the past week, President Grant had received a large number of anonymous letters, threatening him with assassination.

☞ Judge Christiancy, now Senator elect, is reported as saying of leave the national ark of knowing that this is done without any eyetions of my own. So far as my future actions are concerned, I am independent of party or personal promises in entering into my functions."

☞ Hon. Horace Greeley, elected to the Senate by the Legislature of Rhode Island at least is the superior of his predecessor, Spencer. Theblatter never had anything except his money, to recommend him consequence of character. Were he lost that, he would not. For aside his fame the country substantial service, and is a man of solid if not brilliant parts.

☞ One day, recently a package was received at the Head Letter Office in Washington, which on opening was found to contain half a dozen snakes, two dead and the rest alive. One of a copperhead five feet long. The reptiles were in a tin box, addressed to Tennessee and had been stopped at New York on account of insufficient postage.

☞ The young ladies of Kirkwood have been getting signatures to the following pledge: "We will not keep company with any young man that drinks, smokes or chews tobacco." And the boys are getting even with them by getting signers to the following. "We will not keep company with any young lady that wears cotton batting." At last accounts it was reported the boys were large's ahead.

☞ The Toledo Regular trial at Brooklyn is still the sensation of the day. Frank Moulton has been put through an thorough searching and sharp cross-examination as any witness was probably ever subjected to, and has maintained his story as told in his acknowledged statement, with astonishing perseverance. All attempts to worry or upset the witness, so that he might lose his self-possession or contradict himself failed completely.

☞ The Mobile Register says that when Lawrence Barrett played Richelieu in that city the other night, the audience stood pretty with admirable delight when the grand old Cardinal returned the sword to Francois, saying: Take away the sword, sister can be saved without it." One day they take it when the grand old Cardinal" said he would "first use all means to conciliate; these failing, all means to crush" —Er.

☞ King Alfonso was scarcely seated on his glittering throne long enough to survey the field and take a glance at the situation before he started off to assume command of the Spanish Army of the North. Of course the royal boy has very little practical knowledge of military affairs, and no experience whatever. He is not fit to command a squadron, much less a corps, and if left to himself would probably run an ensign in the first pitched battle.

☞ Mrs. Watson, wife of Prof. James C. Watson, of Michigan University, is probably the only woman who went to see the transit of Venus—a long journey. First stop was an overland journey to San Francisco, then a voyage lasting 26 days to Yokohama, a four days sail to Nagasaki and sojourn of six days to Tien-tsin. Then followed a voyage up the river on small house-boats to Ting Caugo, and finally a donkey ride of 16 miles to Peking.

☞ Two years ago, the Union Pacific Railroad was hindered by the snow which drifted in upon its tracks and stayed the trains for days at a time. Since then there has been no such difficulty on that route. The improvement in the condition of things during the winter months has been caused by the elevation of the track across the more exposed districts five or six feet above the level. The snow flies past, and is easily blown from the elevated track by the winds.

From Pensokey.

PETOSKEY MICH, SATURDAY 7th 1875

EDITOR SENTINEL:—

For a fall week, the people here have suffered for the want of mail communication with the outside world, occasioned by the snow blockade. The mail train has not made its appearance here since last week Tuesday. The snow plow came in here, with much difficulty, last Saturday night. An effort to return with the plow was ineffectual. After 3 1-2 or four miles, it was found necessary to return here and wait the plow. A second effort was accordingly made on Monday p. m. the train composed of two locomotives, tender, and a caboose, left here with a full load of passengers, (who had been waiting for some days to leave their way bill, arrived at Boyne Falls, 15 miles at 4 o'clock and miles long and all night, with hard pushing, arrived at Wellton Junction, where the track is clear at 10 o'clock this morning. The mail train remained unchecked on a side track at Manchester, 40 miles from here. It remains the latter place or is on up Saturday night and endeavored to come on and after three hours trial and getting four miles, returned to Manchester and remained until to day; when being encouraged by much shoveling, and the aid of the returning locomotive, with quite a number of passengers, and a largely accumulated mail, (a schoolmaster), left this afternoon for this place, and is expected here to night. The trains hereafter, are expected to again run on time.

Last night was the coldest of the season, the mercury went down to 28° below zero, but to-day cool and sad, for the first time in several days greeted us with his cheering rays, embracing a harbinger of peace with the elements.

The mails between here and Cheboygan and Alpena Court-ouse, are making regular trips, however some severe difficulties to get through some broke have been experienced.

Last week Messrs Bump & Hetherington of Maple Hill, Montcalm County, purchased of Shaw & McMillan, a lot on Lake St., and intend erecting a building and starting an exclusive and light drinking establishment.

The gentleman who purchased the mill site on the creek, above Mr. Porter's, and is preparing to get out the timber to erect a saw mill next season.

Our Circuit Court is still adjourned sine die, but will reconvene next Tuesday. Two cases are on the calender for hearing one in Chesterry, and one Cestivari. The Chesterry case—Andrew Porter vs Thaddeus Ingram—upon a prayer for an injunction to enjoin Defendant from damming water back on Campbell's land, was heard, and decision deferred until the third Tuesday of this month, at Grand Traverse, to allow briefs to be submitted. Mr Pratt, attorney of Grand Traverse appeared for complainant and D. E. Jacobs for Defendant. The Certiorari case—Ingram vs McMillan—no evidence of proper notice being produced, went over to the next term.

Judge Ransdell and Mr. Pratt left here on the stateroom yesterday, the evening been their first opportunity to leave by train since Court. We hardly know how they passed their time while here.

Mr C. L. Hencken of Wayland Allegan county, is about to remove to this place, and establish a furniture store, and a machine shop and finishing shop, which will be the first and only one in town, and a monster acquisition. The shop is to be located on Lake St. above the railroad.

W. S. Marsh, attorney from Wayland Allegan county, has been here the greater time law, and it is hoped in time, he will be paid, if not now.

A lumber yard will be established here early in the spring by Messrs Nelson & Co., of Boyne Falls Mr. L. Bussey agent.

Messrs Bushnell and Page, land hunters are ready to locate settlers. There will be a fine opportunity for persons to locate as soon as Congress opens up the large reserve in this county, which is greatly hoped may be done speedily.

Fresh food is at present extremely low, but the village butcher—Mr. McNeil, has gone out in the country, in search of a steer—unless there will be starving again.

Rev. Yale, of Charlevoix, delivered a fine discourse Sunday evening to a full house.

Prosecuting attorney Ford, cigar manufacturer, was arrested week before last by U. S. Marshal for a violation of revenue laws. He obtained a respite for a few days but could not make his appearance on account of the snow blockade. He has on since been required to appear, and may not be.

Yours, etc. R. D.

☞ The Detroit Post says: "When, in 1861, President Lincoln issued his first call for volunteers to defend the Union, Francis Kernan, the new Democratic Senator elect from New York, was a member of the Legislature of that State. He made a bitter speech opposing the President's call, and warning Democrats not to engage in defending the Union, as he said, in violation of the Constitution. That is the kind of men the democratic party now delights to honor."

☞ Judge Cooley knows from trials but thinks that at present it is not an open question, as large investors for many years to come will have to be found to pay the interest on the vast railroad debt. He favors what a return to specie as quickly as the business of the country will permit, and thinks certain home interests such as Michigan copper and lumber productions, need protection.

☞ The United States District attorney Wm Patrick lately settled a A. Ingell of the Republican for libel and the Department of Justice at Washington sent some fifty agents all over the country to arrest and try Ingell for libel. Some of these agents came to Chesterfield, Michigan, in search of Ingell, but failed to find him. Ingell is now in

A correspondent of the London Tribune writing from Rome, says the most of persons is becoming perceptible in all the Roman Catholic dioceses of Italy. In some every one the cause of deaths in the priesthood is three times as great as in ordinary circumstances.

A young farmer who is better half but has passed on now with a honeying pair of twins, attracted crowd on Sunday. During the discourse the clergyman looked 97 really at any personal benefit, and said in a time of religious excitement: "A young man, you have no right to suppose this thing open you." The newly-fledged deal supposing the remark pointed to his peculiar form, seemed considerably startled the admonition he replied: "Yes, I have heard of."

There are thousands of farmers who, to saves dollar or two as membership fee in various horticultural society, or perhaps prefer going to a newspaper lives and lose details of details by being swindled in the purchase of seeds and plants, money lost and to their wants or the climate to which they resort. The most successful are those who have engaged in the business for a long time and who keep up with the times.—N. Y. Sun.

MAGNETIC OINTMENT

INFLAMMATORY DISEASES.

Dr. Trask was induced to study many years in a course of experiments to produce a remedy for the cure of inflammatory diseases, and after many years of study and experiment he has succeeded in producing to the world as the result of his labors, a remedy of vegetable origin, possessing the power of what in reducing inflammation, and in the cure of all diseases of this description coming to the knowledge of mankind. Before using this Ointment, the patient will find it necessary to take a dose of Dr. Trask's Magnetic Pills.

Certain it is that the remarkable healing power of this Ointment was discovered by the physicians observing of the sick, and after many years of study and experiment it was brought to its present state of perfection.

It never fails, while there remains sufficient vitality to sustain life, and twenty-four hours after the application of this Ointment, the most excruciating pain will cease, and in a short time a perfect cure will be effected.

Such is the power of this combination, that, for wounds in every portion of the body, Piles, Fever Sores and Cancers, even when of long standing, as many of the worst cases of the latter will testify, it will never fail to effect a cure.

Numerous instances are on record where this remedy has restored to health persons who had been completely broken down by the most powerful medicines used in the hands of skillful physicians, who subsequently heard of its existence, and were restored to health by its influence.

No patient ever need die with the disease known as the Bronchial Affection of the Throat, Lungs or Kidneys, while this remedy can be procured.

For Inflammatory Rheumatism, Erysipelas, or any inflammatory disease, it is unrivaled, and in Scrofula or Evil Sore Throat it is unequaled.

In short, in every case out of 5 hundred, it will be found to be the most powerful combination ever discovered for the cure of inflammatory diseases.

For Sore or Inflamed Eyes it is unequaled.

Attention of the Solon, Horsemen, Stock Raisers, Farmers, Planters, Mechanics, Miners, Steamboatmen, Lumbermen, Travelers, and all others, is called to the fact that this Ointment is warranted to cure Scratches, Sore Heels, Sore Shoulders, Sore Backs, Sore Throat, Sore Eyes, Sore Nipples, Caked Breasts, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Sore Lips, Scalds, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Sprains, Swellings, Rheumatism, Pains in the Back, Chest or Limbs, Contracted Cords, Stiff Joints, Lameness, Soreness, Stiffness, Neuralgia, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Ringworm, Fever Sores, Piles, Wounds, Ulcers, Mortification, Sore Nipples, Caked Breasts, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Sore Lips, Scalds, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Sprains, Swellings, Rheumatism, Pains in the Back, Chest or Limbs, Contracted Cords, Stiff Joints, Lameness, Soreness, Stiffness, Neuralgia, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Ringworm, Fever Sores, Piles, Wounds, Ulcers, Mortification, Sore Throat, Sore Eyes, Sore Nipples, Caked Breasts, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Sore Lips, Scalds, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Sprains, Swellings, Rheumatism, Pains in the Back, Chest or Limbs, Contracted Cords, Stiff Joints, Lameness, Soreness, Stiffness, Neuralgia, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Ringworm, Fever Sores, Piles, Wounds, Ulcers, Mortification.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, FEB 20, 1875

☞ Mr. Tennyson is to be made a Baronet if he will, and Carlyle has had the Grand Cross of the order of the Bath offered him.

☞ A cable dispatch announces that Prince Bismarck will celebrate public life when he has passed his 61st birthday which will occur in April next. He is suffering from a nervous affection.

☞ An Oregon widow is to be endowed by her minister admirer getting word that she knew it was wrong for matrons and wives to flirt, but he had the Bible for her authority. Proof—Widow's mite." She was flirting wildly at the last accounts.

☞ The Secretary of War has forwarded to the House reports of the Quartermaster General and Commissary General of subsistence giving in detail the cost of those departments in the Modoc war, amounting in the aggregate to $411,000.

☞ The New York Herald reporter describes Tilton as looking like a female sphinx, and apparently asks: "Did eyes lacked grip. They were always far off. The face had a kind of pinched pain in it; the coat of a beard gave it the appearance of ammunition lost or gotten-over. He was, however a stern-minded character as all know who have approached him."

☞ Tea and coffee tipplers may congratulate themselves on the fact that the attempt to tax their favorite beverage is likely to fail. A Washington dispatch states that the Ways and Means Committee are resolved to restoring the duty on these articles, and are turning their attention to whiskey and tobacco as a means of increasing the revenue.

☞ The following remedy sample as it is, is said to have saved thousands from death by lockjaw: Smoke the wound or injury with the smoke of wool. Tommy knows with the smoke of wool will take the pain out of the worst wound and repeated once or twice, will ally the worst case of inflamation arising from a wound.

☞ Prosperity has its drawbacks. The neck-lace and earrings sent by the Khedive to Mrs. Fitch, General Sherman's daughter, are retained in the custom house until the ceremonies they shall be paid or until Congress shall pass an act admitting the jewels duty free. Just at present Congress doesn't seem likely to pass such an act—at any other.

☞ The following remedy sample as it is, is said to have saved thousands from death by lockjaw: Smoke the wound or injury with the smoke of wool. Twenty minutes in the smoke of wool will take the pain out of the worst wound and repeated once or twice, will ally the worst case of inflamation arising from a wound.

☞ Prosperity has its drawbacks. The neck-lace and earrings sent by the Khedive to Mrs. Fitch, General Sherman's daughter, are retained in the custom house until the ceremonies they shall be paid or until Congress shall pass an act admitting the jewels duty free. Just at present Congress doesn't seem likely to pass such an act—at any other.

☞ A young man who somewhat returned to Sioux City from the Black Hills reports that the party to which he was attached found gold everywhere they prospected. He brought home several rich specimen of quartz, which good judges say will assay $1,000 to the ton. There are now about 300 white miners in the hills digging on the previous metal.

☞ Frank M. Cockrell, the successor of Sidney in the Senate from Missouri, was a Major General in the rebel army, having commanded the Missouri division in Tennessee, and was his fourth in Hood's brigade campaign against Nashville and "Old Pap" Thomas. Cockrell is a man of stalwart frame, standing six feet in his stockings, and possesses a commanding appearance. He is 47 years of age. His command is wholly the work of the Missouri and Confederate elements.

☞ Here is a numerical curiosity which we find in an exchange. Try it on any number you please and you will find it will come out right every time. Any number or figure you may wish to multiply by 5 will give the same result: if divided by 2—a much quicker operation; but you must remember to annex an 0 to the answer when there is no remainder, and when there is a remainder, when ever it may be, annex a 5 to the answer. Multiply 664 by 5 and the answer will be 2 920; divide the same by 2, and you have 332 and as there is no remainder, you add an 0. Now take 379, multiply by 5, the answer is 1795; and dividing this by 2 leaves it 179 and a remainder, you therefore place a 5 at the end of the line, and the result is again 1 795

☞ The Indian Commercial Advertiser editorially remarks: The report of General Williams and Rousseau, which has been transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of War, places the estimated cost of deepening to twenty feet the navigable channel now between Lakes Huron and Erie at $4,000,000. The improvement of this passage is one of the most important to commerce that will be [illegible] to the attention of the present Congress. More commerce passes through it annually than through any other channel in the country. But in consequence of a few short years of low water, navigators dissatisfied with Detroit River, numerous disasters occur every season. The demand for cheap transportation has induced the building of a larger class of vessels than formerly, and accidents are likely to increase. Congress cannot only better use of a few millions dollars to better advantage than by lessening the obstructions in this channel.

☞ England's empire in the Southern Hemisphere covers 3,000,000 square miles, the size of the United States, less Alaska. The white population of Australasia, a dozen years ago, was reckoned at 1,500,000; about 2,000,000. Now it is but a little more than 2,000,000. Victoria has grown from 77,000 to 732,000 in these twenty-five years—a ten-fold growth. Queensland has grown from 30,000 to 125,000. Tasmania which had a population too small to be counted in 1850, has 100,000 now. New Zealand has grown ten-fold in the quarter of a century from 26,000 to 266,000. The population of Australasia is largely English and strongly protestant. Education has been truly encouraged. Several of its colonies are no longer penal and the odious number of criminals on the islands is very small.

☞ The missing book for which the senate of $1,000 has been offered has been found in the possession of a young lawyer in Louisville, Kentucky. It turns out to be a "Memoir of George IV," with a minute history of the most scandalous pass ages of his life and of the corruption of his political administration. The chief value of the book probably lies in its possession of letters and documents showing the marriage of the fourth George with Mrs. Fitzherbert, and the birth of a child to the latter which is fruitful wedlock. There has always been some the death of George IV. A great deal of gossip upon these points and four reproductions of a printed in an inadequate to the royal family of Great Britain, to be released from which by the destruction of this volume, it can well afford to pay $5,000. Those receiving it in the offer of the reward is seen that it is made by the royal family or on its behalf; but there can be no doubt that the object of the offer is to secure the destruction of the book. Some three years ago a copy of the same work came into the possession of the publishers of the London standard, who contemplated for a time its republication in a serial form [illegible]

☞ The Indianapolis Sentinel publishes a letter from Governor Hendricks, dated Washington, Dec. 31, 1874, declining to be a candidate for the United States Senate. He says: "I am not willing to be a candidate for the United States Senate. I am not willing to be a candidate for the United States Senate. I am not willing to be a candidate for the United States Senate.

Sheridan in the Bottinda.

Gen. Phil. Sheridan appeared in the rotunda at the St. Charles during the hour appointed for the opening of the Western room, filling the college of the receiving the General made two appearances there. He was in citizen's dress, and wore a soft hat. As he ascended the entrance room led into conversation with him and not be was kept constantly surrounded, and was unable to leave for an account of the part he had taken in the affairs of Louisiana. During the evening General Sheridan is expected at the rotunda, and the command soon as are of considerable importance to the meeting. This time he was closely followed by a great throng of citizens anxious to receive, and by evening there was scarcely the same classroom that is crowded to its capacity on ordinary occasions. We congratulate the genial gentleman, however, upon more marked than hitherto, and we be walked entirely rid of those vicious habits the presence of our general has exhibited, which unfortunately stood very in a bad light. Finally we congratulate the people of Louisiana, and especially of New Orleans.—New Orleans Times.

Raising Hopes to Crush Them.

How good are looking her cheeks had years of age, and how bright her eyes! Let he drops into the carriage and commences conversation with the "Shocking terrible, was it?"

"What! What's that?" exclaims the other springing up.

"Oh, nothing, only I had chosen my words to use the less carelessly."

"What—which—would it cause?"

"And she was a perfect stranger," adds the boy.

"Come on—half a dollar—plus mourner—got a hack!" calls the coachman, getting into his coach.

"I was speaking of Marie Antoinette, Queen of France in 1793—no one in particular" doesn't regret the loss. If you want to read the particulars of our case I'll look over the book.

The coachman threw down and contemplates the opening of the track of coal-road in the morning from the cars, before the work of the day, gone around one of lines of the tickling time into consciousness.

A colored preacher, in commending to his people the offices of utmost, prayer, delivered himself in this manner: "I will you moderate the prayer in what you de debil de darkjaw."

A Nevada woman recently knocked down some burglars, one after another. Her husband wanted her from the room the stairs, and fell so from fear of thinking that he couldn't cool of mine he had picked his three year old boy out of bed and whaled him soundly for not getting space helping his mother.

"Johnny," said a grief father to his son whom he one day found sharing the dinner from his supper, "don't throw your starving were out where there are new famished boys for if you do it they will surely get perished."

Within a short distance of Brandon no adds a couple who have been married twenty five years and win the parents of twenty-three children. The age of the father of this interesting know to myself on and of the mother thirty-eight.

A Scotchman went to a lawyer one for advice, and entered the consultation of the case. "I have got what I may call a pretty decided previous as they generally," asked the lawyer. "Oh, sir," replied he, "I can so the plain truth. Yes can put the fact in as it yourself."

A Mrs. Rushton living in Pine County, Pa., had a fierce encounter with a wild deer which ran mad but from its pursuers near her home the other day. She bravely seized the animal by the horns and held on till its furious struggles broke the antlers off, and it fled, leaving them in her hands.

Recently the local paper at Green Valley said: "The prettiest girl in Green Valley wasn't very beautiful-looking enough when promenading." For a week after all the Green Valley girls started out of their way to promenade, and wondered why they didn't tell them that they were crooked.

A special from Topeka, Kan., states that Joseph H. Nesbit, now 'debtor-in-possession' who murdered Imogene Sloane on Christmas evening a year ago, was hanged in the jail yard by a rush on the night of December 30, at Wilmore, Kan. His bust on the rope with which he was to have caught under his chin and did not choke him; so he hung for a long time in that position, talking to the mob, inquiring them to release him, but received only jeers in return. He did on the for over two hours, and finally froze to death.

A white marble monument for three graves over the grave of William H. Seward, in the Fort Hill Cemetery, at Auburn. It is described as an unusually handsome piece of work, but one only on the taste, raised at the head of these feet higher than the others of the same in the form of a cemetery urn, twined with ivy, and surmounted with a crown wreathed with the leaves of the oak and laurel. The base of the table bears the words: "William H. Seward. Born May 16, 1800. Died Oct. 10, 1872." And the base of the urn bears the inscription which, in his life time, he said only regret he was ambitious to deserve: "He was Faithful."

Col. Ethan Allen, of Revolutionary fame, though rough, genial, was very courteous by nature, and never, every possible effort to improve his manners by observing those of other people. When he was a prisoner of war in New York city on parole, he was invited into the best mansions of the city, and on one occasion attended large and fashionable dinner party. Often were passed around during the feast and following the general example, Col. Allen took one. He was unable to overcome the disgust it caused his palate, and taken the half-chewed fruit in his hand, said, with a low tone in his hostess, "Madame, with your permission, I'll put that—thing on the table.

Tilton's Case As Presented By Himself.

The New York Times says: If Tilton's rebuts of Mr. Beecher's letter be true, it is something which almost awaits the most extreme speculation. We do not know whether to ask the question of human life and human hearts are heighthened as only as well growing in the depths of ignorance and false theories, and whether the most vitally important of all reforms pertaining to life and health, body and soul of humanity, is not the most inexcusably and criminally neglected. — Grand Rapids Eagle.

Winsor Castle.

A writer on Windsor Castle, in the Chicago Inter-Ocean, says:

"The castle is situated on the summit of a hill, one hundred feet above the Thames, and forms a conspicuous feature in the landscape for many miles around. It is an immense structure, covering seven acres of ground, and is said to be the largest castle ever built in Europe. Its extensive structure, magnificent state apartments, seven-score bed-rooms, sixty-five dining-rooms, and forty-eight splendid private rooms, including kitchen, pantry, confectionery, and store-rooms; it is said to be more than there are apartments for the accommodation of two hundred and forty servants. Having been commenced by William the Conqueror in 1066, with additions built by every succeeding monarch down to the time of George IV., there is the woman Woodhull, except his water, when asked if he took a carriage on a certain day he answers, "No; the carriage took me"—a gem worthy of Hippitheus. He pushes about Russel, the Connegist, says, "He went to the scaffold with his Bible in his hand, kissing it, and his soul went up to God.' And so he goes on hour after hour enjoying himself hugely, bearing and his ratlish rant by eminent lawyers, and having what he calls an 'intellectual treat.' Now the cross-examination is not very 'verose,' everybody must admit, it is lucky for Tilton that he is not in Bartlett Buddy.

The following anecdote, illustrative of absolutely the last moments of the Emperor Paul of Russia. One day when the Czar was driving in his carriage he passed a man playing a soldier, and the following conversation ensued:

"I am only a private, sire."

"The emperor never makes a mistake, captain."

"I obey, sire."

"Very well, major sit down beside me, Spaniard, are you not?"

"Sire, it I direct—"

"What is it, colonel?"

Unluckily for the imperial favorite, his ire in that at a subsequent interview with the emperor a few days later he descended step by step during the short space of half an hour from the grade of major general to that of common soldier.

Successful Farmers.

Does farming pay? Does anything but farming? Is not the source of all individual wealth—the foundation of our nation's prosperity? It is true farmers do not, as a general thing, get huge sums—but they of them are millionaires, wealth soon comes from these like water in a leaky boat. They generally give an equivalent for what they get and learn the real value of money by the amount of labor they give in acquiring it. Sometimes the tide of events turns in their favor. Like men in other occupations we hear most about the rich and successful. Real success and we are pushed are not to be measured by the amount of wealth that one acquires and by personal character. The man who has made land what were worth ten dollars per acre when he bought it, and left it worth a hundred dollars per acre, has done more for his country than the man who has made a million of dollars if they were acquired by taking mean advantage of the necessities and improvidence of others. He has added to the wealth of the country, and left it richer than he found it. Men that have farmers who have reared large families of children, and have given them a good start in life, and left a competency for themselves, have not failed in their mission. Many farmers become rich by economy, by close attention to business, by never running in debt, by never speculating, by never indulging in extravagance, by never neglecting their business, by never being absent from home, by never spending money for whisky, by never gambling, by never attending horse races, by never attending circuses, by never attending political conventions, by never attending political meetings, by never attending political caucuses, by never attending political primaries

☞ The President has issued a proclamation convening the Forty-fourth Congress March 4th.

☞ The Chicago Times says there has been a secret caucus at Washington that Speaker Chandler will succeed Mr. Jewell as Postmaster General.

☞ John Gough, whose travels in several years $70,000 of his money, but a good many lost were doubtless like Kable. They the season of a year or two.

☞ General Sherman estimates to several figures the number of searches and seizures made by Lieutenant Grant on account of applications since 1869, and the total footing up 4,256.

☞ It seems as how has just been married by the King who is going to marry the absolute exercise and disposition as against lawlessness of the country, they can and of prosperity acquired subsequent to marriage.

☞ The proposed Reciprocity Treaty between the United States and Hawaiian Island The Senate had it under consideration in executive session on the 3d inst., when it was found to have been, if any, friends and it was rejected without discussion. So that Pres Fradenrich has signed.

☞ Senator Carpenter will retire from Congress at the close of this session, and Washington correspondents say it is probable that Senator Ferry, of this State, will be chosen President pro tem of the Senate. Mr. Ferry has entered very high standing as a parliamentarian.

☞ A Washington despatch of the 17th says: This afternoon an unknown gentleman, forty years of age, jumped from the second outside gallery of the dome of the Capitol, and struck head first on the roof of the main building, 150 feet below. The coroner will endeavor to ascertain his name.

☞ In Paris the most popular of Alfonso to the Spanish throne has encouraged those who wish it, to declare boldly and openly, that the Prince Imperial will take the crown of his two brother nations whose republic, and then France, under another Bonaparte, will resume her march to prosperity and power.

☞ The chamoson dead head has been discovered in a legislature who havince a free pass from a railroad company, and not having occasion to use it, actually rode at the Superintendent's office and asked if they were willing to give him the value of the ticket in money.

☞ Postmaster Jewell is maturing the plan of a new newspaper wrapper and card combined at two cents postage, by which you can send a paper and write a few words on the wrapper without subjecting yourself to the pains and penalties which will upon the clandestine scribbler of the paper of the day.

☞ Lieut. Conder, of the British exploring party in Palestine, thinks he has found specimens of the lost coins of the Bible in the hills of the country of Judea. He has discovered many extensive mines, and in tributaries that their industry will, the cities of Bible history now known as mere caves established.

☞ The Grand Lodge of Rodes, a dependant of the Empirian Discipline, whose aim is to marry it to and the youngest daughter of Queen Victoria, was once recently but the family property has been made over to the sons as it now only affords an annual income of $12,500, or $2,500 for every sovereign any of the poor.

☞ A Kentucky paper writes the Louisville operation in the eight-months manager: "Phil Sheridan is the only man in Christendom whom we would be delight on to-day. Not that we have any special use for his grease light, but only for him-your out of curiosity to see how he would enjoy the thing as a lustrous of war, inevitable among him with hungry jaws as his final cross.

☞ Mr. Beecher, the old priest, is in excellent health, and performs without cessary, the tremendous impound duty upon him by his system of labor. Last week for instance he preached on Sunday, lectured once, attended and spoke at Six Thursday night meeting, officiated at four funerals, married five couples, edited the Christian Union, penned 215 letters, met with his counsel, once at consultation, reviewed the dimensions of a tombstone, and was all prepared for Sunday labor of the ensuing week.

☞ Private letters received at Nassau from Europe say there was no very little emigration there for the next five years, and the following items are given as obtained at the station of want and the premium reaching them from this country, that they are generally abused by ministers and friends here and to leave home, that the United States no longer offers inducements to emigrate.

☞ Six months has been said about the House Tariff that it has been a great bore in both sense of the word. It is a point rather to know that a man has at last passed through it. The record is 25 days, for long, a trifle less than five days. This point it took to the Mr. Cox of here on the score of length. Work on it began in 1873, but little duty has been $12,000,000. The cost of its clerks completion will be $1,000,000 more.

☞ The producing capacity of the United States emerged envelope stocks at Hartford was lately tested for Timothy, at the request of the authorities of the Post office Department. From seven A. M. to 6 P. M. there were finished 894,000 stamped envelopes and 117,000 stamped newspaper wrappers—an aggregate to see control the day's demand of the department, and proving the ability of the contractors to keep up with the orders at all times. The demand has recently been considerably reduced, and 11,000 envelopes have accumulated.

☞ The poor Indians have suffered more than cardinal during the unusual and weather. The Bozeman Democrat of last week says: "Mr. Bozeman, of the Diamond R team, got in from New York Creek Redwood 150,000 to say for farm animals is quite scarce and all appear by the cold snap that city one week ago and, and than a sickly one of the whole able freezing of cattle to death this season, and on The first round near Horseshoe. The Democrat calls upon Mr. Bozeman to investigate these cases and punish the inhuman cowboys responsible for this unnecessary suffering.

☞ Mr. Bayard's Word has been in favor of a "grand jubilee." He recently made a grand reception to sundry of his Congressional colleagues, and by the mistake of his secretary the name of one of the colored Representatives was placed at the bottom of a certain list of guests. The mistake was discovered by the time the guests arrived, and Mr. Wood was somewhat embarrassed in a why or two of necessary a word of regret from his Arkansas Congressman, and, unbeing the circumstance, left address the invited lower accepted, for the reason that the fact, if it became known, caused quite a breeze with the people of his district.

☞ Andrew Johnson has said himself to the United States Senate in 1857. Of them who sat then with him, Douglas, Davis, Benjamin, Slidell, Mason and Hunter are now under the distinction of a foreign office or traitors. Hughes and Fitzpatrick, Saulsbury and Sumner and Seward, Brodrick and Houston, and Bell are dead. Hamlin, Wilson, and Cameron will quiet him in the Senate as a foreigner. Wade, Trumbull, Hawley, Foster, Doolittle and Hendricks are living their old living, have retired or retire life. With such social reflections to look back upon and be passed by, surely Andrew Johnson, the Senator, ought to deserve well of his country in his latter days.

The Direct Election of President.

The principal objection urged against abandoning a constitutional amendment changing from the system of Presidential and Vice President to the direct vote of the people, each voter casting his ballot directly for the candidates of his choice, is that such an amendment would be opposed by the small States, who would, even if adopted, not be averaging. This may hold in reason of their disproportionate representation in the electoral college. The States of Delaware, for instance, with only one Representative in the House of Representatives, receives electoral votes, two of them "constitutional" and it is argued that she would not willingly surrender a system which gives her three times the representation in the choice of President to which she would be entitled on the basis of population. It is claimed that the same objection would obtain in Nevada, with more or less force, all the small States. Upon the election of President by direct popular vote, Senator Sherman proposed annulment, therefore, while it would increase the power of the densest and most populous States, it would not affect the equal representation. It provides practically that the people shall vote directly for President in districts, the county for President in districts, the county having the largest population in the State receiving the two Senators, and the counties having the highest number of votes in each district votes to the electoral district Pennsylvania.

As we have already said, this proposition, removes some of the dangers incident to the present system. But it is not free from objections. The election of President by the direct vote of the whole people of the nation, just as we elect a governor by the direct vote of the whole people of the State is vastly preferable; and the objection to a constitutional amendment embodying it only, that it would be opposed by the small States, we think, been greatly exaggerated. The "sectional representation" is about 20 per cent of the whole electoral vote. It reduces the vote of Delaware, Nebraska Nevada, and Oregon, three to two; Rhode Island and Providence and to two; Connecticut, Maine, Kansas, New Hampshire, Vermont, and West Virginia, 3d per cent to four of Connecticut, Delaware, and Arkansas and 40 per cent to that of Maine. Thus are the small States which it is generally supposed would oppose the amendment, but, in the first place, is some number of them are not properly small States, and second they are only nine States—California, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oregon, Rhode Island, West Virginia and Florida will sometimes grow to be numbered among the large States in population as well as territory. Besides, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware and Nevada will have seven States could no power in the Electoral College, and are indirectly opposed on by the rest of the States upon the plan of district.

There is another consideration in favor of the direct popular vote system which would obtain where some of these small States—Rhode Island, Vermont, Delaware, might wield a greater influence than the population would under the electoral vote system. Suppose, for instance, that New York and Vermont were thrown by Senator. But had this election been by direct popular vote the majority of 54,122 which Vermont gave for Grant would have the majority of 53,000 by which New York was carried in 1872. In this instance the 5th State would have by much more influence in deciding the result of the election, under the direct vote, than it could possibly have under the electoral system.

The advantages of the direct popular election of President in affording to the people a direct and fifteen opportunity to express their choice is clear to the reasoning mind. Under the present system the people are practically responsible for the election of President, and the greatest calamity the people could experience is to have elected a President against their will. Such a disaster is the result of the present system. Many of the people who voted for Tilden and Hendricks honestly supposed in so doing they were voting for Hayes and Wheeler, and if such mistakes as this could be made in the case of the most prominent candidates for President and Vice President, how much more liable are the people to be misled in voting for candidates for Congress, Governor, Legislature, &c., whose names are not so familiar to the people. Let each State be entitled to its electoral vote, and let the people vote directly for President, and there will be no room for fraud.

[illegible] Acres,

How Mr. Lincoln Forgave Him.

An editor of a weekly paper, published in a little village in Missouri, called at the White House, and was admitted to Mr. Lincoln's presence. He told Mr. Lincoln that he was the man who first suggested his name for the Presidency, and pulling an old newspaper from his pocket, read a part of his paper, exhibited an item on the subject. "Do you really think," said Mr. Lincoln, "that announcement was the occasion of my nomination?" "Certainly," said the editor, "the suggestion was so opportune that it was at once taken up by other papers, and the result was your nomination and election.

"Ah well," said Mr. Lincoln with a sigh, and assuming a rather gloomy countenance, "I am glad to the you and to know this, but you will have to excuse me; I am just now going to the War Department to see Mr. Stanton." "Well," said the editor, "I will walk over with you. The President, with that apt good nature so characteristic to him, took up his hat and said, "Come along."

When they reached the door of the Secretary's office, Mr. Lincoln turned to his companion and said, "I shall have to see Mr. Stanton alone, and you can come up and take him by the hand he once found, Mr. Editor; I hope you will feel perfectly easy about having forgiven me, and that I'm not mad about it! I forgive you."

Stanley's Success.

Mr. Stanley's first letters from Africa show that he has already, at the outset of his journey, accomplished a great work. His moral and material ingenuity, which was hardly to be exaggerated, in thirty days he explored the Rudgi River, which Dr Kirk reported to be not navigable Mr Stanley, as the result of his spirited and successful voyage in the Nanwouth yaul, the Wave, shows us that the river carries a good navigable channel by which vessels and that he believes that by nearly half that distance the largest Mississippi steamboats could run without any difficulty. Forty miles from the sea it is broad and has a general depth of at least nine feet. Not only has Mr. Stanley, indeed, known the existence of this important gateway to Eastern Africa, he has set upon the mouth of the navigable waters, opening the preliminary trip how one steams the 5,000 waves anchored, driven to Dar-es-Salaam and the North may resumed, and thriving commerce opened up with an industrious people inhabiting a fertile region. The infamous traffic on the mercy of her majesty's squadron, as soon as its offices get other business and hosts by the river, to guard Kon and Dar Salaam. Mr. Stanley, by his not to trivial work, puts the British Consul to shame, and justifies the belief that he is worthy to continue the work he has begun in Livingstone.

Another Failure.

It is curious to see the present Rivers and Harbors Appropriation Bill published in extenso, and the encumbrance of any opposing it, and he now thinks efforts to secure appropriation for the improvement of the navigation of Pine River have failed. It is of course to be hoped so as to do away the fact, but every citizen of Charlevoix must feel disappointed at the failure of our Representative to secure the appropriation. We have faith in the honesty of our Representative and Senators; and we are convinced that Mr. Hubbell did all in his power for us. But we are so finely constituted that a man after Harry had used the same endeavors in our behalf that he has in behalf of others, no man deserving the name, he would have been equally successful.

And now let us see that of Senator Ferry. We wish to speak because of the illness of Senator Ferry, for some time, he is said to be unable to attend to business. He has worked hard for it, this country owes him much, for the labors he has performed through his influence. He has never stopped, and has been one of the ablest, because he thoroughly knew what really in need of it. We now fail to believe that if a change comes he would be in possession of this subject, it might result favorably to us.

But, notwithstanding our reverses, our forces are still in the front! We must fight the battle over again, and shall commence the campaign in early spring! The time is near when once gained, neither the greenback leader by being dearly won! What is worth asking for is worth fighting for! Stand by your guns!

We don't see the weather prophets predict either a warm summer. There has been enough temperature of any year to show our snow as that of any other year, except the excessive heat next summer. Well, if it's a hot summer, it will create a demand for some of the ice which this winter is manufacturing.

The log-legislature of West Virginia has passed a bill for the temporary relief of the capital from that country. Wheeling. The city in which the capital is now located is in what is called the "Pan Handle," a narrow strip of land running up in the northwest corner of the State between Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The ice-harvest are that Senator Ferry, of this State, will be elected President pro tem of the United States Senate to succeed Senator Chandler, whose term expires March 4th. No other or more worthy man can be found in that body for that position, and his promotion will be especially gratifying to the residents of Detroit in Michigan.

Lynching of a Boy Mormon Murderer.

Meadow Canon, in the district court of Dr. Monroe County, Howard was yesterday found guilty of the State Prisoner of for the Murder of John Atkinson in this city, 24 hour last. This morning at three o'clock some Jean Vigilantes, with long arms the latter secured the jail, over powered and bound the sheriff and his four, and from his arms and jailer overpowered the sheriff and his deputy sheriff and the special guard of four men who had been detained to the time to guard the prisoner. Dispensing the doors, they found their way to the murderer's cell, where his victim had met his doom, the latter now never under government accompanies to the murder. Dragging him by the cords, and down behind over the street and his ankles, they dragged him, half naked, to the mouth of the Court-House, and, hung at lamp-post, in front of the garden, where many did not escape from mutilation. They stood over the corpse for some time, when this effigy of the half was carried away dark and there were seen out of sight, when the policemen, roused the body [illegible] was cut down.

It is supposed that the lynching was done by masked men, and [illegible] the county, aided by unknown parties in this city, but nothing definite has been decided yet.

The excitement which has led to [illegible] must have been great, for [illegible] several [illegible] have been assembled here [illegible] to-day.

The trial of Howard was [illegible] and exciting, and the jury, being out for nearly four days, found a compromise in a verdict of murder in the second degree. It was feared Howard would be lynched last Friday night, for jury on the having agreed and it being generally thought they would agree in disagree. But precautions were taken to prevent it then and on Saturday morning the verdict rendered, on Monday afternoon he was sentenced, and Judge Maxwell put upon him the extreme [illegible] of the law—imprisonment for life. Rarely—if ever—has a verdict given satisfied and the feeling felt on the city to [illegible] and honest. But the excitement during the reading of the sentence, laughing in the face of the Judge and receiving the doom with [illegible], and attempt to smuggle a revolver into the Court-room for the prisoner caused alarm and of meeting. The Judge, in his pronouncing the last sentence, has hinted that that he would escape from the [illegible] house and remarked that he had no doubt [illegible] and would always have open objects of the past. He [illegible] to speak of his position, and the occasion with which he spoke the date of events which form the history of fifty years and is really remarkable.

The Egyptian Ruler's Gift to Gen. Sherman's Daughter.

Two weddings of the Khedive of Egypt to the daughter of Gen. Sherman received New York [illegible] lately, and was on private exhibition in the Khedive's parlor at the Custom House during the day. The present is a parure, of diamonds, rubies and emeralds, and is declared magnificent and valuable in this country. The gift consists of four strings of diamonds and, of which is a heirloom. Not one of them is worth less than $1,000. The diamonds studded with diamonds, and they are not so closely together as to hide the gold. There is not many of them that the Empress Eugenie [illegible] in the crown. He cannot [illegible] which is only about half of the whole number. The strands are joined by ten immense stones, each of worth is estimated by smaller gems. The centre front is the size of a [illegible] egg, and is worth $10,000. Pendant from the front is a festoon of brilliants with five big pear-shaped stones of [illegible] water, [illegible] hanging from it. The ornaments for the ears are single stones nearly as large as the rest. The entire set is appraised at about $50,000. The case for the jewels is plain morocco, without inscription. As soon as the Secretary of the Treasury orders a free permit for them made the special act of congress they are to be delivered to the Turkish Minister, and by him presented to the fair bride on behalf of the Egyptian potentate.

Gen. Tracy, of the counsel for Mr. Beecher in the great Brooklyn trial, was at one time an adviser of Moulton and Tilton. Words spoken by him in the early days of the scandal are extensive to prejudice him now. For instance, Mr. Woodruff, Mr. Moulton's partner, testified the other day that Tracy several months ago, that the case was one to justify Moulton in lying. And it appears that Moulton began to have been a very accommodating fellow in fully respect. He lied right and left whenever he was asked, and sometimes spontaneously from [illegible].

The Cincinnati Commercial [illegible] Sam B. Armstrong, Hons. Platt, Leslie Combs and Silas Jones as the oldest [illegible] of this country.

Over 160,000 Mennonites have already [illegible] for migration [illegible].

For Judge of the 13th Judicial Circuit,
REUBEN HATCH, Jr.

Two women fish were hatched for the government, at the State Hatchery, in this State, last year.

The New York Herald recently published a report of the 6 P.M. sermon of the Beecher-Tilton scandal. It occurred in the year 1860.

The public debt statement for February shows a gratifying reduction of over six millions of dollars. This is more than expected, in view of the recent hard times and the falling off in the revenue receipts.

A correspondent of the Western Journal tries to prove that, the older the mother who gives birth to a child, the more likely that child is to become distinguished in the world.

The Governor of the Cincinnati town series are paid a salary of $10,000 per annum. Michigan pays her circuit judges $1,200. Brewing ale pays nearly seven times as much as ploughing justice.

The Republican Convention in the Fourteenth Circuit re-nominated Judge Goldsmith on Tuesday, the delegates from two counties refusing to participate in the action or to regard themselves as bound by the result.

Hon. Isaac Marston, ex-Attorney General, lately received the Republican nomination for Justice of the Supreme Court to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Christiancy. Judge Graves was renominated by acclamation for full term.

All about the section of the country the loss of potatoes by freezing has been very great. We hear of Tuscola county farmers who have lost hundreds of bushels and of one who finds his whole crop of 1,000 bushels frozen solid.—Bay City Chronicle.

The expedition to survey a route for a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama reports an encouraging progress. Two parties are in the field—one under Lieut. Lull, locating the feeder, and the other under Lieut. Craley, at work on what is hoped will prove the main line. All the indications are favorable.

A subscriber to the Carlisle Conservative died a few years ago leaving four years subscription to the paper unpaid. The editor appeared at the grave when the lid was being lowered down for the last time, and put in the coffin a fan, a linen coat, and a thermometer about, as only used in warm climates.

The North Carolina House of Representatives, by a vote of 46 to 51, has expelled D. Wm. Thomas, member from Warren County, for expressing his unbelief in the existence of a God. The Legislature of North Carolina is overwhelmingly Democratic, as well as pointedly orthodox.

Hon. Jay A. Hubbell has presented a memorial to Congress remonstrating against the restoration of duties on tea and coffee, or any revival of internal revenue taxes, and praying for the repeal of the 10 per cent. reduction of duties on certain goods made by the act of 1872. Senator Chandler has presented a similar memorial in the Senate.

A novel suicide is reported from Paris. An elderly man living in the Louvre quarter, having stripped himself before his room and arranged his affairs, turned on the gas, shut the door and went out for an hour's walk. He then returned, got a lighted candle from the house porter and proceeded to his room, which he opened cautiously. An explosion of course followed, and the man was burned almost to a cinder.

The bill for the equalization of counties failed to become a law through the resident's refusal to approve it. The ure was not without a strong basis of but in view of the present business ion, and of the certain addition of things to our national debt and interest burden which it involv e sentiment will sustain Gov. be withholding of his signature.

The Ohio Legislature has abolished all the offices of Notaries Public, except in cities having over 100,000 inhabitants. Governor Hayes has signed the bill.

There are so many applications for divorce in Rutherford county that Mr. Paddock, of the Legislature, has introduced a bill divorcing all the married people within the county, and passing them around to go into partners as they were before marriage. His idea is that all who desire to stay married will at once get married again, and then will take less time than it would to re-marry the divorced ones.

The Detroit Post calling to the suicide committed by leaping from the dome of the Capitol at Washington says: "Another specimen of the Washington suicide by jumping from the dome of the Capitol in the near future may find Texas well sheltered all over the building." This proves that the gone fellow died before his time. He should have waited till the meeting of the next Congress, when Senator will be duly qualified all over the building."

Speaking of the new tax bill as finally passed by the House of Representatives in Washington, the New York Times says: "The result may be regarded as a triumph for labor—and common sense." It confines the increase of the tax on whiskey to the future product of the distilleries, fixing it at ninety cents per gallon, and it adds one dollar per thousand to the tax on cigars. A proposition was made and rejected to revive the income tax with a graduated scale. It is now thought that the bill will pass the Senate without material change.

The Manistee Times & Star says and says that "the great secret of L. & B. Richards as it is, East and every 250 miles of new railroad pending in the Supreme Court which involved nearly half of this county was held on the 26th, decided in favor of our railroads. This practically settles the title to this property and enables our citizens to not only build railroads, but to go ahead with the improvements which are now being left unfinished."

They have a good joke on a Professor of Verification" down East, who being put in a room at a hotel with no other guest, asked the latter to raise the window, at night, as the air was close. "I can't raise it," said the guest, after working at the window a while. "Then knock a pane of glass out," said the professor, which was done. After a while the professor got up and knocked out another pane, then he was able to sleep well in the morning he discovered that they had broken into a bank safe.

The party who so happened to have aided the assassin of Abraham Lincoln by assisting him to his horse at the side entrance of Ford's Theater in Washington, has lately died near Baltimore Md. His name is Rudolph Spangler. The bard indemned conspirators against the life of one of the noblest of men is rapidly being wiped from the face of the earth, and already the grave consumes those, nearly all, Booth, Harold, Atzerodt, Payne and Mrs Surratt met a speedy and violent death, O'Laughlin died at Dry Tortugas, and Spangler now has succumbed. Only two are left—Dr. Mudd, living where Spangler died, and Arnold a wanderer no one knows where.

And this is what a recent dispatch said "the event of the evening," and dined at Jersey City, Feb. 10th says: "Yesterday Kill von Kurl was thirty. Enlisted with no between Staten Island and Bergen Point. Hundreds of people crossed the ice in order to reach New York, and a great number of teams also crossed in safety. An event of this kind has not been known during the present century."

Zachary Layton was pardoned out of the Michigan State Prison not long ago, on the strength of his petition setting forth that he was an honest man when not in liquor, and that he desired to show the world that he could be a good citizen. He was released on condition that he would forever abstain from drink; but when a few men again bought his way to his taste for whiskey, celebrated the event by a hilarious spree, and having violated his pledge was promptly returned.

A curious decision was made by Judge McKean, at Salt Lake in the case of Ann Eliza Young's petition for a divorce and alimony, which is that Brigham shall pay $6 cents per month alimony pending the trial; alimony to date from the filing of the petition which was about twenty months ago. The dispatch says there was long appearance in the court room when the court was called for decision. The Judge has made no orders that within ten days Brigham Young shall pay $2,000 attorney fees, and within twenty days, from receipt $2,500 alimony.

Taxing Church Property.

The question of church property taxation cannot be a well-known incident of a very positive instinct in mankind, the owners of the 7 dense, and the question of having the Legislature to be born of a law to exempt the property from taxation, are to receive the same. Upon this point a other question, not, of course, so conclusive, but still hopeful. Dundee, who was last week carried by the Democrats by a four-to-one majority, with a majority of 12,000 votes, cast the same vote, and with heavy majorities in favor, in spite of the city contract. Pittsburg, too, was carried by Democratic majorities last fall, retained its town and position, very much and voted at 2 to 1 majorities for a democratic majority. Saint Democratic Strongholds as Lancaster, Reading and Harrisburg were also carried by the Republicans. From Allegheny, Manchester, Jersey, Titusville, Allentown, Easttown, Bethlehem and other towns of the State come similar encouraging indications. Taking results of 1874 over the last election, when the State went Democratic by 5,000 majority, which would give the Republicans 45,000 majority at least. These returns demonstrate a decided change in the popular tone. They tend to create what we have never doubted, that the Democratic victories of last fall have not given that party any guarantee of permanent power.—Detroit Tribune.

Among the Congressional memorials last Thursday's session, which were not covered by the regular report, was the following:

Judge Poland was very naturally indignant at Butler's interference with his parliamentary rights last night in calling up the memorial to reconsider the vote by which the resolution remitted by him from the Arkansas Democrats was recommended. Mr. Poland informed him sharply that he could submit to his own business. Schuyler Colfax, and Mr. Butler replied that he had reason to believe that Poland did not mean to call up the Arkansas report. Poland wanted to know what reason Butler had to believe it, now the latter replied that he had information from Mr. Blaine leading him to that conclusion. The Judge, who had waited very warm expression from Blaine, was astounded at such information. "Then you mean to say I state what is not true?" said the Colonel. "I mean to say you are a liar!" cried Poland fiercely. "That is pretty talk," returned Butler, "and it doesn't require much courage to say it." He never proceeded to take much, was the retort as the Judge moved away, and there is certainly no occasion for the display of any "in this case."

Sharn.—Fox, Rose & Buttars have just received a fresh stock of D. M. Ferry & Co.'s seeds.

Dupus.—Dr. Lewis has just received a fresh invoice of drugs and medicines, and invites the public to call in and see him.

The pseudo editor of the Traverse Bay Progress last week, places all of Antrim County's troubles upon the shoulders of Judge Ramsdell.

Caution.—we mean the store at the other end of town, have just received a new supply of those border prints and other dry goods.

Rev. Geo. L. Cole, of this village, anticipates delivering a few lectures outside this spring, for the benefit of the Charlevoix church fund.

The question for discussion by the Ilsting Club next Monday evening next is "Resolved, that the government of the United States ought to increase its navy."

Caution.—There will be a caucus held at the school house in District No. 2, in the Township of Marion, on Saturday, the 20th of this month, at 1 o'clock p.m., for the purpose of nominating township officers.

The weather seems to indicate that Spring is already here. During the week the weather has been pleasant and warm enough during a portion of the time to cause the eaves to drip. A break up is looked for.

Sunday—School closed on Thursday with the usual review and declamatory exercises. We were unable to attend, but are informed that the exercises throughout attested satisfactory proficiency, and reflected credit upon the teachers.

Charlevoix Cabinet Absent.—We see by our exchanges that D. S. Perry, of Wilson township, in this county, is on a hunting tour in the southern part of the region. He told the peoplesat Union Lake one evening last week, what he knew about temperance.

The article on dancing handed to us last week is respectfully declined, not on much for its lack of merit as for its lack of consistency. Argument simply for the sake of argument is very distasteful to us, at least, who, standing behind the scenes know the true sentiments of the participators.

Marine.—We learn by telegraph that the Traverse City Eastern Star Lodge of Adoptive Masons will celebrate the first anniversary of their organization at the Garden House, on Tuesday evening next, with a grand ball. As the management is principally under the supervision of the ladies of the Order, it is expected to be a fine affair.

The telegraph tells us that a dwelling in the village of Baldwin, near Ludington, owned and occupied by a family named Tripp, was completely destroyed by fire on the morning of the 8th, the family barely escaping with their lives. A man by the name of Dennis, who was staying at the house that night, lost his life in the flames, he being found burned to a crisp.

Painting.—At the solicitation of many of his friends, F. J. Lewis, Esq., of Forch Lake, has consented to work until May 10th at his old trade—painting. Frank is master of the profession, and can paint anything, from a wagon-box to a picture or landscape view. Decorative, fresco, carriage or sign painting will be done on short notice. Mr. Lewis has been engaged to do the lettering on the new schooner W. J. Smith, which is to be launched early in May.

The Indian Lands.

On reaching second-hand last week of the passage of a Bottom Land Bill from fellow's room, which has been very ready looked for by the people of this section for the past three years. There are many in doubt—distressed laborer whose wage of the law, who are not fully acquainted with its provisions.

The bill repeals the proclamation to sell all of the lands set apart by treaty with the Ottawas and Chippewas in 1854. The treaty provided that each Indian then twenty-one years of age should receive eighty acres of land, and the balance of the land remaining unsold should be sold to the highest bidder for cash. Each person entitled to a land allotment was required to make personal application to the Land Office within five years from the passage of the act, and if he failed to do so, the land reverted to the United States. Under this provision of the law, Indians could not select lands after the expiration of five years from the passage of the act.

There is now offered to every person who is without a home, an opportunity to get more than they can ever hope for in any other part of the country. The land remaining unsold consists principally of the very best lands in the State, and the settlement of the same will undoubtedly be attended with great success. Many persons are now preparing to leave for settlement on the lands, and we understand that a large number will be ready to move on the opening of the roads.

There will probably be about 100,000 acres of land open to homestead settlers under the United States law.

Although it does not become a law until after the 4th of July, we know of no hindrance to those desiring to take advantage of the law, who are not fully acquainted with its provisions.

The bill referred to Brecher will have to possess strong evidence to overthrow incompetency. A servant girl last week testified to having seen Mrs. Tilton on Brecher's knee, a brother of Mrs. Tilton repeatedly admitted that once when in her house he saw certain things that left a lasting impression on his mind that something was wrong; and Mrs. Frank Moulton test fied that both Beecher and Mrs. Tilton had made her a confident of their troubles—that Beecher had prepared poison, and would take it rather than leave the house; that Mrs. Tilton would pervade herself and bind her husband's character rather than see Beecher's good brought right home.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, County of Emmet, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Emmet holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Little Traverse, on Monday, the 22nd day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.

Present, John S. Barnard, Judge of Probate.

In the Matter of the Estate of Charles Davidson, deceased. On reading and filing petition, duly verified, of Henry Davidson, administrator of the estate, praying that an order may be granted to sell certain real Estate belonging to the late Charles Davidson, deceased, in petition mentioned and described as the Estate. Thereupon it is Ordered,

That Wednesday, the seventh day of April A. D. 1875 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Little Traverse, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper circulated in said County of Emmet, for three successive weeks previous to said hearing.

INFLAMMATORY DISEASES.

Dr. Trask was engaged for twenty years in a course of experiments upon the medical properties and power of vegetables, science and combined. At the age of seventy years, he found himself in possession of the result of his experiments, a combination of vegetable extracts, the power of which in removing disease is unequalled in the annals of Medicine.

His discovery consists in a combination of these powerful Vegetable Extracts with Electricity or Magnetism in its form of an ointment.

Carrying it, thus, into the recesses of unprecedented success which has attended its application in the cure of diseases, shows it at once as the greatest discovery of the age, and cures for a trial and close investigation of its properties.

It never fails, while there remains sufficient life to produce a natural and healthy action in the capillary vessels of the body, and sustain the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease, which cannot be obtained from any other remedy.

Such is the power of this combination, that it penetrates to every portion of the human frame—even the marrow of the bones and ligaments, or membranes and muscles, and through the whole system of nerves, however distant it appears to be, it will instantly act as a universal cleanser.

Numerous instances are on record where this remedy has restored health to persons so near the grave that the usual powerful remedies failed to produce any effect. Such cases have recovery from the case to the immediate of the Magnetic Ointment.

No patient ever need die with this disease where the Magnetic Ointment can be obtained.

For Inflammatory Rheumatism this liniment is the most complete remedy ever prepared. For Diphtheria or Putrid Sore Throat, it surely cures.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, it will relieve and cure in the worst case of Nervous Deafness in their entirety.

For Nervous Diseases this medicine is of immense value.

A fortune of the spine, Rheumatism, Lameness, Chronic Sore Throat, Sciatica, Lumbago, Chronic Sore Eyes, Piles, Scrofula in the Face or Bones, Burns, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Inflamed Eyes, Fever Sores, Sores, etc., will be immediately relieved by the use of Dr. Trask's Magnetic Ointment.

☞ Senator Ferry, of this State, has been elected President pro tem of the Senate, which is a high compliment.

☞ The Brooklyn Times, Beecher paper has come into bankruptcy. Ann Tracy is a $10,000 creditor.

☞ Plymouth church has contributed $225,000 to defray the expenses of Beecher's recent suit with Tilton.

☞ Mrs. Woodhull says that she now dates her rule from her acquaintance with the Moultons and Tiltons.

☞ The correspondence between Spain and the United States for the settlement of the Virginius affair has been signed.

☞ A cadet at the Annapolis Naval Academy named Fowler Claude has been expelled for refusing to black boots, ordered midshipmen.

☞ Says the incomparable Josh: "There iz this difference between a wise man and a phool—the wize man learns sumthing from every one he meets, while the phool tries to learn every one he meets sumthing.

☞ Concerning the Washington dispatches as to Senator Christiancy's views a Jew City says: "The sentiments indicated by Senator Christiancy are those which will unite and strengthen the Republican ranks. Under them a Republican who is faithful to the principles of the party may expect recognition of his own potency."

☞ A special cable dispatch from Rome to the Freeman's Journal announces that at the Promissotory held on March 15th, Archbishop McCloskey, of New York, Mgrs. Ledochowski, Archbishop of Posen; Gueissette, of Prussia; Declamps, Archbishop of Mechlin and Primate of Belgium; Archbishop Manning of Westminster; and Mgrs. Barnabo and Giannelli, of the Roman court, were created cardinals.

☞ Tilton's "True Story" is in the hands of Beecher's lawyers, and will be introduced in evidence on the Beecher side As will be remembered, it was written soon after the publication of the Woodhull story, and purported to be a true statement of the whole matter. The offense charged to Beecher by Tilton in the "True story" was not that of adultery, but of having made improper advances to Mrs. Tilton.

☞ The Democratic party is rapidly drifting into the complete control of the Southern wing of the party, whose aim is now as clearly the suppression and extinction of the colored citizen as it was before the war to perpetuate his condition of slavery. To restore the Democratic party to power, is to extinguish the hopes of four millions of people, in whom the Government has pledged a fair and equal chance with the thriftiest citizen of states in the enjoyment of civil rights,—and in the improvement of their condition.

☞ In the opening address to the jury in the Beecher trial Mr. Tracy assigned Mr. Tilton, Mr. and Mrs. Moulton and Mr. C. Beecher as conspirators, acting together to compass the downfall of the defendant. He claimed the original conspiracy against Mr. Beecher was not as now charged, but that the letters and conversations of the defendant had been misinterpreted to open a prayer when a lesser offense was supplied. Mr. Tracy was very severe upon both Tilton and Moulton, and recited the facts of Rev. Corey's testimony being worthy of credence. He consigned the life, character and services of Mr. Beecher. On the 20th Mr. Beecher published a card denying the charge of conspiracy so far as he was concerned pronouncing the accusation a malignant falsehood from beginning to end, desirable of every particle of truth, and said Tracy can learn if he will call on me to the contrary, and in which event he will find out that I do not believe in the doctrine and to the insult by him—"that lying is justifiable under certain circumstances."

☞ The aggregate of the appropriation bills passed by the Forty-third Congress is approximately stated at $142,000,000.

The assignment of the Michigan Senators in the arrangement of the standing committees of the Senate every theme is pointed and suggestive to-day. Senator Ferry is chairman of the committee on Rules, second in that upon Postoffices and third in the Finance Committee. Senator Christiancy is third in the important Committee on Claims, fourth on that upon Territories and three is that upon the Revision of the Laws of the United States.

The New Hampshire Election.

The nearly complete returns from the New Hampshire election modify somewhat the first rises as to the extent of the Republican triumph, but the result is after all a decided and gratifying victory for the Republican party. Their party has a slight plurality over the Democrats on the popular vote. It has a stand and a working majority in the State legislature, which was not a Republican State officer in the existing year. Last year the Republicans were in a minority of some 2000 votes on the popular vote, and the Democrats had a majority in the Legislature. The result of the election is therefore not only a Republican victory, but a decided and remarkable Republican gain. The gain too, is not the result of carelessness or indifference on the part of the Democrats, for the vote is the largest ever polled in the State.

The success is the more significant because it was gained in the face of great disadvantages. The Democrats had been in power for a year, and they had used their power unscrupulously. They had removed Republican officials wherever they could reach them, and crowded the offices full of Democrats. They had rearranged the Senatorial districts, and individual that does not Repu——. On the ——cts, so as to favor their party to some extent in managing. They had passed the constitutional amendments in the enthusiasm of the hour, and to maintain the supremacy of the party in the State, they had used their power to put the said power of citizens into the hands of about a thousand voters in Portsmouth and Rendered some. But in spite of all the Republicans have rolled up the figures.

The result of the election holds a promise which will more especially stand that the reverses of last fall were only temporary. It indicates that the Republicans who abstained from voting last November, or who voted with the Opposition, are ready to rally and to aid in crowning the Democratic party in the control of the Government. That large body of moderate men are ready instead to the Republican party if the party shows by its acts that it is faithful to its own principles. The reasons of religious Democratic partisans who have fostered but the success of 1872 give them a new title to victory. They will find considerable food for reflection in the victory from New Hampshire.

It is to be hoped that the success of this election will be heeded at the south. It was a noticeable fact that the Democrats succeeded far more readily in those counties in the Southern States. The smart class of Southern people, and those connected with the commercial interests, generally were sure to regain national authority, and that they could trust the honesty and like who Republicans as they proved at this election in New Hampshire will show them plainly how much they have been mistaken. The full prominence of the fact that the Republican party is still in power, and by no means ready to turn the support of the American people and that there can be no hope of overthrowing the constitutional amendments and restoring a system of quasi slavery, will do much toward uniting the South. The New Hampshire election will contribute greatly to ward impressing these facts upon the South ern people.—Detroit Tribune.

The American Cardinal.

The United States is to have a few Roman Cardinal at last. Archbishop McCloskey, of New York City, has been ordained by telegraph from Rome and he and five other prelates of the Roman Catholic Church will be made Cardinals at a consistory or meeting of cardinals to be held at the Vatican on the 15th. This honor has been conferred in consideration of the Catholic Church in the United States. The Archbishop's appointment is the first instance in which

A few days since a young theater whose father lives on Congress street, organized a theatrical company and presented a dime novel play at Chene. The company consisted of three boys and a banker, and Mr. banker's lovely girl was to be the [illegible] The curtain rose. Some members of the company were returning from a raging conflict at the time of the [illegible] of the manager, and saw, as they thought, three or four fragments fall to the direction of the [illegible] Those of the family who remained [illegible] heard the "corpses" as it were [illegible] and thought that it had passed over the house. They sought for it the next day and the day following, but as [illegible] of the deep snow did not find it until the following Monday, when a daughter of Mr. Steinbeck found it about [illegible] northeast of their house. Prof. Leonard has visited the spot and noted such things as were attainable. The meteor struck upon the snow and ice just beyond a [illegible] though that runs through their premises, making a very slight indentation in the ground, and bounded northwest a distance of thirty feet or more, up a slight northerly ascent to rest upon the snow. It was apparently many when it fell, and when found it was subjected to the sun and snow underneath, so that it required a smart rap to loosen it. Prof. Leonard estimates by experience that the place pointed out is not the first place of striking, but when the snow goes off he shall be able to find upon the other side of the slough a more decided mark or impression where it dug adjusted, and from which it bounded to the spot that mentioned. PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, held at the Probate Office in Lake Township, in said County, on the 22nd day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.
Present, Jesse E. Sherwood, Judge of Probate.
In the Matter of the Estate of Charles Davidson, deceased. On reading and presenting the petition, duly verified, of Adam Davidson, the administrator of said deceased, praying for the reasons therein set forth, that he may be licensed to sell the interest of the said deceased in the following described real estate, to wit: The North East Fraction of the North East ¼ of Section Thirty-one (31), Township Thirty-two (32) North of Range Five (5) West, containing Seventy-five (75) acres more or less, according to the Government Survey thereof.
Thereupon it is ordered, that the 5th day of April A. D. 1875 at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next of kin of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the Township of Lake, in said County, and show cause why a license to sell the interest of the said deceased in the said real estate should not be granted; And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Emmet, for three successive weeks previous to said hearing.

INFLAMMATORY DISEASES.

Dr. Trask was engaged for twenty years in a course of experiments upon the medical properties and powers of Magnetism, and the result is compounded in this Ointment. It is the most powerful remedy in the world for the cure of the inflammatory diseases of the human body, and extracts the power of which in a concentrated manner is associated in the Magnetic Ointment.
His discovery consists in a combination of magnetic power with the most powerful Essentials or Magnetisms to be found in certain herbs.
Certain it is, that the combination and superabundant amount which has entered into this ointment in the cure of rheumatism, is the most astonishing discovery of the age, and must be a final and effectual remedy for all inflammations.
Cancer fails, while there remains sufficient vitality to restore a natural and healthy action to the capillary vessels of the body, and repulsion the blood to the heart. Where such a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of cancer, cure cannot be obtained from any other remedy.
Such is the power of this combination, that it penetrates the system, and through the blood reaches every nerve and tissue, with the most powerful influence over the inflammation of its purifying and healing influences. Disease is made so healthy that it cannot exist. This has frequently been the case in inflammation of the bowels.
No patient ever need die with this disease while the Magnetic Ointment can be obtained.
For Inflammatory Rheumatism in the Chronic form, it will afford relief in the worst cases of Nervous Headache in three minutes.
For Neuralgia in this disease in all of its forms it is unequaled.
Affections of the Spine, Rheumatism, Lameness, Diseased Nerves, Numbness, Irritation, Cramps, Colic, Chafed Surfaces, Agues in the Face or Bones, Horns, Scaly Head, Swellings, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Inflamed Eyes, Fever Sores, Boils, etc., will be immediately relieved by the use of Dr. Trask's Magnetic Ointment.

A few days ago young Gruber, whose father owns the Creighton count, organized a theatrical company and performed a three-nested play of Othello. The company consisted of three boys and a feather, and Mr. Gruber's third son was to be the Moor of Venice, having been cast for the only negro part on the bill.

Young Gruber's elderly blooded cat is a prepossessing, and when his mother asked him to bring it some wool, replied, "I thought I saw a cotton swallow-tail cat around here, you better look for it."

He was on a train when a man came aboard and had a steamer ticket for Europe. "Where are you going?" "Liverpool." "Where is Liverpool?" "Why, don't you know where Liverpool is?" "Yes, but I want to know where it is."

"Have you a newspaper to read on the train?" asked a man of his friend. "No, but I can get one from the boy." "Then I'll take a paper with me," said the man, "for I never read anything from a boy."

"Why, Mr. Brown, you look as if you had been sick." "Yes, I have been sick, but I'm getting over it." "Ah, I'm glad to hear it. I was afraid you were going to die." "Oh, no, I'm not going to die, but I'm getting over it ☞ Detroit has $3,000,000 worth of church property which pays no taxes.

☞ The Michigan fish commissioners report more applications for fish than the State hatcheries can supply.

☞ A Washington special announces that Senator Ferry, of Michigan is to marry the only daughter of Congressman Mitchell of Wisconsin.

☞ It is said that in confidential exchange of views in regard to the election of a successor to Pope Pius IX is taking place between Germany and Italy.

☞ At the Beecher trial on the other day, Mr. Beecher looked at Mr. Moulton and bowed. Mr. Moulton shook his head, to insinuate that the days of bowing between them had passed.

☞ As an illustration of speed at which the electric current travels, a message sent from the observatory of Harvard College direct to San Francisco and back by way of Canada, occupied only two thirds of a second.

☞ The Grand Duke Alexis is to be sent on another long sea voyage. As his trip last Spring of 6 months he is reasonably to the hope that prolonged separation from his wife may induce him to give consent to the divorce which his imperial parents are seeking to consummate.

☞ In New York city, recently, a street car conductor ejected a drunken man from a car, and the man in spite of fell and received fatal injuries. The conductor was arrested, but the court acquitted him of criminal blame. The case is one of the many illustrations that the law does not hold men responsible for the consequences of their acts when they are under the influence of liquor.

☞ It is said that in Russia, on the other hand, Mr. George Kennan said that the prevailing sentiment of the Siberian exiles were fond of art and religion. In gratification of a combination of these sentiments he had seen in one instance, a portrait of ex-Gov Ilix, cut from Harper's Weekly, framed and hung up as a saint, and before which prayers were daily said by the Russian peasantry.

LANSING, Mich. March 26, 1875.

The law creating the office of County Superintendent of Schools is repealed, and each Township is to elect one Superintendent of Schools, one School Inspector, and one Commissioner of Highways; each for one year.

☞ Four new enactments were found by the Grand Jury, last week, against Wilbur F. Storey, of the Chicago Times —three for libel and one for publishing an obscene newspaper. They are giving the old maxim classic—what is a charge to meddle his guardian's conscience into the consequences, and to the interest of respectable journals it is hoped that the consequences will not be light.

☞ Ben Wade of Ohio, is strongly talked of for Governor of that State to be supported by the Republicans and Democrats. He is 71 years old, but sound in brain, wind, and limb, and would give "Pop-horn" William Allen the hottest race he ever saw. Wade was the first man in Congress to defy the southern fire-eaters, and let them know that he was ready to strike two blows to their one. If it came to blows.

For Sale.—Mrs H. L. Hufford of the village, offers for sale a good piano, and a new hay press. Terms reasonable.

It will be seen by our display that but one Highway Commissioner is to be elected in each Township, instead of three, as heretofore.

We call attention to the business card of D. R. Joslyn in another column. Mr. Joslyn is an attorney of experience and ability.

"Resolved that capital punishment should be restored in this State" was the subject discussed last Monday evening, and negative side carried off the palm.

The Northport Tribune is informed that Mr. Pickard has got out about 5,000 cords of wood on the North Manitou Island this winter.

The propeller Equator has been chartered for the present season by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and will run between Sarnia and Chicago.

Married.—John A. Hutton well known to our readers, was married on the 23d to Miss Ida Wood, of Elk Rapids. Rev. Mr. Cole officiating.

Farley, who was arrested at Elk Rapids last week for selling liquor to Barber, was fined $100, and sent to jail for four months. He has appealed the case.

Removed.—Harrison Miller commonly known as "Tip" Miller, keeper of the light house at the head of Beaver Island, has been removed. We have not learned the name of his successor.

A bee created a feeling waged in the Cheboygan Judicial Circuit—the contestants being Hon Daniel Goodman, the present incumbent, and one Brown, formerly of Detroit.

Notice.—By telegraph we learn that the Judge decided the celebrated Norwood Rea. Case in favor of the Defendant—John Olney. Our readers are all well informed as to the particulars of the case.

For Supervisor.—We mention the name of A. K. Dougherty for the office of Supervisor of Charlevoix Township for the ensuing year. He now occupies the position by appointment, and is fully qualified for the position.

Caution.—There will be a caucus held at Fox, Rose & Buttars' store in this village on Wednesday evening next, for the purpose of nominating township officers for the ensuing year. Let every voter in the Township be present.

The Muskegon Chronicle says: "Although peaches will be a very small crop, the apple buds are reported all right, while the immense fall of snow has protected the strawberries, which promise to be abundant. Pears are greatly injured.

Close or Secure.—Our correspondent at in South Arm writes us that after a very successful term of school in District No. 3 under the teaching of Miss Bessie Hawks it closed on the 12th with an examination which reflected credit alike upon teacher and scholars.

Sing Hudson.—A party in Hudson, Pa., has asked Miss Dougherty & Carr, of this village, for their estimates on the building of a steam yacht of 70 feet keel. The gentlemen are masters of their profession, and we hope they will get the job which is so better to our patrons, will manage to so thoroughly that we shall in the future see to it that our financial managers make better provision for the payment of current expenses. Our readers are aware that the County Treasurer was instructed by the Board of Supervisors at their last session to pay 10 per cent interest on all outstanding county orders from the date of their issue. The sum which is thus taken from the pockets of the taxpayers of this county is a part of the fund to which we allude. Not less than one thousand dollars will be saved by this arrangement, and applied to the payment of the principal of the county debt.

Senator Ferry has secured the meeting apart of a portion of Mackinac Island state park. When the news was announced, the citizens of Mackinac held a meeting and passed a series of resolutions thanking our worthy Senator for his interest in the matter.

The Democratic.—We consider that our readers all will clearly understand the situation in the matter of next Circuit Judge ship. We can only repeat what we have said regarding M. Hatch. From a personal acquaintance with the man, we can recommend him to the people of this county as worthy of their support.

Township Nominations.—The people of the several Townships to keep up all the old offices; and the idea is a commendable one. In South Arm Mr Wade has been renominated for Supervisor, Hugo for Treasurer and Jones for Clerk. In Marion, Ward, Smith and O'Neill are to be retained in those offices, and in Evangeline, Hugh R. Miller, John Miller and Geo. W. Bigge are on the ticket. Other Townships we have not heard from.

The Progress says:—Sam Mitchell of this place says that since Ford, Prosecuting Attorney for Emmet county, and well known by our citizens, refuses to be a candidate for Circuit Judge of this district, he shall support the next best man in the district for that office.—Grassold, of Traverse City.

Repudiation.—It is seriously to be hoped that the Republicans of Charlevoix county will stand true to the party at the coming election, and not let local considerations influence them to compromise their votes. The time has not yet come for us to act. Our dissatisfaction does not rest upon the party, but upon individuals; and in the future we can show them, without departing from our fealty, that we have had enough of them. The surest possible method of consolidating the party strength is to roll up local majorities. And just here let us say a word about caucuses. It is odious to every citizen, to attend the caucus, and are so in that good men are humiliated and unworthy and incompetent men nominated. The primary meeting constitutes the key to the effective and satisfactory administration of public duties and it is high time that the people's interests claimed be guarded.

Sixty-six Liens.—U. R. Ford, the inquisitive and discriminable Prosecuting Attorney of Emmet county, entered our office on Monday, called for a copy of the last issue of the Sentinel. After having read the item therein published which rather disrespectfully alluded to himself, with a sneering quickness he pointed to it with one rapid interlinear, and asked if we were the author of the communication. We answered in the affirmative, when he remarked in a very quiet manner "that within twenty-four hours or less we would be required to appear before the next term of Court in Emmet county, and answer to a charge of libel." We made answer to Mr. Ford in language which our attitude suddenly forbids us to report here, without right fore finger pointed to the door, and informed him that he must vacate the premises within one minute or be required to do so more expeditiously than gentlemanly. He soon complied with the request and departed. Ford was as good as his word, and on Thursday papers were served against us. If Mr. Ford thinks he has frightened us into retraction he is mistaken. We reiterate and confirm all we ever said concerning him, and regret our inability to obtain justice by any additional remarks. We have also nevertheless from their burrows, have brought the coon from the top of the hilly maple, have driven setting hens from their nests; but we never before had a practical demonstration of the result of stirring up a skunk in a stump fence. It stinks! But the case will give us an opportunity to criticise the practice of attorneys in such an extent that he will wish himself far away in Jackson county, where he learned his trade.

The Fence.—The property at the polley of some of our former Boards of Supervisors is now bearing largely of its legitimate and natural fruit. It has been building for the past two years, but we are sure in the future we can show them, without departing from our fealty, that we have had enough of them. The surest possible method of consolidating the party strength is to roll up local majorities. And just here let us say a word about caucuses. It is odious to every citizen, to attend the caucus, and are so in that good men are humiliated and unworthy and incompetent men nominated. The primary meeting constitutes the key to the effective and satisfactory administration of public duties and it is high time that the people's interests claimed be guarded.

Sixty-six Liens.—U. R. Ford, the inquisitive and discriminable Prosecuting Attorney of Emmet county, entered our office on Monday, called for a copy of the last issue of the Sentinel. After having read the item therein published which rather disrespectfully alluded to himself, with a sneering quickness he pointed to it with one rapid interlinear, and asked if we were the author of the communication. We answered in the affirmative, when he remarked in a very quiet manner "that within twenty-four hours or less we would be required to appear before the next term of Court in Emmet county, and answer to a charge of libel." We made answer to Mr. Ford in language which our attitude suddenly forbids us to report here, without right fore finger pointed to the door, and informed him that he must vacate the premises within one minute or be required to do so more expeditiously than gentlemanly. He soon complied with the request and departed. Ford was as good as his word, and on Thursday papers were served against us. If Mr. Ford thinks he has frightened us into retraction he is mistaken. We reiterate and confirm all we ever said concerning him, and regret our inability to obtain justice by any additional remarks. TERRIBLE SEA DISASTERS.

Five Corpses Found Frozen to the Deck of a Schooner.

[St. Paris Correspondence Chicago Tribune.]

During the terrible weather which has prevailed on the coast along the new year set in, great damage has been done to shipping in the eastern harbors, and several wharves and moorings have been so badly wrecked as to cause business inseparable expense. But of all the accidents none are worthy of notice in view of the appalling catastrophe which was revealed here at the dawn of the present day. Gerbidon Perot, keeper of the St. Pierre Lighthouse, was attracted up and out at 5 a. m. to that she expressing a fear that she had heard the crashing of timber before where those charges in the last hour are. As there on the wind were not running very high at the time Perot did not consider this any cause for alarm, but a heavy thumping of what he was to see a vessel upon the rocks. He jumped hastily himself hurriedly and ran to the house of a friendly fisherman named Floquet, who, with his three sons and the light house keeper went to the assistance of their boats on the beach. There they found a schooner on her beam ends, and she was being badly shattered by successive collisions with the heavy breakers that were out from the headland. The fishermen launched a boat, but before they were ready to put out to the wreck she veered about and was fast drifting on the beach. In less than fifteen minutes the unfortunate craft was stranded and they could board her with ease of planks, laid upon the low-sided hull, which was literally cased with ice, as were the decks, the rigging, and the stumps of its dismantled spar. Out of the galley two foreman legs protruded, and upon investigation the fishermen found that they belonged to the corpse of a colored man, whose face was frozen to the deck and whose body was stiff and hard as the ice that surrounded it. The steering gear had all been swept away with the rudder, and the vessel must have been for weeks at the mercy of the elements. In the forecastle three bodies were found which had either frozen or starved to death, for no provisions could be found on board. A corpse was found on its face beside a can of ripe peas; the galley, at this end, it was to ward off a storm intended in a surface of ice. His cabin windows had been "broken in by heavy seas, and the Captain's stateroom and mate's bunks were salutry canal with ice. There was a look of resolve and some kindling wood frozen in the ice near where the stove or "dogs" had stood below the water leaving of the vessel by the force of the seas threw it down. A corpse was found at the doorway and in the cabin with the stove shaking the fore. It wore a heavy reefing jacket, sealskin, sea boots and "sou wester." But the fishermen think that this was the Captain. The two mates, they say, must have been drowned, as no trace of them except their trunks and clothing could be found. The rigid ghastly aspects of the corpses struck terror into the very souls of the fisherfishers. They had to use axes to cut the bodies out of the ice and by direction of the Prefect of the Police, they were buried in a heated apartment of the jail to be thawed out. The bleish and snow-white specs on the bodies were gone and the gore of the dead men revealed the fact that they had been hardly feed fifteen before death, and in that way, perhaps, disabled from doing duty.

General Sherman has advised General Ord that all expeditions into the Black Hills country must be prevented, and unless the treaty with the Indians by which this land was ceded to them is modified the whites who are in that region must be expelled. In taking this step the Government is only carrying out the solemn obligations into which it has entered. While the present treaty remains in force, that land is absolutely and entirely the property of the Indians, and the Government is bound to preserve it for them. Such a course has caused so much trouble upon the frontier—that Indians have no rights which white men are bound to respect. It is encouraging to be assured that the Government intends to carry the treaty while it exists, and to keep faith with the red men.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1875

A Democratic Majority in Charlevoix County.

Reports from the various Townships in this county indicate that the Democrats have planted their banners upon our heights. We deplore the fact, but look upon it as an unequaled manifestation of righteous indignation; and souls, in fact, it is—direct from the hearts of the people.

And in the light of past events what else could be expected? The people have considered themselves wounded in the house of their friends,—and they have been. They have considered that in the distribution of the people's money the faithful were ignored because they were faithful; and the rewards bestowed upon those who least deserved them, because—what? Because they brought strength and aid now to the great and glorious Republican party—or rather to the great and glorious individuals who represent it.

And the people are right.

About them the people of this county now locate as where it was profitable to be Democratic; where our Michigan Representatives made speeches and pledges and where large appropriations have been made. The party which they represented always received the heaviest majorities here, while their Democracy predominated.

A hard-working, enterprising and deserving community have seen those things, and the result is to-day before us. Charlevoix is a Democratic county. If you want her back again to her old allegiance, give her a part of the patronage that is now used to secure votes, and her old color will again stand forth as brilliant as ever.

Our individual fidelity to the Republican party remains as firm as ever; but our sympathies are with constancy of which we constitute one. Therefore we shall not gainsay the people's rightful prerogative of throwing their votes where their future vital interests lie.

Republican Victory in Michigan.

The returns show a great but harmonious Republican victory in the State. The victory was gained on a light vote, which is usual with local and political contests. The Republican majority is estimated at 15,000.

☞ The Senate of the Forty-fourth Congress at 5:45 o'clock p. m. March 24, adjourned sine die.

☞ A gentleman in Grand Haven received through the mail on March 13, a young Alligator about eight inches long from a friend in Florida. It has been placed in a tank in the greenhouse of Hon. T. W. Ferry, and is doing finely.

☞ Thurlow Weed says: "The election in New Hampshire indicates that the Republican party, by wise handling and prudent management, are in position to recover lost ground, and to hold on to power during another Presidential term."

☞ Wisconsin comes forward with a girl who chopped and piled up forty cords of wood last winter. She is waiting for the snow to go off, when she will put in two hundred acres of corn. She attends her father's sawmill at odd spells, and can play the fiddle or shoot a pigeon on the wing.

☞ In the case of A. C. Buell, charged with stealing ex-Senator Chandler, of Michigan, in the Detroit Free Press a year ago, and which was appealed by the Government from the United States District to the United States Circuit Court, March 29th, resulted a decision affirming that of the lower court, and Mr. Buell was discharged.

☞ We understand that Hon. Birney Hoyt of Grand Rapids, recently nominated for Circuit Judge—a position he has held for nearly six years past—ran only 27 years of age when he first entered upon the duties of the office. He has proven himself thoroughly and fully competent, and demonstrated the fact that age and a bold head are not absolutely necessary for a Circuit Judge.

☞ General Banks is represented as expressing the opinion that Jeff Davis will be the next Democratic candidate for the Presidency. The Toledo Commercial thinks the announcement only surprises in being a little early. The arch-traitor and rebel is Democratic candidate, or even Democratic President in 1876, would be no more startling to the Nation than the sight of nearly one hundred equally unrehabilitated rebels and traitors, who served under him, is to the United States Congress in 1875.

☞ The returns from Connecticut show a Democratic victory in that State.

☞ Andy Johnson is greatly chagrined because no Senator replied to or even noticed his speech, and is particularly indignant at the New York Tribune and other Democratic journals for characterizing it commonplace. He expected every Republican Senator would reply at great length, and is terribly mortified because he is not taken more notice of.

☞ A telegram from Minnesota says that the prospect of relief from the terrible grasshopper scourge which for two years past has been inflicted upon the people of South and Western Minnesota is not flattering. A farmer of Blue Earth County recently found in one pail of earth, 893 eggs all of which, after being placed near a stove hatched out. Quite a number of farmers, discouraged with the prospects, have abandoned their homesteads and left the country. If the prophesy proves true these counties must afflicted will be utterly deserted in a short time.

☞ Andrew Johnson's application of the Constitution in the Senate, to the Louisiana question, was chiefly noticeable from a singular and interesting coincidence. Exactly seven years previous to a day were began, in the very same chamber, the initial proceedings for his impeachment as President of the United States. And it is noticeable that he is still on the circle swing, reconsidering "my policy," and setting up as the only proper precedent for Presidential action, in case of a State call for protection against domestic violence, his action in the case of Tennessee nine years ago.

☞ Not withstanding the positive statements to the contrary which have been made by the friends of Mr. Baker it is asserted on the authority of an intimate acquaintance of Zach Chandler, that the President has tendered the ex Senator the Russian mission. When reference was made to the editorial article in the Philadelphia North American a few days ago about Mr. Baker having written to his friends in that city declaring his intention to remain at St. Petersburg, the answer of old Zach's friend was short but to the point: He said, "I guess the President will have something to say about that."

The proposition of the Interior Department at Washington to send a geological party to explore and report upon the mineral wealth of the Black Hills, if promptly carried out, will result in much benefit, saving thousands from rushing into that wild country on useless errands. A party of competent explorers will be able to say whether the "colors" of mineral is sufficient for profitable mining, and also where are the most promising localities. The other movement to cut signals the Indian title is also a good one, and that can probably be accomplished before the explorations are completed.

☞ The Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, a Democratic organ, goes for a repudiation of the national debt, and even says "the payment of the interest is doubtful" after its party comes into power. It reminds the people that "slavery was abolished at the expense of the South," and that if the State debts are assumed by the National Government there will be a chance of getting part compensation for the Negroes, as the South owes about $2 to the North $1 in the form of State debts. Any scheme by which the loyal North can be plundered will meet with favor at the hands of those who were magnanimously spared without punishment after their treason had been quelled.

☞ In the Lower Methodist Episcopal Church at Chicago, Sunday, the Rev. Mr. Phelps preached from the text, "How shall we escape the damnation of hell?" and gave the following exposition of the phrase:

"The word hell' a translation of the Greek word Gehenna, is a term used to designate the Valley of Hinnom. This valley bounds Jerusalem on the north, and lies below Mount Zion—a scene of sacred and imperishable associations. In this valley Moloch, the national god of the Amorites, was worshiped with the horrid and unchristian rite of sacrificing children to the flre. When Josiah, in his conquests, overthrew the idolatry, he poured contempt upon the infernal practices by casting into the valley the bones of the deprived. In the estimation of the old Hebrews, the bones of the dead caused the greatest of all pollutions. Whatever person, place or things, they touched, were henceforth considered unclean. Hence this Valley of Hinnom, or Gehenna, this valley having been the receptacle of human bones which Josiah threw into it, was considered a place the most polluted and accursed. From this circumstance it became a common receptacle for all the refuse of the city of Jerusalem. Here large quantities of decomposing vegetable and animal matter were constantly thrown. This putrescent matter generated an abundance of worms; the worm here never died. To prevent the noxious effluvia springing from this mass of corruption, poisoning the atmosphere and breathing disease into the heart of the city, fires were kept burning day and night. This valley, therefore, was literally a place where 'the worm never died, and the fire was never quenched.' Jesus was a teacher, surrounded on such occasions and left as a wise familiar to his hearers, in order to illustrate his meaning. He drew now this abominable worm-generating and perpetually burning valley to symbolize the dark destiny which awaits the wicked."

Beecher and the Pope.

In his sermon last Sunday Mr. Beecher said: "The Pope of Rome is a good man. He has acted as a good Christian under the most enormous difficulty. Poor IX and I will sing hymns in heaven together one of these days, and I expect to have some spat with him if honor don't die out in the meantime." We're afraid his holiness in this proposed tournament of "an order may be granted to said creditors and will rather have the advantage of Henry. He can twirl him with the ragged edge, the gloomy cave and lots of things, and Henry will get mad, or, what is equally destructive of spirt, will enter into a jeremiological explanation.

The French crown jewels, property of the nation, have been deposited at the Ministry of Finances. Three times an official account has been taken of these. In 1793 by order of the Constituent Assembly, in 1810, and 1852. The crown jewelers then rated them at 20,000,250 francs and one centime. In the crown itself there are, besides other precious stones, 5,200 diamonds, representing a value of about $6,000,000. The first Napoleon had a valuable emerald on the battle field of Waterloo, which was found by a Russian soldier, and now belongs to his state.

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO.'S

VIBRATOR THRESHER

THE BRILLIANT SUCCESS of the Season, Separating Threshing, unprecedented in the annals of Farm Machinery. In a brief period it has become widely Known and fully established as the "Leading Threshing Machine."

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO.'S
PERFECTION
GRAIN BAGGERS REFUSE to submit to the wasteful and imperfect work of other Threshers, who separate from the straw a quantity of the best grain, saving that and doing fast, thoughless work.
The Fishermen find it highly advantageous to run a machine that has no "Beaters," "Pickers," or "Apron," that handles Long Reeds, Long Straw, Heritage, Flax, Timothy, Millet and all such difficult grain and seeds, with entire cure and effectiveness.
Those in pursuit of Muskrats, Minks, Otters and all such animals, find the Nichols, Shepard & Co's Machine very convenient, because it separates the worms; the worm have never died. To prevent the notions of flavia springing from this mass of corruption, poisoning the atmosphere and breathing disease into the heart of the city, fires were kept burning day and night. This valley, therefore, was literally a place where 'the worm never died, and the fire was never quenched.' Jesus was a teacher, surrounded on such occasions and left as a wise familiar to his hearers, in order to illustrate his meaning. He drew now this abominable worm-generating and perpetually burning valley to symbolize the dark destiny which awaits the wicked."

The following instructive dialogue was overheard the other day.

Room—I say, Jones, you seem to have been buying lots of groceries, where do you trade, Jones?

Jones—Why, I bought at

BYRON SEE'S

Grocery and Provision Store in Charlevoix and got a glass to treat.

Brown—Is that so? Can others do as well there as you can—you know you are always in a crowd.

Jones—O, yes, of course you can. He does all he says he does, he has a stock complete and I guess he does treat the patron he solicits.

We are now preparing an Abstract of Titles of Emmet County. It will be completed in a few weeks, and we can then furnish Abstracts on short notice.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, County of Emmet, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Emmet holden at the Probate Office, in the village of Little Traverse, on Monday, the 22nd day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.

Present, John S. Shurtleff, Judge of Probate.

In the Matter of the Estate of Charles Davidson, deceased. On reading and filing petition, duly verified, of Henry A. Bolling, Administrator of said estate, praying that an order may be granted to said creditors and Estate belonging to the late Charles Davidson, deceased, for paying debts against said Estate. Thereupon it is Ordered:

That Wednesday, the seventh day of April, A. D. 1875 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Little Traverse, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper circulated in said County of Emmet, for three weeks previous to said hearing.

JOHN S. SHURTLEFF, Judge of Probate.

You are hereby notified that at the election to be held on the 2d Monday in April, in the State of Michigan, the following officers are to be elected, viz:

Two Justices of the Supreme Court; one in place of Benjamin F. Graves, whose term of office will expire December 31 1875, and one to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Isaac P. Christiancy.

Also, one Regents of the University, in place of Thomas D. Gilbert and Hiram A. Burt, whose terms of office will expire December 31, 1875;

Also, a Circuit Judge for the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit, to be one county is entitled, in place of Jonathan E. Sanford, whose term of office will expire December 31, 1875;

Also, a County Superintendent of Schools for Charlevoix County, in place of John Dixon.

Given under my hand the day and year first above written.

ALANSON C. ALDRICH, Sheriff.

PAPER AT PETOSKEY.—The Petoskey are to have a Democratic paper started there this Summer.

ONION roll-butter, fresh garden seeds, and onion sets, at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

JUST think of it! The editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel has slandered C. H. Ford.—Northport Tribune.

RELIGIOUS.—Rev. Geo. W. Wood will preach in this village to-morrow both morning and evening.

DR. HARRIS has retur ned from Chicago and resumed practice at Eastport. Office hours at Torch Lake from 3 to 5 p. m. each day.

PORTER'S MILL on Pine Lake, will grind only on Wednesdays until after harvest. Grain taken to and from boats free of charge.

ENTERTAINMENT.—Remember that on Monday evening next, the Charlevoix Literary Debating Club give their closing exhibition. Admission free.

THE INDIAN LANDS.—All the information required by persons desiring to locate upon the Indian Reserve will be found elsewhere in this paper.

THE officers of the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Company say they are going to put down eighty miles instead of forty of new iron on their road this season.

WORK on Campbell & See's new schooner is rapidly progressing. The rigging, canvass and other fit out have been ordered from Buffalo, and she will be ready to launch by May 1st.

C. H. FORD, of Little Traverse, has sued W. A. Smith, of the Charlevoix Sentinel, for libel. Ford will find before he gets through with the matter that libel suits don't pay.—Herald.

NAVIGATION PROSPECTS.—The weather for the past week has very damaging to the ice in Lake Michigan and the upper lakes, and if no great change in the weather does not occur the ice will be non est inventus in two weeks.

NOTICE.—The management request us to state that the doors will be open for the Debating Society's entertainment, on Monday evening, at 6:30; to commence at 7 o'clock. During some stage of the performance a collection will be taken up for the benefit of the Society. Be sure and take a quarter with you.

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.—As far as heard from, the following are the Superintendents of schools elected in the several Townships in this County: Charlevoix, J. S. Dixon; Norwood, F. J. Meech; Eveline, A. R. Hayes; Evangeline, W. Watson; South Arm, James A Keat; Hayes Falls, A. D. Carpenter.

C. R. FORD, formerly driven out of Elk Rapids for selling liquor without a license, now Prosecuting Attorney at Petoskey, has sued Willard A. Smith, of the Charlevoix Sentinel, for libel. Go in brother Smith. We know how to sympathize with you, but we had a whole tortress to contend with, while you have only one man.—Cheboygan Independent.

AT BUFFALO.—The condition of the ice in the lake near Buffalo is reported by fishermen to be extremely rotten. Two warm weather of the past few days has completely honeycombed it, and with a few days more of such weather it would break up and pass out rapidly. The fishermen say it is not of sufficient strength to bear the weight of a person.

ICE IN LAKE MICHIGAN.—The situation on the west shore of Lake Michigan has very materially changed. There is a belt of ice extending out perhaps an eighth of a mile, but beyond the waves are in sight and no ice in visible. Thus it is evident that the warm weather and wind have having the desired effect. The river is clear but there is as yet no outlet to the lake.—Inter-Ocean.

TELEGRAPHIC.

THE INDIAN RESERVE.

To be Open for Entry on and after April 15th.

Special Dispatch to the Sentinel.

TRAVERSE CITY, April 8th, 1875.

The Indian Reservation will be subject to homestead entry on and after April 15th. Actual settlers must bring two witnesses to prove that they settled on the land prior to January 1st, 1874, and have remained on it since that time. Persons who do not claim land under the settlers' act must swear that they have personally been upon each forty acres of the land, and that it is not valuable for pine timber. They must bring two witnesses to prove this also.

B. C. MORSETT.

Dock.—Carpenter & Bartholomew have commenced work on their dock on Round Lake.

CARPENTER & BARTHOLOMEW have just received their spring stock of boots and shoes. Call and see them.

ICE.—The ice in Lake Michigan, off this place, shows signs of breaking up. In Pine Lake it is becoming safe to travel upon, and in Round Lake it is already disappearing.

NOTICE.—The person who dropped a letter in the letter-box addressed to "Hercule Lachance, Bayfield, Mich.," is notified that the same will not leave the postoffice until it is properly stamped.

WHITEFISH.—The Eagle says: Fish Commissioner Jerome planted 3,500,000 whitefish in the Boardman River at Traverse City last week Tuesday. They were all brought from the State Hatchery in excellent condition and without the loss of a single fish. Commissioner Jerome reports that the Salmon planted in the Manistee two years since are doing well, several of them have been taken at different points on the river.

TORCH LAKE.—Our Torch Lake correspondent says: Dr. Harris has returned, and now another Dr. has come and settled down among us with the intention of "practicing" on the unfortunate. Oh pity us poor mortals. Now the next thing we want is a burying-ground. The Election Polls have not yet closed, but the result will be a large Republican majority. On the township ticket party lines are not drawn. Palmer will be Supervisor, Cameron Clerk, and Van Wart, Treasurer.

THE TOWNSHIP ELECTIONS.—The nominations made in the several townships have been ratified by the popular vote—and in those townships from which we have reports. South Arm justly gave Mr. Keat nearly a unanimous vote. Mr. Dougherty met with no opposition in Charlevoix. Ward in Marion; Ann Smith in Eveline; and Miller in Evangeline have been elected. O. D. Wood in Norwood received 14 majority over Mr. Harris; E. K. Robinson was re-elected in Boyne Valley. The Treasurers and Clerks are all elected as nominated. We shall give a full list of the officers in each Township as soon as we can get returns.

THE ICE MOVING.—Returns by telegraph definitely settle the fact that Hatch is elected Circuit Judge over Griswold. It was a close contest, and the majority for Hatch will not exceed 100. Traverse City gave Hatch only 15 majority, but the county returns a fair majority. Antrim County did better than any in the Circuit and Charlevoix, Emmet and Leelanau gave majorities for Griswold. We look upon it as a narrow escape from what would have proven a disgrace and disaster. Numerous dispatches from reliable persons in Traverse City, on the evening of election reported Griswold drunk. The reports have been confirmed since to such an extent that there is no doubt of it. We joyfully hail the result and trust and believe that the Judge-elect will reflect honor and credit upon our courts.

The Township Meeting.

At the Annual Township Meeting for Charlevoix, held on Monday last, the following actions were taken:

The sum of $35 was appropriated for the purpose of fitting up a room to be used as a Justice Court Room.

It was voted to raise the sum of $100 to improve the State Road in District No. 5, Bonjour neighborhood.

The following Overseers of Highways were elected:—District No. 1, A. Rose; No. 2, John Bell; No. 3, Hugh Miller; No. 4, James Waugh; block; No. 5, D. C. Bergen; No. 6, J. Talcomb.

J. S. Dixon, and O. D. Mason were elected Pound Masters.

It was voted that all stock be prohibited from running at large from November 1st to April in each year, and that swine be prohibited from running at large during any month of the year.

County Superintendent's Report.

To the Superintendent of Public Instruction:

SIR:—My public examination of teachers was held Oct. 21—23, inclusive. It was attended by six applicants for teachers' certificates, all of whom were licensed. I used both verbal and written questions. My record shows a much greater number of correct answers than at any previous examination. In one case (that of Miss Arvilla Sackett) there were but six failures to give correct answers to the sixty test questions. My rule has been to grant a license only when 450 per cent of the questions are answered correctly. I regard a minute and thorough examination by the use of printed and oral questions, as important means of elevating the qualifications of the teachers employed, and of deterring unworthy applicants. As is stated in my statistical report I visited during the winter term all the schools in the county but three. One of these was in a distant part of the county, almost inaccessible for the want of beaten roads. Another was discontinued at the time of my visits, one account of the burning up of the school-house; and the third I closed before I was able to visit the township.

During the six years of my Superintendency, the schools have never been so efficiently and successfully conducted as at the present. Some have been specially in regard to close and accurate instruction and systematic drill the teachers have come nearer to a correct standard than ever before. I have no opinion of the late changes in the law which I desire to place on record. I may say, however, that while I have heard frequent regrets among our citizens, I have heard no serious advocacy of the new law.

Very respectfully,

JOHN S. SHURTLEFF,
Ex-Sup't

The New Cardinal.

The fact that by the accession of Cardinals Manning and McCloskey the College of Cardinals will contain three English-speaking members, is unprecedented since the time of Henry VII. At the death of Cardinal Pole in 1558 he was the sole English-speaking Prince of the Church, the Scotch Cardinal, Beaton, having been assassinated twelve years before. After the death of Cardinal York in 1807, no new English Cardinal was made until the consultation of Cardinal Weld in 1830. He died in 1837, and Wiseman received the red hat in 1850 and Cullen in 1866. The three Archbishops of Westminster, London, and New York represent the English-speaking Catholic world in a college of fifty seven members.

The Independent, in an article upon "The First American Cardinal," says: "Cardinal McCloskey is a prelate of great dignity of character, and he is represented as regretting the distinction which he has received, and we have no doubt of his sincerity. It cannot be denied that a cardinal in New York will be in a very anomalous and unconstitutable position. There will be nobody with whom he can associate on equal terms. His rank is that of a prince and he must be addressed as His Eminence. His costume, which he must of necess. wear, will subject him to constant observation. Even in London Cardinal Wiseman found himself unpleasantly conspicuous, although he was surrounded by princes and nobles. But Cardinal McCloskey will be wholly separated from all social surrounding and set apart in his splendid trappings. He will be a most picturesque personage when he goes out for an airing or to an evening party, clad in a complete suit of scarlet—even scarlet stockings, shoes and hat—and the wheels of his carriage must correspond in color. The broad-brimmed red hat, with its immense tassels, which typifies the sacred office of the cardinal, is only worn on official occasions; and for ordinary purposes a red velvet hat, without any brim, is the usual head-covering on an Eminence.

I Keep What I Advertise.

A Practical Joke.

A gay party of ladies and gentlemen, receiving some fifty answers to an "an advertisement for a husband," which they had inserted in a city paper, wrote a letter to each and every applicant, stating that the lady, (represented to be young and beautiful), wished previous to his being introduced to her, to see him, at the same time requesting each to be in a certain place in a certain theater on the following evening, dressed in a blue coat, white pantaloons and a scarlet vest, and immediately on the conclusion of the first act to flourish a white handkerchief in one hand, and apply a glass to the right eye with the other. Everything succeeded so well that, as soon as the curtain fell, about fifty individuals of all ages, from the smooth-chinned Adonis of 18, the sleek, portly, self-confident widower of fifty, and the emaciated bachelor of 60, dressed in uniform according to orders in the gayest style and the utmost variety, with studied action flourished the handkerchief and raised the glass to the eye. But who shall paint the astonishment and dismay which were depicted in every countenance as they gazed upon each other and discovered the sudden failure of all their hopes. With almost incredible velocity they descended from their unenviable attitudes to hide their diminished heads among the crowd. The amusement of the originators of the hoax, who took care to witness its consummation, may be imagined.

Fitz-John Porter.

It seems that Gen. [illegible] will not have the [illegible] long time should the [illegible] success claimed in the late war. The Commercial hears an unconfirmed rumor that Gen. Porter has received from the New York Tribune some of the Cabinet meeting on Friday, wherein Grant announced that Gen. Porter was one of the appointees of Porter for a subordinate office. The matter has been frequently discussed by the Cabinet before, and it may be stated with positiveness that President Grant has never been a member of the Board for reinstating the forces of the Court Martial. The President has taken a great interest in the case and watched the trial, and the announcement is made on authority not familiar with it; the case of the fifth is not a very much opposed to Gen. Porter. He regards him as having been guilty of conscious conduct, and the verdict of the unanimous opinion of the Court is entirely just. In the application of Porter for a restoration to favor, it would have no legal or moral standing to find the finding could be regarded as of any effect, and that the court could have no power to punish Gen. Porter if guilty or to abrogate his sentence if innocent. All the members of the Cabinet, with perhaps one exception, hold similar views in favor of the President. The secretary of War will be would be willing for Gen. Porter to have a new trial if the court could have power to show him if he was found guilty and to restore him if found innocent. As the court could in no case have this power he was in favor of steadily leaving his patience.

How Citizens Get Out of Sidetalks.

Take an egg out of a nest on which the hen has not left her full time, carefully holding it to the eye; examine it around you will find the exact spot on which the little fellow is pecking on the inside of the shell; this is all of the work he can do in getting located, and then the shell is forced outward as a small scale, hatching a hole. Now if you will take one of the eggs in this condition from under the hen, remove it to the house or other suitable place, put it in a box or nest, keeping it warm and moist, so that the temperature of the hen as possible, which can be done by keeping the box between bottles of warm water upon some cotton or wool and by a glass over the glass over the box or nest, then you can sit or stand, as is most convenient, and witness the time spoken of previously mentioned. As the exact point in an egg where this power is was in favor of steadily leaving his patience.

A Hatch in the Penal Sea.

Mr. A. A. Kingsley writes as follows from the port of Stevens of a hatch in the Penal Sea: Heading at length this most remarkable of all the seas and lakes on the globe, we prepared to take a haul, and hitch I, you hardly cannot even to think again. I had previously hailed in numerous nets, saw and rivers but never did I expect such a haul as this. The nets I gave out the water is 200, from its looking bottom as large a proportion of nets (50 per cent.) that one floats upon the surface as a cork. At the time there was only a gentle ripple upon the sea, and being a good net I kept struck out into deep water. I soon found that I could not sail, and Post with wonder at first, but that I could actually walk in the water, nothing easy to the arrangement. The fact I made for the shore and found it to be one of the many islands and soon, by the land and lone isle, was where the water was about knee deep. As first he was quite reluctant to follow me, but I soon got over my fears, and he followed me in single file. Arriving at the net I found it was a small island. Upon which was stuck in the bottom and by the meshes of the net. Upon which was stuck in the bottom and by the meshes of the net. Upon which was stuck in the bottom and by the meshes of the net

Local News.

Note falls on Thursday.

Having raised majority in the county was 775.

A vote to only give 307 majority for Hatch.

Heavy rains running along the west shore of Lake Huron.

Detroit is heaven's first love, and it has never been repealed.

Navigation has opened between Detroit and Thessalonia.

Wanted—A girl to do general house work. Apply at this office.

A fresh supply of oranges and lemons at Carpenter and Bartholomew's.

Aaron Bertrand has on hand for Detroit and Chicago, for a stock of new goods.

Charlevoix County gave 17 Democratic majority, and 108 majority for Gubernatorial.

Hanson—Judge Hastings was re-nominated as the Muskegon Circuit by over 3,000 majority.

Notice.—The spring and summer term of the village school will commence on Monday, April 26th.

The entire stock of the stuff of Gen. W. Duncan & Co. in this place, was bloomed down by the heavy rains on Thursday.

Carpenter & Bartholomew have just received a fine assortment of prints and dress goods. Ladies call and see them.

The Singer Sewing Machine has just received a coat of black paint to the upper works which improves her appearance very much.

Error.—We made a mistake in stating that J. A. Rowley elected Supervisor, Bert of Schools in South Arm Township. A. H. Hoyle was elected.

Snow has nearly all disappeared and Spring has come. If you want something new and nice in the way of job work call at this office. We will either please you or charge you nothing.

The Charlevoix Library Debating Society have adjourned their debates to the second Tuesday in November, at which time we hope to see them to assemble with renewed interest.

The Pine Lake logs are being fitted up for the season's business. Capt. Richard Williams is to command the Can. Nott, and we suppose "Bill" will ring the bells on the Minnie Warren.

Turner's nothing like a libel suit to give a paper a lift. We understand that the Sentinel's subscription list is rapidly increasing since Ford commenced his suit against the editor for libel.—Herald.

Pure.—The son of a certain individual could be drawn through the hole of the button that he deposited in the hat at the entertainment of the Charlevoix Debating Society on Monday evening.

Rev. Leroy Warren, Superintendent of home missions for the Congregationalists, in Western and Northern Michigan, has removed from Pentwater to Grand Rapids, 518 Cherry street.

Public Auction.—The remnant of the stock of W. G. Newman in this village, will be sold at Public Auction on Saturday April 24th. The sale will commence on the day named, and continue Sunday excepted until the stock is disposed of.

Y Manderer had a grand jollification over the passage of the Mackinack and Marquette railroad bill on March 26. Bon fires, music, and gunpowder raised the hour. Thirty-eight guns were fired in honor of Gentle Wade.

The Sloop.—On Thursday afternoon commenced one of the most severe wind and snow storms of the season, and still rages with unabated fury as we go to press. It has held steadily in the northwest, and the blast is cold and cutting. It has however, done much good in breaking up the ice in the Great Lakes.

The Summer Resort.—From a private letter from Capt. Johnson, of this vessel, we learn that he and the other owners have not abandoned the idea of locating at Charlevoix. They will undoubtedly enter into the bark trade next summer, and set their stakes for a winter's business in shipping wood, etc.

Another Hoax.—We understand that W. L. Porter, of Rolesden, Pa., brother of W. H. Porter, of Pine Lake, is having a $7,000 steamer built for the Pine Lake trade. She is to be of 75 feet keel, and warranted to make twelve miles an hour. Opposition is the life of business, but we would not like to see the Swain run off the route.

Aaron a Pain.—At 10 o'clock A. M. on Sunday last the roof of H. Lewis' Drug Store was discovered to be on fire. Its prompt action it was extinguished. Had it been discovered a few minutes later, nothing would have saved C. Rose & Bullard's store and the office from destruction. The fire caught from a spark from the chimney.

Work.—Some work will be done on Pinckney for Tuesday next. Turn out for the purpose of plowing. Let each one of Land bear Patrick a. When it is all done there will be one of the nasty corn of the land we again with big flat a first class blast will turn to be sweet at. A rather spicy, and on the while, interesting article published in a late number of the Sentinel brought to light a few class fool in the person of C. H. Ford, the young Attorney of Emmet county. Ford has instituted a libel suit against Smith.

Dramatic.—The celebrated Chautauqua dramatic club will soon go into town and on the well known and popular drama "Ben Nesbit in a Bad House," which will come upon the boards in the night of July 1st. The object of the Club is to raise a benefit to Mr. A. R. Daugherty, their manager. Mr. Daugherty has not only rendered much service to the Club, but it has been under his management that nearly all the entertainments have been given in Charlevoix for the past six years. We think the Club can well afford to spend a little time for his benefit, and we also think the public will patronize their efforts as in former. We shall say more on the subject hereafter.

The Progress casts its shadow before us in this county at the dawn of a few months among whom we are counted. Well, we shall not attempt to crawl into your shoes the implication, but we must admit that it is a fad also sing. But but not our near approach to defeat shows the people how near they came to voting a corrupt ness themselves. Indeed, we may say we are sorry that Hatch's majority was not still smaller, that the lesson might be still more striking. We do not grieve that it is as it is. If a signal rebuke upon the people of Charlevoix county they deserve to bear it, for having permitted themselves to be led bamboozled into what their better judgements would have prevented from had they been forced to take the stepin the light of a full knowledge of both sides of the issue.

The Hoosegan Epidemic.—The northern region is never been owned by greater excitement than that which for several days has characterized the amusement hall. Now that the Indian lands would be open for settlement on the 15th of this month. Hence the first two days of this week the streets around Petoskey and Charlevoix were filled with homeseek ers—in many cases a dozen, and even a greater number claiming one description of land. Tuesday and Wednesday the pilgrimage to the Land Office commenced and both days witnessed fully all the transient sojourners and a few more. In Charlevoix county many of our citizens have made selections, and are now in Traverse City making entry. Telegraphic dispatches from Traverse City on Thursday stated that the rush and excitement prevailed in the vicinity of the Land Office. At an early hour the wagon yard and steps of the building were thronged with anxious homeseekers; and, anon, the crowd was so great that none were admitted to the interior of the building, but were forced to do business through the windows. The entries were made by commutation, and Emmet county was taken up first. On Thursday afternoon they were engaged upon Charlevoix county; and as we close to-day the storm commenced and the wires have not worked since. We will give further particulars next week.

The Charlevoix Library Debating Society
Entertainment.

A reserved seat under the footlights, by the courtesy of the manager, afforded us an excellent opportunity of enjoying the entertainment of the Debating Society on Monday evening; and we do enjoy it. A diversified programme, well arranged, and, as a whole well presented constituted an exhibition which did credit to both Ours and Management.

The declamation, "Nobility of Birth," by Willie McLennan, was well committed, and delivered with ease.

"You have, or the Bonkum's Lament" —an original production by Robert Millar,—read by Manager Dougherty. The real merit was somewhat clothed by too great dependence upon the manuscript. Well rendered under the circumstances.

"Wanted—a Male Cook"—farce. Counter Sec, John Mason Henry; Aunt and Andrew Margrie. Very good delineation of Negroism characteristics, especially the Irish. Dr Andrew Morgan, as Solomon, entered and sailed somewhat the prominent personator of "Hatrick" failed utter one, but character not poorly rendered.

"Hickory Timothy"—declamation by Wm. Lewis, sweet and melodious; very good for practice, and commendation implied.

"Jupiter Johnston,—an unmanageable boy"—declamation by Chas. Lewis, delivered with grateful bearing, gestures timely and effective, but spoken too hastily.

"Square Roots' Daughter," song and dance by J. M. Clark; pantaloes as an accompaniment.

"Advertised"—an original production by the manager—read and heard" advertisement of ten days' blank verse, by Capt. W. Clifford, read by Mr. Clifford. A good production and well read.

Extract from one of Mr. Stewart's addresses, by Henry Addicks, concession good, but gestures labored.

"Wonderful Egg,"—comic dialogue by John Mason and Henry Adams; very well rendered.

The concluding farce "Dick in Office" was the crowning attraction of the evening and deserves praise. W. M. Cook as Nicolas was especially good, and played his part well. W. C. Newman as "Tom Ball" was a very natural personification of the waggish. Miss Mary Mitchell as Mrs. Ball, and Miss Flo Fox as Miss Kate Ball sustained their characters well. Some of perfection in stage drill would have improved the piece, but, on the whole very creditably performed.

The programme was enumerated with music by the Quartette Club, which enlivened the scene at considerable.

Queen Victoria and the "Waterville Memoirs."

The London correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette writes: From some the publication of the "Waterville Memoirs," a book which has had the effect of making the queen more unpopular than at any time since the accession of George IV. and William IV. Disgusted with the way in which nothing is done to foster any favorable feeling in her regards her political conduct. Not in her private life tainted with the impurity which so unfavorably characterized some of her royal predecessors. Her principles moral and with the best appointed of strict habits which have now and then come to light in reference both to the Duke of Coburbrg and Her Majesty's conduct, if they were traced in the minutest detail each of the late Mr. Brown, would not bear the light of day. It is not that there is any thing to be ashamed of in that connection, but the publication of the letters would show that there was a degree of familiarity between the Queen and her servant which would be considered in the present state of public opinion derogatory to the dignity of the throne. Twenty years ago no doubt in public society that her Majesty was mentally and physically exempted from fulfilling the duties of government. The opinion formed at the time by professional attendants as falling from the lips of an eminent physician, who was on the way of becoming the head of the cabinet. Mr. Disraeli, who makes the most of every opportunity, and who has long nursed the ambition to influence, completed the impression that he had real and constant and personal influence with the queen and playmate." The explanation conveyed to the public by one of the press reporters present, under cautious assurances. Lady public to the subject is drawn to show that the confidence of the queen in members of the ministry, such as in the secretaries of Henry House, the Register of the Majesty's Privy Council, with publication the first edition of "Waterville Memoirs" would give more trouble at court.

What Did the Mean?

Old Mr. Throop up on Eighth street is as good as he ever was, and has a way of hanging texts in odd collections as he goes along the street. Yesterday morning as he was picking his way along the slippery gravel down Division street, snuggled up against the icy fence, and he just thanked the Lord "A change is how I have to walk to get to my appointments, and the Lord has put the hobnails and moccasins and boulder-heels and Arctic overshoes and old Mr. Throop trundled his lying-toes. Day gone the old dude died himself, offered old rags to the god-dogged Fates." And all of the people who he had run up and bundled him his things out and could tell what he meant by these remarkable phrases, and who died he been dressed.—Burlington Hawkeye.

A Cosy Retreat.

A rich woman on the Hot Springs district in southwest Virginia, several weeks ago, and a number of them registered. One of them, with a romantic turn of mind, had discovered a commodious cave, through which meandered a crystal stream of water. Above it was a large hollow tree, with a number of large limbs reaching out over the pool. The fair-haired one ascended one of the arched limbs and managed to crawl into hollow tree by a pleasant passage which led down from the distillery passed to different floors, and was difficult to navigate. Upon rise to the limbs and out into the air. He had at the proprietors of a fine-tone directions, and was about to spring from the voyage paying, mentioning his name as well, when all three aspirants fell off the law imposed with the purpose.

Town in Texas.—An elegant billy goes on shopping. While there is organized there is lonely bit of ruin. The streets are flooded, and, to sell to for dinner but a mongrel stands on the street, or a lonely cow is upon which has become a mere skeleton to the driver, but, the house being young will not have the worst. The entire establishment of the corn, stopping her little star and not knowing what to do. A gun in the house passes at I seen the situation is as a gamin. Tunnel Under the Straits of Gibraltar.

A company has recently been formed in Spain under the title of the Transcontinental Railway Company, the main object of which is to make Europe and Africa by a tunnel under the Straits of Gibraltar. This one, as projected, is to be a right line extending between Tarifa and Tangier on the Spanish coast to Ceuta and Tangier on the Moorish shore. The submarine portion will be 24,000 feet in length, or nearly 5 miles.

This comprises eleven shafts, of which two thirds the distance work under the English Channel, although the latter will have more than twice the length. The submarine depth of the channel at this point has been ascertained to be 1,050 feet, while that on the Spanish is 2,850 feet. Supposing that the tunnel under Gibraltar is carried at a distance of 1,000 feet under the bed, the total depth under the sea level would be over 3,000 feet, which the entry and exit passages would be each three miles in length.

Dumfounding Impudence.

A resident of the Sixth ward last Sunday missing some from his coop several weeks past, and this other night he watched, and caught a negro hoofing up a fog around, sponging out, he cried:

"Uh! huh! I've caught you, have I?"

"Is dat you?" asked the negro as he dropped the meat.

"Yes, this is I, and I want to know what you are doing here?"

"Hoss' back."

"Yes sir."

"You are the fifth yeer wood-pile, doesn't you?" inquired the darkey.

"Yes, I do."

"Well, dey is a new family moved into de' vicinity over dar, and I don't like dare looksees for nuf. I believe dey'd steal wood or anything lightning, and I can jess see a warmin'. If ye does see wood don't say I didn't tell ye what kind o' fowks dey are."

And he walked away leaving the man dumfounded.—Detroit Free Press.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - - APRIL 24, 1875.

☞ A New York correspondent says "Beecher seems quite blank the truth of every allegation, and professes to be able to account for every letter or document produced against him in a manner that will establish his innocence to the satisfaction of the world. I sincerely hope he may, but he has not done it yet. To-day he stands precisely where he did six months ago, except that his statements have now the strength that an oath in a court gives. He has not accounted for the letters, or the money, or anything she connected with the affair in any way conclusive. In short, to the ordinary intellect his statements are too thin for credence. If he is innocent of the crime charged, he is and has been, the most simple-minded, infantile old innocent that ever lived, and his friends would be justified in asking for a guardian. If he was innocent, one straight statement would have scattered the conspiracy and fraud into finer tatters ever in the affections of the people.

☞ It is estimated that it will require the labor of seven years to construct the tunnel under the English Channel. There is now prospect this great work will arrive at any consummation before very long. Some years ago when the project was first spoken of the world laughed at it as a dream of the wildest character; but as time has progressed and the idea matured, it has become more and more the subject of serious consideration, and the best minds in Europe and America have been put to work upon it. Mr. Gladstone has been pressed, and the House of Commons has been forced to consider it. Within eight miles of London, and within eight miles of Paris, there is only one of thirty miles? The objection that such a one would be land-locked is certainly not insurmountable, and the earth it would take in pleasantly well adapted for the construction of tunnels. All that is wanted is the money, and it seems probable that it will be forthcoming when times grow a little better. Lessaps has succeeded here, and it is to be hoped he will live to see it completed.

Talmage on the Rampage.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of N. e York, shipwrecked a sermon on the Bowery near Bible the other day, of which the following is an extract:

"Down at our Court-House day after day, there is unreported the corpse of the abomination vice; in its right hand Satan over leaves. It cannot a corpse of two or three days's lingering, waiting for a Christian burial but for eight months, since last mid-summer, it has been rotting in the face of the sun, and a thousand eyes are staring it up, and a thousand goblets are filling it up on exhibitions, and the printing presses are cutting up the loathsome carcass, and making it into mince meat for a savory repast, morning noon and night; and as the periodicals don't turn it on fast enough to satisfy the public appetite, they had to publish it in book form, so that we can carry about with us for a lunch between the morning breakfast and the evening supper of pestilence.

"Brooklyn to-day eats carrion of lies, scandal, talks scandal, swears scandal, lies scandal, sleeps scandal, and from Hades to Paris, to Berlin, and from Genesis to Hunter's point, the city is gorged with scandal and reeks with scandal, and I am tempted to go over to the East Pointers to get a breath of pure air. [Sensation.] "There are a hundred carrion crows. Since alight every morning on the top of the Court-House and stay there until dark in the afternoon, and these carrion crows fly north, east, southland west with an eagle, and rage, roar, say: [Applause.] Eternal God, when will this surging, seething, overwhelming nastiness come to an end? The city needs a thorough fumigation. We all somebody burn a rag [burglar], or carry about a shovel and lighted charcoal, for the stockholders of newspapers, which burn themselves up in one night, for the prophecy eventual bankruptcy or domestic ruin or thunderstorm in the world to come, or all three. God will be even with you in some way. Money made by the publication of these purposeful, pestiferous lies deserves will in the end, be not only death to those who read them, but death to those who print them. God will put it away from you if he has to smear you to as hot as it. Waring no sin man to no be alive by such deeds. Look up and feel out of the [illegible]."

Important Decision to Vessel Owners.

The following is an outline of the case of the Lumbermen's exchange against Judge John Long and other decisions of Judge Treat of Chicago:

Chapt. Long's vessel, loaded with pine, arrives, or some thing out for sale on the market, tied up at the Lumber Exchange dock. She was ordered off, but refused to go where upon she was brought for trespass. The defendant claimed possession with others in the harbor.—Hovey got tied up at the plaintiff's dock, but soon willing within any reasonable time, to move off when the plaintiff should wish to use his dock.

Judge Tree said he confessed that the question raised in this case was to some to be a puzzle and troublesome one, but that it did not know that he should be any more capable doubtless if after taking it under advisement for a week or a month, than he would be at once after hearing the evidence, the arguments of the counsel which had been very full and learned and the production of authorities, which were most all fresh in his mind. The evidence of conflicts on the part of defense, against navigation in the river and allowing vessels to tie to any empty piles was plausible; but after all, there was not much force in the position. If it was conceded that this was a natural port and so recognized under the law, then the vessel is entitled to cast anchor in the stream, and no city ordinance or in any way prevent it, if the attempt to trespassing upon private property. The riparian owner, as is well settled has wharfing rights above the public. He must enjoy such rights or if it is sale for him to expend so much money in improving the banks with docks. If the custom of tying to anyside be good law, there is nothing left to the owner of the wharf or lot. If any vessel owner may tie up to the front of my wharf and remain there a week or a month as well as one hour. The river bank is all private property, and no law can take this right or property from one class of citizens to benefit another; at least without compensation. The navigable [illegible] are upon the water. He has no rights on the land without the consent of the owner. The only side one to lay down was that the vessel owner has no rights along side of a dock without the owners consent.

The defendant was found guilty, and the plaintiff's damages were fixed at six cents.

An Attack Upon Lincoln's Memory.

The recent meeting at Philadelphia which commemorated the fourteenth anniversary of the establishment of the Pennsylvania Anti Slavery Society was an interesting and peculiar gathering. It was not, however, as harmonious as would have loosened such assembling, whose attendants met to congratulate each other and the world upon the success of their efforts, and the final abolition of the sum of all iniquities. Among those who were present were some fiery and belligerent spirits who seem hungry only to wrangle, and who, now that slavery is abolished, must seek food some other way for their pugnacity. Wendell Phillips, one of those malcontents, came for the purpose of her attack the memory of Abraham Lincoln, declaring that she "was announced and stood ready to tear down an idol she possessed in common with her enemies." Pro—as a patron of slaveholders, exaggerating the [illegible] of reverence for the assistance of liberty. It came, and appeared Mrs. Lucy gave way quietly for her charge, so that it was nothing more than the malicious idea of an unscrupulous ingrate more to prejudice them against. It was hardly necessary to call out Vice-President Wilson, as those present did, to resent the attack. The judgement of the people of the whole country concerning the [illegible] was [illegible] Martyr of Liberty [illegible] Detroit Tribune.

Muddy and Sankey.

"How is no hesitation, on hearing about the band, Mr. Moody's earliest request is consistently hopeful and practical one. "Get up more English, dear, that he is going to do it in London," he exclaims, and forthwith without more prelude, he goes out the 100th Psalm, the 16,000 people rise together, and, led by the harmonium sing the grand old tune which all have learned from their childhood. It may be that sullen people that on earth do dwell are objecting unanimously to comply with the request the chorus endure; the admiration is more the less determined, and the wave of sound rolls round and round the building, forming a very ocean of melody such as may scarcely be conceived. Preachers and their people alike throw back their heads and pour out the refrain with heart and soul, and when Mr. Sankey calls for renewed expression in the last verse, the audience makes one more grand effort with tremendous effect. A Mr. Balling now offers a short prayer, and the "revival" service is inaugurated.—London Daily Telegraph.

A "Horse Palace" on Wheels.

The following description is given by the San Francisco Chronicle of the car in which the trotter O'Blennis is to be brought East by Budd Doble: "Down on the wharf is parked a portable bridge for shipping or transhipping horses in a moment's notice, being situated with no danger or trouble whatever. On the inside the conveniences are of the most superior character. There are four portable stalls for horses, two near each end of the car. When it is necessary to be one side or other for the two single stalls can be converted into roomy box stalls; their sides are also cushioned to prevent accident. Every aperture, window, etc., has wire screens to prevent rubbers from entering the car; the arrangements for preventing flies from troubling the horse are also very ingenious and useful. Overhead are conveniences for packing away sulkies. In one corner of the car a stove is carried for the purpose of heating water for the horses feet, as well as for cooking when necessary; also a refrigerator and numerous conveniences that show much ingenuity in their construction. In the center of the car Budd has a perfect gem of a bedroom, fitted up with a mahogany that she "was announced and stood ready to tear down an idol she possessed in common with her enemies." Pro—as a patron of slaveholders, exaggerating the [illegible] of reverence for the assistance of liberty. It came, and appeared Mrs. Lucy gave way quietly for her charge, so that it was nothing more than the malicious idea of an unscrupulous ingrate more to prejudice them against. NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO'S VIBRATOR THRESHER. The BRILLIANT SUCCESS of the Grain-Saving, Time-Saving Thresher, is unprecedented in the annals of Farm Machinery. In a brief period it has become widely known and fully established as the "Leading Threshing Machine."

GRAIN SAVERS BEWARE of worthless and imperfect work of other Threshers, when posted on the vast superiority of this one, for saving grain, saving time, and doing fast, thorough and economical work. Threshermen find it highly advantageous to run a machine that has no "Beaters," "Pickers," or "Apron," that handles Damp Grain, Long straw, Oats or Grass, Timothy, Millet and all such difficult grain and seeds, with entire ease, and perfect success. Cleans to perfection; saves the largest amount of grain; runs easy; takes no "Litterings" requires less than one half the usual belts, Belts, Journals, and Gears; is easier managed; less repairs; one that ranchers prefer to manage and use for their own; runs at less speed, and for these and various reasons, wins over machines are "out of joint." Local News.

Schools commences Monday.

Plenty of clover and timothy seed at Fox, Rose & Buttars'.

Messrs. Daugherty & Carr our Ship Carpenters have come to Elk Rapids to fit out Dexter & Nobles' fleet.

The Odd Fellows of Traverse City are to have a dance at the Campbell House on Monday evening next.

Boyne Falls.—Sunday School will commence again on the first Sunday in May at the railroad station in Boyne Falls.

Town Officers.—Returns from the several Townships are somewhat tardy, and we are unable to give the list this week.

Many Steamboat men express the opinion that Lake Michigan was frozen over about to-day during the months of February and March.

The Norwood highway, which has been the cause of so much turmoil in that township, has been re-surveyed and laid out according to law, with slight variation.

Patent Dredge.—Mr. Morgan is getting up a cheap dredge, to be worked by horses, which promises to be a success, and give us a good channel through both rivers.

Religious.—Rev. Geo. L. Cole will preach to-morrow both morning and evening. A cordial invitation will be given. The evening discourse will be "The position and responsibilities of the young."

Telegraph to Norwood.—Arrangements have been made whereby Norwood is to have a telegraph office this spring, and the telegraph poles are now being got out.

Removal.—R. Holben has removed his shoe shop to the building opposite Fox, Rose & Buttars' store. Denton, the harness maker, has also taken quarters in the same vicinity.

On the War Path.—Capt. Moore's original wife got news that another young "squipson" of a girl was after her—must was," and she was off for South Arm on Thursday to "knock the devil out of the pair of them."

Stalling School.—The ranch has last reached Charlevoix, and is going was appointed for last evening to see who was the champion speller. As a result time of our going to press we are unable to record the result.

Mullenry & Dreshmaking.—Miss Arvilla Sackett, who so satisfactorily taught the lower department of our village school the past winter, has leased the old bakery building of Harry Newman, and will start a millinery and dressmaking establishment.

Henry, an Antrim county character, who figured in our Justice Court some time ago, was in town this week, hard up, and made several fruitless attempts to borrow money from Justice Miller and sheriff Aldrich, as damages for the alleged "false imprisonment" of two years ago. He went home disappointed.

Town Outs.—Some one entered Ed Lewis' barn one night lately at the lone hour of midnight, to find out the cause of a light that was seen glimmering through the cracks, and found the fire sitting on a pork measure, five chin in his hands, and his lantern down in his feet, gazing at it mirrorly upon his black pennies. They are nice cons.

Docks Injured.—In a letter to A. Buttars of this place, Rev. J. M. Whitney states that during the late storm fifty feet of the bridge part of the Gun Laten dock was carried away by the ice. Also fifty feet on the outer end of stonman's dock at Glen Arbor was carried away. Keiser, Inner dock at Port Oneida was badly damaged.

Arson.—After having been burned out four times, Louis Marcan in quite unfortunately escaped a conflagration on Monday morning. Mr. Dixon discovered fire issuing from the roof and hastened to the spot when he found the old chief still in bed, and his family by the fire preparatory to any impending danger. The fire was promptly extinguished.

Carpenter & Bartholomew have just received a large stock of boots and shoes. Call and see them.

Homestead.—The rush for homesteads in the vicinity of Petoskey was so great that [illegible] of the applicants were turned landless. Parties who sought homesteads in this vicinity were more fortunate and nearly every one secured the land of their selection and got homesteads in good locality. Among the lucky ones are S. M. Sto. I. S. Webster, Wm. Custer, W. S. Johnson, Albert Bisson, H. B. Hice, John Inose, Levi House, J. Ingalls of this village located 160 acres within two miles of Petoskey.

The Business Outlook.

Our people were satisfied, and even contented by the coal shipping business last season, as if their hopes for a increase depended entirely upon the chances for an appropriation. This being settled so, the prospects for the season looked gloomy indeed. But, notwithstanding the discouragements from the late panic and the disheartening uncertainty as to the prospective accessibility of the rivers, the Point Lake contractors the coming season will considerably overreach that of last season.

This prospect is indeed flattering when we consider that the land for the season's business has accumulated, not as a result of the united energy of our people, or the introduction of any new capital or labor, but has been, rather, produced under disadvantageous, unfinancial energies, and a spirit of caution.

During the winter days were entertained that the channels had to a certain degree filled up; and not until quite lately has their condition become known. An examination shows that the lower river is seen to better condition than last fall, and steps are being taken to widen it somewhat and make a depth of eight or nine feet. The upper rivers are not in as good condition at when left last fall, but by an effort—this part of them is needed, and with machinery that can be put to practical use at short notice, the channel can be put in good condition again.

The material to be shipped from this port the coming season is about as follows: Henry Morgan has about 1,200 cords of maple wood; 15,000 cedar posts; 2,000 railroad ties, and 1,000 telegraph poles. Besides this, he will contract for 3,000 cords, or more, of hemlock bark. Other parties will contract for large quantities of the same commodity. The mill company will ship nearly 1,000,000 feet of lumber and the propeller wood scows will be about the same as last season. The prospects to-day next fall promises to be livelier than ever, and undoubtedly the aggregate business of the season will exceed what we have here predicted.

Plows, drag teeth and farming tools, at Fox, Rose & Buttars'.

An Example or Energy.—In another article will be found a brief statement of the business of Henry Morgan, Esq., of this place. To those who have known Mr. Morgan for the past five years this exhibit can only appear as a proof of the most remarkable energy and perseverance. During his residence here he has been a steady [illegible] through misfortunes [illegible] through adverse circumstances, under which most men would have sought a more profitable field. But Mr. Morgan remained and will, and the country as we hoped, to be benefited in the future by his energy and public spirit. And we are glad to note the fact that the coming season's business promises very favorable for him. We would be glad to see a score of such men located here among us.

Quick sales and small profits is the motto of Fox, Rose & Buttars'.

Bayes Bluff.—The subject of a breakwater bond for Charlevoix, which has been agitated considerably during the winter, has at last culminated in definite action, and which we believe may result in a favorable consummation. We consider the movement encouraging, and if based on consultation with the principal movers, we find that they "mean business." Nearly enough money has been subscribed to guarantee the harmonious for a bond to the amount of $10,000, and the work will be pushed to completion with commendable energy. Capitalists are ready to invest in the project, and all interests are to be benefited by the improvement. Let the work go on.

Bayes Falls.—Sunday School will commence again on the first Sunday in May at the railroad station in Bayes Falls.

Town Officers.—Returns from the several Townships are somewhat tardy, and we are unable to give the list this week.

Many Steamboat men express the opinion that Lake Michigan was frozen over about to-day during the months of February and March.

The Norwood highway, which has been the cause of so much turmoil in that township, has been re-surveyed and laid out according to law, with slight variation.

Patent Dredge.—Mr. Morgan is getting up a cheap dredge, to be worked by horses, which promises to be a success, and give us a good channel through both rivers.

Religious.—Rev. Geo. L. Cole will preach to-morrow both morning and evening. A cordial invitation will be given. The evening discourse will be "The position and responsibilities of the young."

Telegraph to Norwood.—Arrangements have been made whereby Norwood is to have a telegraph office this spring, and the telegraph poles are now being got out.

Removal.—R. Holben has removed his shoe shop to the building opposite Fox, Rose & Buttars' store. Denton, the harness maker, has also taken quarters in the same vicinity.

On the War Path.—Capt. Moore's original wife got news that another young "squipson" of a girl was after her—must was," and she was off for South Arm on Thursday to "knock the devil out of the pair of them."

Stalling School.—The ranch has last reached Charlevoix, and is going was appointed for last evening to see who was the champion speller. As a result time of our going to press we are unable to record the result.

Mullenry & Dreshmaking.—Miss Arvilla Sackett, who so satisfactorily taught the lower department of our village school the past winter, has leased the old bakery building of Harry Newman, and will start a millinery and dressmaking establishment.

Henry, an Antrim county character, who figured in our Justice Court some time ago, was in town this week, hard up, and made several fruitless attempts to borrow money from Justice Miller and sheriff Aldrich, as damages for the alleged "false imprisonment" of two years ago. Gay Dresser.—A friend in [illegible] Rapids sends the following joke on brother [illegible] of this [illegible] "Dead Fun" day the evening since one of them on Lyde [illegible] Progress man, Gobelsinger, and a bottle goes on the face, woods stretched down one to ear, adjourned to Dexter & Noble's dam to have a little fun on the logs floating at most thereby. Dan man of the quiet felt quite at home over log, having been there before, and made several attempts to capsize his less companions. At last apparently satisfied he had a good chance, if no unforseen accident had not occurred to him, just at starting, which prevent very much to his disadvantage, he [illegible] his feet on the water, head [illegible] The quick resolution made by him somewhat stopped his breath, so that he could not use the [illegible] he succeeded in fishing himself out at last, saying as he landed on terra firma, "some Dan's say anything is gas." But after his attempt to ridicule the late adventures of the Queen catamaran, I thought it but fair that this little comedy enacted by him should be shared by the public."

Marine News.

Jas. Hollen has the little schooner Pearl repainted and the canvas spread her, ready for business as soon as the ice leaves.

—Ice as far as the eye can reach, and no sign still unfavorable for navigation.

—Capt. Moss got up steam on the Janet on Tuesday and brought her around to Buttars' dock, when work continues in painting and fitting up her machinery.

—Tug Government has advertised for proposals to construct the following stations on Lake Michigan as follows:—At Chicago, Beaver Island, North Manitou Island, Point Aux Bec Scies, Grand Point au Sable, Grand Haven, St. Joseph, Grosse Point, Racine, Milwaukee, Sheboygan and Twin River Point.

—At Grand Haven.—A telegram of the 18th says: There is about five miles of broken ice obstructing the entrance to our harbor. The steamer Ansonia after staying outside of it all yesterday afternoon, succeeded in reaching the dock at eleven o'clock last night. The steamers Minneapolis and Harmon started for Milwaukee early this morning, and got through the ice easily.

—The Bee Wane.—The engines have been taken out of this vessel, and she presents a generally dilapidated appearance. It is thought that she will be converted into a barge.

—Muskegon Lake is open and the propeller Mississippi has taken one cargo from Muskegon.

—A Good Record.—The Goodrich line which is now in operation between Grand Haven and Chicago has been running fifteen years without a single personal disaster to a passenger.

☞ A Sioux City special says that a large excitement at the Bone agency and against that the Indians had surrounded the officers in the Black Hills and endeavored to burn their stockade, but were unsuccessful; they killed and scalped one member who was away from the stockade. The Government troops reached the party and took them from the Indians.

"Silk," said the accountant familiarly to a reporter who had just had cup forced for the seventh time, "you must be very fond of [illegible] This afternoon, I am to propose, and I should never have drank so much water to get a drink."

Andy Johnson relieved us this that he expects no [illegible] for the payment of $10,000 and says that since the failure of Jay Cooke & Co. by which he lost about $30,000 he has never had money enough to pay for an overcoat at the present rates.

Loans to Royal Pretenders.

As I have communicated to you already the ex Empress Eugenie has again made a loan of 12,500,000 francs—that is, she has received this sum on the promise that it will be paid back after the accession of her son to the throne. The former loans made by her amounts to several on the Bourse. The obligations are printed on yellow paper, and have a nominal value of 100 francs. They are issued at 90 francs. After the expulsion of Don Carlos the value of this scrip rose from 10 to 20 francs. This is naturally to be expected in the case. The Carlist loan circulates also much on the Bourse here. Each subscription of this loan is 2,000 francs or about $400. Four francs have been paid. After Don Carlos's retirement to the throne, 10 francs were said to be paid on each obligation, and the bearer of it is to receive the 2,000 francs, Spanish stock according to the quotation of the day. It must be said for the French Republicans and the Spanish Bourbonists that they knew how to turn their countries to advantage even before creeping the throne.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Gazette.

A Big Wheat Farm.

A sacramento paper says that Dr. Hugh J. Glenn, of Colusa county, California, has raised and harvested the past season on his own farm 1,000,000 bushels of wheat. This would load fifteen 1,000-ton ships or three hundred canal boats. All this wheat he has now in his own warehouse, ready for shipment when the water of the Sacramento river rises sufficiently. The Doctor is a wonder to the agricultural world and to himself. He runs ninety gang plows and a whole county's population in the harvest field, with a dozen threshers. His feeding is not confined to wheat alone. He markets $100,000 worth of stock each year. Dr. Glenn is a practical farmer, and manages all his business himself. He can travel a mile and more to any point on his vast landed possessions, and keeps a keen eye on every detail of his enterprises, which he oversees every day in the year. Dr. Glenn was born in Augusta county, Va., and was honor to the "Old Dominion."

Peeling a Doughnut.

Hugh Henry, a former President of the Vermont Valley railroad, while attending a session of the legislature remarked to a friend that he was a little deaf but could see as well as ever. He afterwards went to the hotel for dinner, stuck his fork into a doughnut, and commenced to peel it, supposing it to be a potato. Meade, the sculptor, being a witness of the "spirited scene," retired and produced a life-like sketch of Mr. Henry while in the act of peeling the doughnut, and underneath was the following description:

"I am a little deaf, but can see as well as ever."

A flea weighs less than a grain, and leaps a yard and a half. Were a man of one hundred and fifty pounds weight possessed of equivalent agility, he could spring from the dome of the Capitol at Washington to China in a single leap.

A negro lawyer is gaining an immense reputation at Richmond, Texas, having thus far won a suit in every case he has undertaken.

One of the latest European scandals is to the effect that the Princess Sophia, youngest sister of the Empress of Austria, and wife of the Duke d'Alencon, an Orleans Prince, has fled to the United States with a Bavarian photographer, with whom she has long been infatuated. She had, previous to her last case with Alencon, been engaged to King Louis II of Bavaria, but the match was broken off on account of scandalous stories in which the same photographer was involved.

A young man employed in a concert saloon, while engaged in cutting cheese for lunch, happened to cut some of the slices too thick and others too thin. This was noticed by the proprietor, a Dutchman, who, approaching the young man, reprimanded him in the following manner: "By Dame, hasn't you got more eyesight as dat? One is nothing, and de oder is a little more."

POETRY.

LOSSES.

Upon the white sea sand
There sat a pilgrim band,
Telling the dead days' beads, lives had known,
While evening waned away
From the lone bay.
And the strong tides went out with a weary moan.

One told his vanished youth,
Its life, its love, its truth,
With all that changed to the deep gone down.
One had but wept a woe,
Like blighted flowers long ago,
Lost in the darkness of a great town.

There were some who mourned each
With Which
Yet the
And one upon the West
Looked out with sunset eyes, and knew not rest,
For far off, where its joy had been

Some spoke of friends that were their trust
Some
And one Would
That none
But when their tales were done,
There spoke among them one,
A stranger sitting in all sorrow free;
And lo, we knew by Him,
By wounds on hands and feet,
By His deep voice and sweet,
It was the Lord Himself that came to me.

"Go!" those pilgrims said,
"For the spring and the dead,
For the [illegible] for lands more cruel,
For the wrongs of land and sea,
But now ever it come to thee—
Tarry, stranger, neither a lost and heaviest loss."

SELECTED.

A Strange Story.

It is a little more than nineteen years since a laborer, wandering over Hampstead Heath—a favorite piece of popular resort near London—found a man lying dead on the rise of a small mound in a spot which seemed to have been carefully selected. By his side were a bottle half filled with "tincture of prussic acid" and a case of razors. Among other articles on his person was a piece of paper on which was plainly written, "John Sadlier, Gentleman, aged 45 years, Hyde Park." The event at first produced surprise and consternation, but these emotions quickly gave way to others of a widely different character. It was very long time it became too evident that Mr. Sadlier had ample cause to make away with himself, if the pangs of conscience and the dread of the awful exposure could do so. The latter was most remarkable. A native of Tipperary, in the middle class of life, Sadlier was admitted an attorney at the age of twenty-three, but having obtained the agency of the [illegible] Land Corporation and other nobleman, he rose from the position of a [illegible] to that of an important functionary. In 1847 he contrived to get a seat in Parliament as member for Carlow, and in 1852 was appointed by Lord Aberdeen to a post in the Treasury which was a mine of great wealth, but of still greater temptation. So long as he was content to stick to what he understood, he succeeded; but there came a time when he began dabbling in speculations which were beyond the range of his experience, and these brought him to grief. One of his chief objects was to buy [illegible] in Incumbered Estates Court, in the hope of the rise which he correctly anticipated would in a few years take place in Irish property, and it was mainly by the [illegible] to which he resorted to raise money for this end which caused him to plunge into a dozen schemes which unfitted him for the rut of himself and all connected with him.

It was a remarkable circumstance in connection with this case that almost from the first the people of Ireland never believed in the identity of Sadlier with the body found on the heath. Nor were the detectives exempt in Ireland, or to the uncultured. There were undoubtedly circumstances in the case which tended to invite the suspicion that it might have been the body of another man. The accounts of the proceedings at the inquest are strangely silent as to the satisfactory identification of the body, and the piece of paper with "John Sadlier" on it in the pocket of the deceased prevented inquiries.

The body was found early on a Sunday morning, a circumstance which suggested to some minds that a day would thus be likely to elapse before much stir took place in the matter. And the sum of £1,300 in notes and cash paid to Sadlier on the day before, could never in any way be traced or accounted for. There was a disposition on the part of the Coroner to bring the inquest to a close before the dark doings of the deceased had been hinted at, and there were those who, when doubts began to be freely raised, recalled the fact that the Coroner himself was a man against whom grave charges had been brought, and who was reputed to have been intimate with Sadlier.

Another strange circumstance subsequently ascertained was that, while the ground at the head was muddy, the boots on the feet of the corpse were quite clean on the other hand, an examination revealed the presence in the stomach of essential oil of almonds. The theory of those who believe that the body was not that of this great defrauder is that a body was procured by him and his friends in some mysterious manner, and that he treated to the assistance of those whom he knew would attend the inquest, and the notorious fact that death does change a man's appearance sometimes in such a manner as to render him almost unrecognizable, to complete one more fraud. Wild as these conjectures may appear, there are cases on record almost sufficient to justify them and only last month there arose an instance to point.

A few weeks ago there was found in the river Avon, in Somersetshire, a woman whose remains bore marks of violence. An inquest was held and adjourned. In reopening the inquiry the Coroner commented upon the strange case of mistaken identity which had occurred in connection with the case. "In the course of their inquiries the Bath police met with a woman who stated that the description of the deceased corresponded with the appearance of a woman who had been living with a bargeman, and between whom there had been a violent disagreement at Bath previous to their departure for Bristol. The woman was taken by the police to see the body and, after a minute examination, which extended to a scrutiny of the teeth, she positively stated that the deceased was the woman referred to. This identification was positive, and was singularly correct both in general and in detail; and the woman's testimony would have been unhesitatingly placed before the jury for their acceptance but for one circumstance—the simple fact that the woman was found alive. The lesson of such an occurrence was extreme caution should be taken by juries in accordance of evidence of identification." — N. Y. Sun.

THE BROOKLYN DUEL.

Fullerton and Beecher Arrayed Against Each Other.

Says the New York World of Saturday last: The fame of Mr. Fullerton's cross examinations has gone over the land, but they look very easy in the doing. Having the progress of events, apart from his special branch of the work, he works hard watching everything over his eyeglasses in a quiet tenacious fashion, making copious notes, and consulting the scrapbooks which do duty as a record busily and with a totally unrevealing face. His head looks [illegible] and gray-red and hard. A thin nose, and a thin, curling crop of short hair, half gray, half tow color, hangs to the arid soil of his scalp like chickenoss on New Hampshire granite. As for the contour of his face, it is redeemed from heaviness only by sharp angles of the skull and the square, bull-dog chin. It is gray usually, but tun or the noise of debate when he is a contributor, floods it with blood, and the lawyer is half the time as red as the witness whose facial coloring has been construed by many commentator into guilt, innocence, remorse, perspexity, grief, anger, indignation, influenza and over-eating. The eyes are sharp and restless, flitting everywhere inquiringly, but looking out of an impassive, iron face. He cross examines like lightning, with a biting peremptory imperative voice, but it does not look in the least as if the square, stout man in black had anything to do with the voice. For the most part, he might be a lay figure, with a sharp ear and the gift of a speaking trumpet among the clothes. The lay figure faces to the window at the right, and asks a question, which Mr Fleecher rightly infers is meant for him and answers. Before the last word of his answer is out the lay figure, with its nose pointed at Judge Neilson has given mysterious birth to another question. Then it faces the jury box, and another question comes apparently from its right ear. Then the machine takes on full human semblance however, when a hot issue, is raised between cross examiner and witness, as often happens when Mr. Beecher is testifying. Lawyers of a certain age are generally stoop-shouldered. Mr. Fullerton's head stares forward when he gets on a point as if it were bent to leave the body. Then he looks squarely and firmly at the witness, though the grimness is the positive grimness of feature, and by no means due to a change in expression. His eyes look as if they wanted to get away and go and sit in the witness' lap, and the head is ready to follow and bring its teeth along—a hard iron head and a jaw that looks as if it would bite hard. This is the pantomime merely. The intense energy and marvelous deftness and rapidity of the examination, after Mr. Evarts' dry and unready manner, wakes the court room up. In short, it is just as much "fun" to hear Mr. Fullerton ask questions as to hear Mr. Beecher answer them, and the duel is something that a great many people would willingly pay money to buy tickets to. The wiry alertness and accuracy, and the far-sighted clearness as to the consequences of any apparently isolated proposition, are a revelation wholly unexpected from the outward appearance of the cross examiner. Great things are generally expected of Mr. Beecher, and as a witness he fulfills the expectation.

St. Peter and the Brooklynite.

They are telling the story, since Dr. Talmage's sermon, that a Brooklyn resident, name not given, appeared at the gate St. Peter guards, for admission to Paradise. The saint turned to the register pages: "Where are you from?" "Brooklyn." "I don't think we can admit you; rules very strict. In fact can't do it. Think of that scandal." It is said that the Brooklyn man looked steadily at Peter and crowed three times. His saintship colored, fumbled his key a minute, and then said: "Well, you can go in; but don't you do that again to me."

Tilton on Beecher.

But I intended to tell you about my interview with Tilton. I asked him what he thought of Beecher's testimony.

"This is not an interview?" he inquired.

"No, not exactly; I suppose I am at liberty to state generally how you regard Mr. Beecher's version of the case."

"Well, I hardly know myself," replied Tilton. "The man's coolness is audacious, I must say; and as for Moulton, he is so thunderstruck at the testimony that I can't get him to say a word on the subject. He keeps saying: 'The perjurer! the perjurer. My God! how can the man lie so?'

"He tells a plausible story," I continued.

"Mr. Beecher tells everything plausibly. If his interest prompted him he could give a dozen different colorings to the same interview, and all would be plausible. His plausible grief won me; it captivated Elizabeth; it made Moulton his friend; it rallied to him the generous sympathy of Mrs Moulton; it called into play the inventive mind of Frank Carpenter, as noble a fellow as a man will meet in a day's journey. Mr Beecher is plausible to Mrs. Woodhull in his free love theories. He is plausible when he preaches orthodoxy, or universalism, his anecdotes, his tears, his jests are plausible; and Tilton paused after his hot, ironical outburst.

Presently he continued; "Is it likely that he would have written, 'I have trusted this in confidence with Moulton,' without informing him of concerning its contents? Is it like Mr. Beecher, or any sane man, to place the written seal of his approval on an important document, knowing that it is vitally significant, and endorsing it without informing himself as to its precise nature? You know something of the man. Have you not always found him cautious, wary, and awake to the full measure of the significance of passing events?"

Long and earnestly Tilton talked in this vein, going over much of the case, pointing out discrepancies in the evidence of the great defendant and his witnesses, indicating the weak points in the defense as it has been developed, and promising an army of evidence to rebutal that will surprise everybody, even if one half the plaintiff's predictions are verified. Martin Bradshaw will have a story to tell, and Frank Carpenter and Joseph H. Richards and Henry C. Bowen and Rev. Dr. Storrs have some important revelations to make. Section writes Journal and his entire conviction go far toward proving Tilton's sincerity in such that he did in the days when the scandal carrion began to hover over Brooklyn.

The Martyrs to Truth.

When we remember how hard it has always been to establish a new principle, or even introduce a new thought to the public mind; how many centuries of discussion have been required to eradicate ingrained errors, uproot inborn prejudices, and change long-cherished opinions, and how fierce and bloody have been the struggles between new truths and old errors in all ages; and when we see how rapidly at the present time new doctrines, new arts, new sciences and new systems in all departments of human research, involving all the relations and all the interests of human beings, are "bursting into birth," how can we help desiring to remain yet a little longer on this beautiful fool-stool, unless we are sick and miserable? By the way, the sick and miserable are generally more afraid and more unwilling to die (morbid "cowardness" and "vitallyness") than are the healthy and happy. It is the persons who have the most to live for—who most to give and the least to get—who are the most ready to die, other things being equal. These are the martyrs to truth and the saviors of mankind. But the world knows them not. The world is still too prone to applaud its deceivers and reward its destroyers, while it prosecutes its teachers and crucifies its saviors.

Socrates conceived the idea of the immortality of the soul. He offered to give to the world what he regarded as a new truth, and the world put him to death. Confucius taught the upper and lower classes of China that their interests were mutual, and both classes repudiated him. Tycho Brahe, Galileo and Servetus advanced what they sincerely believed to be important truths, and ex conservatrix burnt them at the stake. A greater than all of these taught the people to do to others as they would have others do unto them, and for this He was crucified between two thieves. How strange that in all ages differences of opinion which are unavoidable, have been punished with more severity than have vices and crimes, which are voluntary!—Science of Health.

To pump water for Chicago costs 6 mills per 100 gallons. Boston pays 30 mills for the same amount; Baltimore and New York 15 mills each, and San Francisco 50 to 100 mills. These figures are gathered by the Chicago Journal.

A RISING DANGER.

The Roman Catholic War Upon the Secular Schools.

From the New York Times.

It is a remarkable thing that the United States is the only country advancing in civilization where the great reform of secularizing the schools is likely to be abandoned,—that is, if people do not show a little more interest in the subject than they have lately displayed.

In all European liberal countries, where there are two or more religious parties, the first movement is always to make the schools secular. In Italy, many of the church foundations have already been appropriated to the use of the state, and many of the schools have to-day become secular. The cry of the liberal party in Italy is "free schools, a free church, a free state." In Germany, since the various provinces and kingdoms have become united under one imperial head, the great object of the liberal and patriotic party is to remove the schools from the control both of the Protestant and Catholic clergy. In Prussia the whole school system has been considered part and parcel of the church. In the Catholic provinces, and the Catholic countries of Germany the Romanist Clergy had undisputed sway over the early training of the children. All this the liberal party have determined to break up; they will have education entirely secular, and no priestly hand placed by force of law upon the youthful training of German children.

In England, again, owing to the many shades of religious opinion, and the claims of various sects and churches, the view is becoming more and more general in the liberal party that the best course, in forming the new national system of education, will be to make it entirely secular. They would not refuse aid to, in the present condition of affairs, to religious bodies requiring assistance for their schools, but in forming new schools they would, as much as possible, throw out the banner of "education free and secular."

Now, in these countries there is no objection among the liberal parties to teaching religion as such or to combining instruction in religion with general education. They all believe religion to be one of the moral safeguards of society: They hold the private family, the individual church or the Sabbath-school, are the places where its sacred truths can be best inculcated. Religion, if taught in public school becomes mere formalism, or the [illegible] which originated, as well for the future of the republic would desire to put the plastic mind of our youth under the hand of a Catholic priest. We know perfectly well that the experience of all countries shows that such instruction is a means of degrading the intellect and debasing the manhood of the youthful scholar. It teaches him to bow to principles which are opposed to all the notions of all modern progress. We believe the proposed attempt to put a portion of our public schools under the control of the priests to be full of danger to the liberties of this country, and we earnestly exhort all who have any share in our public education to be exceedingly cautious how they, in the slightest degree, impair the system which has thus far been so successful and so truly impartial.

Job Dowling's Funeral.

Many years ago I was one of a party in Washington city, when Smith and North vied with each other in convivial life. Another of the party was Gen. Dawson, member from Western Pennsylvania, whose homestead was Albert Gallatin's old home. He was an admirable story-teller. I recall somewhat sadly, now that he is gone, how well he illustrated the laziness of a class of Virginians. The story was a part of his Congressional canvassing. On one occasion he got across the Pennsylvania line into a little village of Virginia. He was in the midst of a group around the tavern. While treating and talking, a procession approached, which looked like a funeral. He asked who was to be buried.

"Job Dowling," said they.

"Poor Job!" sighed the General. He was a good-natured, good-for-nothing, lazy fellow, living on the few fish he caught and the squirrels he killed, but mostly on the donations of his neighbors.

"So poor Job is dead, is he?"

"No, he ain't dead exactly," said they.

"Not dead—not dead! Yet you are going to bury him?"

"Fact is, General, he has got too infernal lazy to live. We can't afford him any more. He's got so lazy that the grass began to grow over his shoes—so devilishing lazy that he put out one of his eyes to save the trouble of winking when out a-gonning."

"But," says the General, "this must not be. It will disgrace my neighborhood: Try him awhile longer, can't you?"

"Can't; too late—coffin cost $1 25. Must go on now."

About this time the procession came up and halted, when the General proposed, if they would let Job out, he would send over a bag of corn. On this announcement the lid of the coffin opened and Job hurriedly sat up; the cents dropped from from his eyes as he asked:

"Is the corn shelled, General?"

"No, not shelled."

"Then," said Job, as he lazily lay down, "go on with the funeral!"—Hon. S. S. Cox, in Harper's Magazine.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - - MAY 1, 1875

☞ The Detroit Free Press proposes that we all chip in and raise a handsome sum for the Hosford physician who says that it is unhealthy to rise before the sun has dispelled the morning fogs.

☞ A New York highwayman has been sent to prison for twenty years for robbing a man of eight dollars. Toward, wholesale by the hundreds of thousands, went up for only twelve years.

☞ "The Clam Jake News says:—"Pog leg Days," a gambler some what known in this vicinity, is in limbo at Grand Rapids. He thinks the world owes him a living and to keep him in jail or in the house of correction is about as cheap a way to satisfy his claim as any.

☞ The Detroit Tribune of the 20th contains reports from all parts of the State in regard to the wheat crop and fruit prospects. The summing up shows that wheat has been severely injured by cold and drought. In all parts of the State peaches are represented as "badly killed."

☞ The bill repealing the compulsory education law of this State, which has for four years occupied a place upon our statute books, lost has excited no other effect upon our public school system, has been passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor. It is simply a case of the Christian burial of a still born child.

☞ A genial, bald headed gentleman, while in Paris, went one day to the Zoological Gardens. The weather was warm, and he laid down on a bench. Presently he fell asleep, and he was aroused by a warmth about the head. An instinct of enrich had come along, and mistaking his bald head for an egg, settled down with the determined resolution to hatch it.

☞ One hundred years ago the 19th, the grass was green and the trees were in full leaf, the minute men of Lexington and Concord were summoned from their plows and many came in their shirt-sleeves to hunt Pitcairn's Hoosic back to Boston. But the centennial day was one of raw and leaden cold northeasters. The magnificent uncertainty of our climate is strikingly shown in this contrast.

☞ The Pope has fresh trouble at his very doors. This is nothing less than a really serious ecclesiastical revolt on the part of a large number of Roman Catholic parishioners in Poland. Not less than forty five, including 50,000 people, united by some harsh orders from the Vatican, have gone over bodily to the rival Greek Church and been formally admitted thereto, by order of the Russian Emperor, with a great ceremony at Hielk.

☞ The preparations for conferring the barretts on Cardinal McCloskey are almost completed. The programme for the religious ceremonies is very elaborate. At the conclusion of high mass the Alderate will take the scarlet barretta and present it to Archbishop Bailey, of Baltimore, who will perform the ceremony. He will deliver an address, which will be replied to by the cardinal, after which a choir of 100 voices will sing the Te Deum. The Cardinal will then retire, and after putting on the robes of the cardinalate, will receive the sanctuary and give the episcopal benediction.

☞ Parson Brown sez is after Andy Johnson with a packed stick. He charges that Kelley elected Senator from Tennessee by committing acts of interference with the sovereign States as unwarrantable as only charged upon Grant in his great Louisiana speech, and says he had the effrontery to endeavor to throw dust and bully the parson and the loyal majority of the Legislature into acquiescence in that unfavorable direction known as "party." It is needless to say that Andy's little game did not work.

☞ A man in Baltimore called on a gravedigger one day to have his wife's grave nobbed. He was an extremely pe curious man and lingered a long time over the grave of the sodding. Suddenly he noticed that while his eyes were fixed on a neighboring tombstone. His daughter and the gravedigger stood back in respect for the feelings of the old gentleman, to whose mind the sight of the name of the oldest had called up the memory of a dear departed friend, the grief was deepened on his countenance, and he was evidently agitated. At length the gravedigger, which evoked his broom could resist no longer, and he was overcome with the pathetic utterance: "My Hoss! How did that man die? He owes me two hundred dollars and I'll never see a cent of it!

☞ Le Monde maintains that we observed with unusually imposing ceremonies. The corner stone of the Washington monument was laid. In his speech Gen. Evans said: "Let us do nothing to keep alive the passions of the war. To study its lessons is prudence. To profit by its teachings is wisdom, but to stir up old sentiments is madness. The voice of this monument will say to the far war, but peace. It will say to us the Confederates has expired. Its great life went out on the purple tide of blood that flowed from the heart of its sons. We raise herself it. Washington intended to restore its manes. We are ready and glad to do so. Glory to our countrymen's ashes. We united with our brethren of some of state which we had lowed through many storms of shot and shell, but we take off the nine hundred South in honor. He said that bonds the stars and stripes. I respond with the truest feelings to the fraternal words of Gen. Hartlett spoken at the centennial of the first battle of the old revolution."

The inevitable squabble over a rich uncle's will has begun in Detroit. Mr. E. H. Ward died a few months ago leaving a fortune of $5,000,000, and the funeral was hardly over before the heirs began to quarrel about the bequests. One relative who had received $700,000, said he deserved more than a third amount, and gave notice that he would contest the will. The latest move is a combined one by the widow and some of the other heirs and consists of a petition to the Michigan Legislature for an amendment to the present arrangement by the general law now in force for the settlement of estates, so as to do away with the special administrator who may now be appointed to take until it is settled and carried, to give the executors control. The petition recites the proposed change in the law, and as a powerful lobby is enlisted on both sides, a bitter contest is anticipated.

The Third Term Question.

For some two years past most persistent efforts have been made by the enemies of the Republican party to create the impression in the public mind that President Grant desires a third term. These efforts have not been altogether in vain. As unexchanged says there is an honest belief that the President favors his own renomination.

Whether there is any occasion for this feeling or not, it is certain that it exists. And it is equally certain that those who entertain them have any apprehension that if the President desires a renomination no influence will be sufficient to secure it.

That the third term idea is absolutely unfavorable influence in the elections of last fall we do not doubt in the least. That the failure of the Connecticut convention to declare emphatically against a third term was one cause of our recent defeat in that State, is quite probable. Had Connecticut adopted a platform similar to that on which the New Hampshire Republicans won so decisive a victory, it is not unreasonable to believe that the result of the election would have been much more favorable.

What the President's views in regard to the third term are we do not know. It would seem, however, that if he has no aspirations in that direction he would long before this have found some way to convince the public of the fact. We can see no indelicacy in a public avowal of an

How the Earth Grows in Size.

The assertion that the earth is increasing in size is nothing new or amazing. Mr. Henry Peterson, in Peterson's Journal, attempts in many ways to account for the new stones, and devotes considerable space to discussion of the causes. First, plants are found from air and water, the earth, as experiments have shown, losing little, but much they draw the earth gains. The dark color of the moss is owing to the carbon which the earth has wrested from the air by means of vegetation.

The large beds of coal, peat, etc., are elements captured from the atmosphere in past ages and [illegible]. Also, the ocean abounds in corals and countless shell-bearing animal which are extracting carbonic and other elements from the water and leaving them in the forms of shells and coral rocks so that the bed of the ocean is constantly filling up with solid matter. One striking effect is the growth of continents, as Mr. Peterson estimates, by rapid disappearance and rise, mass of coast—The walls of Babylon, according to Herodotus, formed a square of 60 miles, and were over 300 feet high and 75 feet broad. The ruins of Babylon are 20 feet under the present surface of the earth. Ancient Rome is from 10 to 20 feet under modern Rome, and ancient Troy, is from 20 to 30 feet under the surface of the ground. In spite of clerical watchers and shutting their accumulations as a deserted town, and at any rate of deposit the filling of a room is only a question of time. Mr Peterson says hopefully:

"As the consumption of the carbonic acid gas and much vapors of the carbonaceous period prepare the earth for a higher order of existence, so the precipitation of our atmosphere is still going on. The air may be becoming well charged with a purer and rarer quality, and thus insensibly affecting for good the physical and spiritual constitution of the race. Philosophers of the future's school might even argue that the world would be the disadvantage of a denser and more extensive atmosphere, as it is the basis of such a change in the temper and spirit of our race. So that world's in growth in all that is material, artistic and spiritual gives—so that peace and fraternal love may increase as the great law of the world, and the nations know poverty and learn war no more. Thus may come the millennial period, which nature shall harmonize with it sober sire and milder skies."

NOTICE.

U. S. Internal Revenue
SPECIAL TAXES
May 1, 1875, to April [illegible]

The Revised Statutes of the United States relating to Special Taxes, as amended by the act of Congress approved March 3, 1875, and by subsequent acts, have been compiled and published in a pamphlet, which may be obtained from any Collector of Internal Revenue. The following is a synopsis of the provisions of the law above quoted so far as they relate to the business of retail dealers in liquors and tobacco:

Every person who sells, or offers for sale, distilled spirits, wines, or malt liquors, in quantities of five gallons or more at one time, is a wholesale dealer in liquors, and must pay a special tax of $25 per annum.

Every person who sells, or offers for sale, distilled spirits, wines, or malt liquors, in quantities of less than five gallons at one time, is a retail dealer in liquors, and must pay a special tax of $20 per annum.

Every person who sells, or offers for sale, manufactured tobacco, snuff, or cigars, is a dealer in manufactured tobacco, and must pay a special tax of $5 per annum.

Every person who manufactures tobacco, snuff, or cigars, is a manufacturer of tobacco, and must pay a special tax of $10 per annum.

Every person who sells leaf tobacco in quantities of more than 100 pounds at one time, is a dealer in leaf tobacco, and must pay a special tax of $25 per annum.

Every person who manufactures tobacco, snuff, or cigars, by the use of any steam power, or any machine other than such as is used exclusively by hand, is a manufacturer of tobacco, and must pay a special tax of $50 per annum.

Every person who sells, or offers for sale, any of the articles mentioned in the above quoted section of the law, without having paid the special tax therein required, is liable to a penalty of not less than $50 nor more than $500.

Every person who carries on any business, trade, or profession mentioned in the above quoted section of the law, without having paid the special tax therein required, is liable to a penalty of not less than $50 nor more than $500.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - MAY. 8. 1875.

☞ Sunday got $135,000 for its interest in the Toledo Blade.

☞ The largest circular saw in the world is in use at Trenton, New Jersey. It is seven feet four inches in diameter.

☞ They are beginning to find Charley Rosses again. The last one was seen tramping through Germany with a fortune teller.

☞ Benjamin Franklin said, "It is hard for an empty bag to stand upright." Some men find it equally difficult even when they are pretty full.

☞ Carl Schurz will sit down to something to eat (by request of his friends) in New York on the 27th, and on the 29th will sail for Europe.

☞ The Washington monument is to be finished so that foreign visitors may not see the exhibition of forgetfulness and neglect. It only wants $300 000

☞ It is stated that 500 men have started for the Black Hills from Sioux City and vicinity, and that these on the way from other localities number 1,000.

☞ Beecher on hash: "This trial has been like hash to me. You know hash is very good occasionally, but when you have had it fifty or sixty days right along it becomes a little tiresome."

☞ The Legislature has appropriated $6,000 for establishing a chair of homeopathy at Ann Arbor. The institution will be under the control of the Board of Regents but will have no connection with the old school.

☞ The Canadian government has resolved to deepen the St. Lawrence canals to fourteen feet instead of twelve. The contracts have been let for the deepening of the harbors on the Welland canal to the same depth.

☞ The Unita Cattolica of Rome comments in bitter terms on the installation of the Prince of Wales as the head of the order of Masons in Great Britan, and declares that his indentifies the Anglican Protestants with Masonry.

☞ The Catholic Review says it is a common idea that the clergy of Rome are exceedingly wealthy, which is a great mistake. Nearly all the Roman priests are very poor, as indeed, are the clergymen of Italy generally. The Pope has to send the twelve Bishops 400 francs per month, and the Archbishops 500.

☞ The latest kink in the fashion is the pistol which a lady carries swung to her hat. When she wishes to use it she pulls the trigger and out comes a streamer in. Another is a perfumed bouquet fired in a holder. After taking a sniff at the flowers the lady gently pulls the pistol of one end and out springs a fan.

☞ The party of miners who spent the winter in the Black Hills, and were captured by ten Mix, have returned to Sioux City. They confirm the most extravagant reports of the attractions of the new place, pured region, and are unanimous in expressing a determination to return to the hills at the earliest opportunity.

☞ A section of the cross-examination Mr. Pullerton cautiously adjusting and readjusting his eyeglass and gazing hard at witness: "Mr. Bee—Mr. Beecher—Mr. Beecher—you say—yes; ah, hum—you say that—ah hum, yes—that you—hum, yes, eh—that you didn't?" Mr Beecher, twisting in his chair: "I—I—well—I—no,—I don't recollect."

☞ A spring of fresh water has been found by the U. S. coast survey steamer "Endeavor," bobbling up in the Pacific Ocean, some miles off the Mexico coast, opposite Mutanzas, coming up so violently as to throw the vessel from her helm. The water at the surface is violently disturbed for a space of about thirty feet in diameter. The vessel will go back there and Endeavor to look into the matter.

☞ A bill has been passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor requiring railroad companies in the death of any person on their road, to promptly notify the nearest resident coroner. They are also required to notify the State Railroad Commissioner of all accidents. It is made his duty to examine into all the cases of fatal accidents, and he is empowered, in his discretion, to make similar examinations where no deaths occur.

☞ Connecticut was undoubtedly carried for the Democrats by fraud. The Republicans polled about 15,000 more votes than last year—an unusually full vote—and yet they were badly beaten. There is no such increase of population in that State as the increase in the Democratic vote would indicate, nor a tenth part of it. And the heaviest Democratic majorities are in the towns offering the greatest chances for fraud.

☞ The Post-Office Department a few weeks since ignored upon sale thereof postage stamps manufactured from an entirely new principle. They are made of two kinds of paper, one hard and the other porous. The purpose is to prevent the possibility of washing stamps. This end is accomplished by the one stamps, as the porous paper absorbs ink. The grossest difficulty is that the stamps cannot be made properly adhesive, and is doubtful whether the experiment will prove successful.

☞ A distressing calamity occurred at New Orleans lately. A steamer laying at the wharf took fire, and was speedily burned to the water's edge. Two other steamers lying close by were set on fire and also burned. They were all ready to start upon their upriver trip, a full complement of officers and men, and full lists of passengers being on board. As yet, it is impossible to state definitely the loss of life occasioned, but at least forty persons were either burned, drowned, or suffocated.

☞ The word "Bonilla" received fresh life and impetus along the lines of human longevity by Gen Sheridan's use it early last January. It had been acted upon as a trade mark by Dixey manufacturers, and some of the most popular wares in the Southern market are stamped with it. A great many people down there have a strong suspicion that it means something awful, just as they would if he had proposed to call them parallelograms, or hypothenuses of right angled triangles. So first they got awful mad at it, and then concluded to invent one.

The Legislative Session.

The legislative session of 1875 has been one of the busiest ever held in the history of the State—a fact largely due, without doubt, to the prolonged and animated nature of the Senatorial contest at the outset. The list of measures introduced and acted upon by it includes 371 Senate and 506 House bills, and 22 Senate and 26 House joint resolutions. In addition to their consideration a large amount of business of a local or formal but still important character was also transacted. Among the leading items of the session's legislation may be mentioned the following:

The substitution for "prohibition" of the "regulation" policy of dealing with the evils attending the liquor traffic, a matter which has already been discussed at great length in our columns.

The change in the financial system of the State, which will check the accumulation of the large surplus in the Treasury, and immediately lessen the burdens of taxation by applying most of the money on hand to the defraying of current expenses.

The abolition of the County Superintendency and the substitution therefor of the township system of school superintendence.

The granting of State Swamp lands to the upper Peninsula to enable properly protected railroads in that region, of great importance to the general welfare.

The adding to the University of a homeopathic medical school and a school of mines.

The making of appropriations for the commencement of work upon the new intermediate prison, or State House of Correction, which is destined to be a most important addition to the penal institutions of Michigan.

The repealing of the obnoxious "dog law."

The re-apportioning of the State into legislative districts under the census of 1874.

The creation of the new Twenty-first County, by the subdivision of the old Tenth.

The organizing of the counties of Otsego Presque, Roscommon, Cheboygan, et al.

The provision for the suitable representation of Michigan at the Centennial exhibition next year.

The establishing of penalties for offering for sale in this State as "Michigan wheat" all grain grown elsewhere and not properly Michigan wheat—a measure to protect the commercial standing of our most important staple.

The reduction of the number of township highway commissioners from three to one.

A general remodeling of the laws governing the administration of the State Prison.

Constitutional amendments have also been submitted to the people (to be voted upon in November, 1876) striking out the anti-license clause, taking the salary of a Circuit Judge to $2,500, and providing that constitutional amendments may be voted upon at the Spring elections if the Legislature shall desire to submit them at that time.

Among the important measures which failed were the "county tax bill," the Board claim, and the bill to establish a Board of State Medical Censors.

The thorough investigations into the Pilot Institute and the State Prisons must be classed among the most useful labors of the session.—Detroit Tribune.

☞ This is Beecher's remarkable peroration to his last Sunday's sermon: "He that is holy and loves God for what He is, he that hath faith, when he reaches the other life can't be sent to hell. When I come before the Eternal Judge and say, all aglow, 'My Lord, My God!' will he turn and say, 'You were never ensouled; go down! You did not come up like right road!' I will answer, 'I love Thee! Damn me if thou canst!' God will say, stand the heavens aflame, 'Dost thou love?' Enter in."

VIBRATOR THRESHER

The BRILLIANT SUCCESS of this Grain Saving, Time-saving Thresher, in successfully introduced in the counties of Penn Monkmery, to a later period it has become widely known and fully established as the "Leading Threshing Machine."

GRAIN RAISERS REFUSE to sell until the Vibrator has been tried on their crops. They prefer to thus test its many good points, thoroughly and economically before buying.

Threshermen find it highly advantageous to run a machine that has not "Broken," "Stuck," or "Choked," that handles Bonds Straw, Long Straw, Shortings, Flax, Timothy and all small seeded grain and does it all with entire ease and effectiveness. Owners of Vibrators never have the time or threshed full hours a saving of grain; unless the "Vibrator" separates as fast as can take the usual fields, Boxes Journals, and Bearings are constructed on the principle that new parts can be supplied and sold for cents, all other machines are "out of joint."

Four sizes made with 6, 8, 10 and 12 horse tie speed Powers, also a 40 chaffy Independent "Clover" Machine, as cheap as, and to handle other than a mow.

Local News.

The Legislature has adjourned.

Jerome Hannis held a session of Probate Court on Monday.

Sloan.—A. Buttars, of this place, has sold his Northport property.

Farley, late of Elk Rapids, is to start a bull alley at Petoskey.

Great rush at ye Editor's since the other end of town.

The propeller Shenandoah arrived at Torch Lake from Milwaukee yesterday.

The log Leviathan is working on the Platte, subject to the Masters.

A letter to Mr Fox states that the Van Raalte has almost two loads of freight for the bay.

The little schooner Ida May, Capt. Tim Smith, is loading with potatoes for Algona.

The propeller Mohawk is expected here from Chicago about Wednesday, with supplies for Fox, Rose & Buttars.

The Schooner Emma has received a coat of black paint, a new rudder, and is waiting for the ice to leave.

The tug Jennie Silkman of Torch Lake, arrived at Elk Rapids on Thursday, being the first boat down the lakes.

The Steamer Annie is now making regular trips to the head of Pine Lake and South Arm. Her line-table will appear next week.

Sloan.—Dexter & Noble of Elk Rapids, have sold the schooner D. B. Martin to Chicago parties. The price paid was $6,000.

Geo Pasmelee, president of the geological society, says there will not be a peach in the Grand Traverse region this year.

The Van Raalte is to run only between Traverse City and Petoskey the present season. The propeller Master is to take the Petoskey and Mackinaw route.

The clerks in Fox, Rose & Buttars' store have been engaged during the week in giving their premises a general spring cleaning, and things look better therefore.

In Missouri wolf scalps are received in payment of taxes. Will this county receive the scalps on the same account? If so, there are several we could secure on short notice.

It is reported that there will be a change in the running time of trains on the Grand Rapids & Indiana road in about two weeks at which time a night train to and from Petoskey will be put on.

Resolves.—Rev. Geo L. Cole will preach at the school house to-morrow both morning and evening.

—Quarterly meeting in this village on the 15th and 16th of this month. At Advance the 29th and 30th.

The Ida.—As we go to press the ice has parted near shore, and loitering rapidly lakeward, under the impetus of a strong east wind. Nothing to be seen of the ice if the wind holds in this quarter twenty-four hours longer.

Ladies, call and see those cheap gutters at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

W. F. Exerz, the popular South Arm merchant, has the timber on the ground for a new store, to be erected on the opposite side of the arm from where his present store now stands. He will remove his goods to the new building as soon as it is completed.

Notaries.—The Governor has appointed and the Senate confirmed Wm. Nelson and A. E Hayes as Notaries Public for Charlevoix county; F. W. Webber, H. O. Rose, J. Wagley, G. W. Eagle, A. McMillan, and C. J. Faulkner, for Emmet county; and J. A. Moore and F. J. Lowe for Antrim county.

The Clam Lake News says: When we see men of wealth and men of high political position taking up homesteads on the Indian reservation we wonder how they get over the declaration that they intend to reside on the same and make it their home. We think it would look far better for them to step out and offer no competition to the poor man who is now a bona fide settler.

Scheduled.—Several of our citizens who entrusted their watches to the tender care of Thomas H. Posty, our spasmodic watch-tinker, have finally concluded that Foley is several watches ahead. He was only going on a little professional trip to Emmet county, and would fix the watches during his leisure moments. Three months have elapsed and still no Foley. We congratulate ourself that our Elgin is lodged safely in our left vest pocket.

A good assortment of children's shoes, at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

The Harbor Question.

Our readers have been somewhat in the dark concerning the causes for our failure to get an appropriation last winter, and in behalf of the people, Hon. John S. Bross recently interrogated Senator Ferry on the subject. The following is his answer:

Grand Haven Mich., May 1, 1875.

Hon. John S. Bross:

Dear Sir—In reply to your favor of 8th inst. which I was glad to receive, and from its contents, also sometime during our absence, I may say that while regretting the result of your local election, which you speak of as going against the logistics of our party, I feel that any one should have pointed support from you personally or thereafter of the Government respecting improvement of the lower, when the Republican party is the only one that has announced and practiced economy in the conduct of the affairs of the country, of income, prosperity, and that will be fruits of those who helped upon which.

When it is considered how much Michigan has received in the way of appropriations, no one in the State can justly complain. It is notorious in Congress, and would not have to comment against, that our state has the most thoroughly improved and the most numerous appropriations so much so that the Harbor and Rivers Bill is frequently called "The Michigan Harbor and River Bill."

I called for my appropriation for Grand Haven Harbor the past session because I thought we could get along with our completion of the improvement piers, and because I wanted other places to get as much as we could for theirs.

The reason why Charlevoix got no appropriation was because the Engineers in charge, [illegible] were not satisfied that the [illegible] was adequate to the [illegible] and especially your representative, could be blame for [illegible] Petoskey harbor, as I recommended it to the Engineers from my district.

I would advise you to lay before Col. S. M. Mansfield, of Detroit, the condition and requirements of your harbor, and all the information you can for the improvement of, so recommended and urged upon the Engineers in charge, so that when the appropriation next comes it will be granted.

Having watched the improvements of Manistee and Ludington for years, I certainly sympathize with you and any Pacific harbor and should be glad to aid yours.

I desire to be glad to visit Charlevoix and see for myself your wants and possibilities. It is possible that I shall be happy to do so.

Yours truly,

T. W. FERRY.

Perhaps our disappointment has caused us to unjustly censure Senator Ferry. If so, we as a people, will rectify the error by renewing our confidence in him, as soon as he manifests a disposition of justice toward us, by turning his face in this direction. But we earnestly request, yea, demand that he give our interests the attention that they deserve, and that he will not be found lazy to his constituents here, whom he has so long and persistently slighted, is to visit them. When he does this we shall have hope; for who has ever gazed upon our immense natural waterways, and not being more than ordinarily impressed with what might be done here with merely a fishing of what has been expended at other points, no more deserving Arrivals.—F. J. Lowe, of Torch Lake, has been in town during the week. Going the ornamental work on the schooner H. of Smith. The work consists of the name on the stern, scrolls, etc., executed in beautiful gilt shaded letters, and ornamented with flourishes, and the two "quarter-boards" which are placed upon the bulwarks near the cabin—which very artistical ly panelled. Mr. Lowe is an artist, not a mere painter.

Emmet County Democrat.—This is the name of a handsome paper the size of the Sentinel, just started at Petoskey. Our Sentinel has been the official paper of Emmet county for the past six years, but nevertheless we welcome the Democrat as the Sentinel's successor in that capacity, and wish it God speed. We extend our pro to brother Rose, and invite his hearty co-operation with us in laboring for the interests of the section of which these two counties form the most attractive portion.

Masonic Notice.—The spelling match is fairly inaugurated in Charlevoix, and the ball is rolling. Who will be next? On Friday evening, the 30th, an interesting affair was held, and Miss Ayers of the Sentinel office, was the last one down. Some word spelling was indulged in—one idiot going down on the word "malice," by reason of putting in one too many l's. It is credible to say that the idiot in question was ourself. Prof. Cipright thought there ought to be two or three "courses," and was obliged to repeat. The Professor spelled down the house, however, last Wednesday evening. Another school next Wednesday evening.

Launch of the W. A. Smith.—Colwell & Jones's new schooner, built here during the past winter, was very successfully launched on Wednesday afternoon, amid quite a concourse of our village people. She glided into the water as gracefully as a swan, and no lines being attached to her, sailed proudly to the opposite side of the harbor and brought up on the sand. In the evening the steamer Annie towed her back to the yard, where she is now receiving the finishing touches. Her spars, including main, mizzen, anchor, chains, rigging, etc., are expected up by first boat from Buffalo and Detroit. The Smith is a small vessel—59 feet in length, 15 feet beam, and five and one half feet depth of hold. She is to be a full rigged fore-and-aft schooner, and will carry about 400 yards of canvas. She is of graceful model, and we think no finer vessel of her kind and size floats Lake Michigan. She will be commanded by Capt. Benjamin Campbell.

Potato Bugs.—The hopes of the tillers of the soil that the frisky and variegated Colorado beetle had fallen a victim to the severe weather, and that blushing parsnips and blue-eyed early rose potatoes would be permitted to ripen into luscious tubers, are doomed to utter annihilation. Come to think of it, it wasn't reasonable to suppose that an insect that eats Paris green with impunity would be at all troubled by twenty-two degrees below zero. Discouraged at lying for three months in earth frozen as solid as a rock. They can be found in great profusion by digging down about four to six inches.

Navigation.—The Straits are open and a steamer may be expected here during the coming week. As we go to press vessels and steamers are seen passing about twenty miles out. A large field of heavy, demoralized ice remains on this shore inside of which steamers would be likely to make very little headway. At Chicago the news of the opening of the Straits was received with pleasure by vessel men, but there was a noticeable absence of that enthusiasm seen in past years, when the east and west entrances of the Straits have been crowded with vessels anxious to force their way through. This year freights are so low that very few crafts have been fitted out, and it is probable that a considerable percentage of the ice fungus will not be placed in commission at all.

Our Ford.

From the Traverse Bay Progress.

"He is not pitiful sick" is a Scriptural injunction which, if lived up to by all mortals on this "footstool," would save us some disagreeable things "A fellow by the name of Ford, of Little Traverse, who for reasons not necessary to mention, dislikes closely cropped hair and striped clothes, and who was formerly a preacher in one place and therefore supposed to be learned in the wisdom of the Book of Holy Writ, has lately earned the low title of the "Little Traverse Balloon, strange to say, suffered a collapse, and dropped from the high altitude among the stars of legal knowledge to which a vivid imagination had carried him, shortly after he came here for the purpose of "learning Winans some law," as he said. It is hardly necessary to say that the many pocketfuls of writs of habeas corpus, which Ford is supposed to constantly carry about him for the purpose of releasing such suffering martyrs as Perriman, like the companions of the "Last Rose of Summer," are "scattered and torn" and Perriman, who hoped to breathe the air of freedom the moment Ford's No. 11's pressed the sand of Elk Rapids, still languishes in jail. Ford had not been in town 24 hours before he was summoned before the Elk Rapids court to answer for deeds committed in the flesh while serving the Devil in the garb of a shepherd of the Lord. On his arrival at Traverse City, where he went to apply for a new trial for Perriman, he was compelled to go back to Little Traverse in order to save his bacon from a charge of trespass for having advised the sheriff of that place to attach certain property. Poor Perriman will serve out the remainder of his 90 days. His ignorance and egotism are the cause of his confinement. Had he placed himself beyond the jurisdiction of this court, instead of loafing around and boasting that the authorities could not and dared not punish him, he would now be free. His conduct was a challenge to the authorities to arrest him. They accepted the challenge, for which they have the thanks of every law and order loving citizen in the community.

An Austrian paper says that the Pope has made representations through the French friends of Venice to the Emperor of Austria that the position of the Church is becoming more and more intolerable, and that if the unreasonable demands of Prussia are not resisted by the Catholic powers the latter will lose all their influence and become subject to the German Government, which is endeavoring to bring the whole German nationality under one scepter. The Emperor, replying to this, told the Austrian Ambassador at Rome, deplores the struggle between Church and State, and advises prudence.

The following instructive dialogue was overheard the other day:

Boarder—Now, you seem to have been living here at Goodrich's; where do you trade, Jones?

Jones—Why, I bought at

BYRON SEE'S

Grocery and Provision Store in Charlevoix. It is a great place to trade.

Boarder—That so? Can others do as well there as you do? You know you always have the best of everything.

Jones—Yes, I can get just as good goods and as low prices there as anywhere in the country. See his sign in front of the store.

Boarder—I will go there to-morrow morning and get some of those nice cigars you smoke.

Jones—Yes, and you will find the best of everything in the line of groceries, provisions, etc., at the lowest prices.

Boarder—I will go there.

Boarder—Say, Jones, you seem to have been living here at groceries, I mean trade, Jones?

Jones—Why, I bought at

BYRON SEE'S

Grocery and Provision Store in Charlevoix. It is a great place to trade.

Boarder—That so? Can others do as well there as you do? You know you always have the best of everything.

Jones—Yes, I can get just as good goods and as low prices there as anywhere in the country. See his sign in front of the store.

Boarder—I will go there to-morrow morning and get some of those nice cigars you smoke.

Jones—Yes, and you will find the best of everything in the line of groceries, provisions, etc., at the lowest prices.

Boarder—I will go there.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - - MAY. 15, 1875.

☞ The new asylum for insane at Pontiac is to cost $400,000, and will be the second in importance in the State.

☞ A terrible disaster took place at sea last week. The Eagle fire steamer Schiller was wrecked off the Shilly islands, and nearly 300 lives lost.

☞ Scattered around in various Southern States are seventeen justices of the peace who haven't yet declared the Civil Rights bill unconstitutional.

☞ Judge Pierrepont has been appointed Attorney General by the President in place of Gen. Williams whose resignation we noticed last issue.

☞ The muskrats have proved themselves no better weather prophets than the average human. They built thin homes last fall with the expectation of October weather for winter, and the hunters say that nearly half of them are frozen to death.

☞ The Standard's special from Berlin says that the Prussian police here redoubled their vigilance, having received alarming notices of plots against Prince Bismarck and Minister Falk. A special staff of fourteen detectives has been formed for their protection.

☞ Frank P. Blair, Sr., is in his nineteenth year, and is very infirm and childish. His wife is eighty eight; and his daughter, Mrs Admiral Lee, is his nurse and attendant. "Young Frank" has partially recovered from his paralytic stroke, and his full recovery is now hoped for.

☞ A Committee representing the Fifth Maryland Regiment visited Washington lately and tendered its services as escort to the President to the Bunker Hill Centennial. The President, it is said, gracefully accepted the proffered courtesy. The Marine Band will accompany the escort.

☞ The Weber furniture factory in Detroit, a building five stories high and 220 feet long by 100 wide, was entirely consumed by fire with all its contents Thursday, April 29th; also 12 or 15 dwellings on Monteim street. Mr. Weber's brick dwelling on High street was also on fire

☞ A Russian printer has invented a type-setting machine which, the St. Petersburg papers assert, far surpasses all similar machines that have hitherto been presented. It sets to an hour thirty thousand letters; it costs five thousand rubles, and one thousand letters set thereby cost only five cents.

☞ It appears that not only Roman Catholics, but American snobs who are Protestants if anything, have begun to bow themselves before the new Cardinal in New York, in the same abject manner in which visitors do to calling upon the Pope at Rome. It is all right for those who relish that sort of obsequiousness. In fact it's the best thing they can do.

☞ The monster schooner that has been in course of construction at the yard of Bailey Brothers, Toledo, for the past seven months was successfully launched on Wednesday. She is one third larger than the Michigan now the largest vessel afloat. Her dimensions are: length 345 feet; beam, 40 feet, hold, 18 feet, (double decks); displacement 1600 tons, carrying capacity, 80,000 bushels of wheat. She was christened the G. W. Adams, and is owned by Nims & Co., of Buffalo.

☞ There are three new liquor laws. The Police Law or Regulation Law, is one regulating and restricting the traffic. It forbids the sale of liquor to minors, intoxicated persons and habitual drunkards, or upon Sundays, or between eleven o'clock at night or six the next morning, under penalty of a fine of between $25 and $100 and costs, with the alternative of imprisonment from ten to ninety days. Any person publicly intoxicated shall be punished by a fine of $5, or imprisonment not exceeding twenty days or both, at the discretion of the court. Any wife, child, parent or guardian, or other person who shall be injured in person, property, or means of support by any intoxicated person shall have the right of action of damages against the seller of the liquor. All dealers are required to give a bond of from one to three thousand dollars as is demanded by the township or municipal authorities, to observe the provisions of the act and to pay all damages to which all persons may be entitled under it. The third new law is one prescribing heavy penalties for adulterating spirits and for selling or offering to sell drugged or adulterated liquors.

The Capture of Ticonderoga.

The "centennial era" which began on the 19th of April last with the hundredth anniversary of the battles of Lexington and Concord, will continue, for the next ten years full of centennial anniversaries of important events in the history of the war of American Independence, and of the gradual erection of a constitutional and homogeneous government. The most striking occurrences between the Concord fight and the battle at Bunker Hill, in the early Revolutionary days, was the capture of Ticonderoga by the Green Mountain boys under Ethan Allen, on the 10th of May, 1775. The centennial of that exploit comes next Monday, and a resume of its history will be of interest

Forts Ticonderoga and Crown Point were built upon the narrow strait between the mountains which connect Lakes George and Champlain. Ticonderoga, expressly, had cost Great Britain millions of dollars and many bloody campaigns. It was the key to Canada, and had been the object point of many a desperate struggle in the old French and Indian wars. As soon as the news of Lexington and Concord came like a trumpet blast through the colonies, awaking the whole people to revolution, the idea occurred to several of the patriot leaders almost simultaneously as it seems, of capturing these important fortresses, which had, through the procrastination of the British commanders been left without adequate garrison—Ticonderoga with only forty eight men, and Crown Point with twelve. Benedict Arnold suggested it to the Massachusetts Committee of Safety, but the gallant Warren who so soon after fell at Bunker Hill, replied on April 30th, as chairman of the committee, that while recognizing the importance of the fortress, they were unwilling to infringe upon the territory of the province of New York, in which it was located. Meanwhile at Hartford, Parsons, Wyllis and Deane, less scrupulous of provincial rights were organizing the plan of the expedition which made the successful attack. On April 27th they threw $200 from the State treasury, upon their own receipts, for the equipment of the enterprise, and, on the 29th, eight men set out from Hartford to carry out the plan. A messenger was sent in advance to Ethan Allen, to raise the men in the New Hampshire Grants. The Connecticut party had intended to enlist no recruits until they arrived in the neighborhood, for fear that their object might become known, but they gathered friends as they went, until they numbered some thirty on arriving at Bennington on May 5th.

Here they found Ethan Allen, then in the early prime of manhood and already a hero of the region from the bold and daring position which he had taken as the leader of the Green Mountain Boys in their feuds with New York. He sent summons to his trusted friends in the neighboring towns, by a messenger who made the circuit of sixty miles in twenty-four hours. The hardy mountaineers rallied quickly at the call, and on the 8th of May the little army, 270 strong, began the march. On the evening before, Benedict Arnold had arrived, bearing a commission from the Massachusetts Committee of safety, but the men disregarded it, and unanimously elected Ethan Allen as their chief. He was acknowledged on all hands "the proper man to lead his own people," and they were "the proper persons for the job."

The little army arrived at Orwell, opposite Ticonderoga, after dark on the evening of May 9th. Here occurred a difficulty. Two parties had been sent forward to procure boats but none were at hand. After some delay they got possession of a scow, and also decoyed a negro having charge of a boat belonging to the garrison. These would not convey the whole force across the two-mile strait, but Allen crossed with eighty-three men. He then sent the boats back for Seth Warner and another instalment of his followers. While waiting for this reinforcement however, dawn began to appear. If the fort was to be surprised, the attack could no longer be delayed. The eighty-three were drawn up in three ranks, and Allen addressed them: "Friends and fellow-soldiers: We must this morning quit our pretensions to valor or possess ourselves of this fortress; and remember as it is a desperate attempt, I do not urge it on you contrary to your will. You that will undertake voluntarily, raise your firelocks!" Every firelock is raised. "Face to the right!" cries Allen and leading the centre file, with a boy for a guide, he marches down a covered way to the gate. It is shut, but the wicket is open. The astonished sentry sways his fusil unavailingly at them, and is overwhelmed by the rush before he remembers to give an alarm. That trouble is saved him by the Americans, who raise an Indian war-whoop. Inside the fort the those of the old days. Allen shouts at the door of the commanding officer: "Come forth instantly, or I will sacrifice the whole garrison." At this summons Captain Delafield comes out undressed with his pantaloons in his hand "Deliver the fort instantly," says Allen. "By what authority?" asks the astonished captain. "In the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress!" thunders the gigantic Vermonter, forgetful or careless of the fact that the Continental Congress would not be in session until soon of that very day. Allen's drawn sword, dangerously near the captain's head eloquently reinforces his argument, and the surrender is made at once.

"Thus," says Bancroft, "Ticonderoga, whose cost in British nation eight millions sterling, a succession of campaigns, and many lives, was won in ten minutes by a few undisciplined volunteers, without loss of life or limb."

The epoch of this victory, besides the fortress, were fifty prisoners, who were sent to Connecticut, where the province where the expedition originated, and nearly a hundred and twenty cannon. On the same day Seth Warner, Allen's trusted lieutenant, captured Crown Point with its garrison of twelve men. The news of this victory on the day on which the Continental Congress assembled was soon conveyed to that body, and animated it to greater efforts and courage.

The capture of Ticonderoga is not, we believe, to have any local celebration. Still it was an event of much significance in revolutionary history. Not only was the captured fortress of great strategic importance, and the captured cannon of especial value to the provinces but the success of the expedition added greatly to the confidence of the untrained militia as to their ability to cope in frontier warfare with the practiced soldiers of England. The men at Bunker Hill fought better and more resolutely because Ethan Allen had managed his captive so successfully at Ticonderoga.—Detroit Tribune, May 6th.

VIBRATOR THRESHER

The BRILLIANT SUCCESS of this Grain-Saving, time-saving Thresher, is unprecedented in the annals of Farm Machinery. In a brief period it has become widely known and fully established as the "Leading Threshing Machine."

GRAIN RAISERS REFUSE to submit to the wasteful and imperfect work of other Threshers, when posted on the vast superiority of this one, for saving grain, saving time, and doing fast, thorough and economical work.

Threshermen find it highly advantageous to run a machine that has no "Beaters," "Pickers," or "Aprons," that handles Damp Grain, Long Straw, Headings, Flax, Timothy, Millet and all such difficult grain and seeds, with entire ease and effectiveness. Clean to perfection; save the farmer the thresh bill by extra saving of grain; ascertained fifteen per cent less trash into mow than the usual Rells, Boxes, Journals, and Gears; easier managed; less repairs; one that threshers prefer to employ and wait for, even at ascertained prices, while other machines are "out of jobs."

Four sizes made with 6, 8, 10 and 12 horse "mounted" Powers, also a speciality of Separating Horse Powers, for steam power, and to match other horse powers.

Local News.

A. BUTTARS visited home Chicago on Saturday last.

MR. CARPENTER has gone outside after new goods.

THE tug Con Mott made her first trip up the lake yesterday.

MANN'S mill, at Normond, is in operation, and doing good work.

SCHRAVICK Dougherty is busily engaged in taking assessment.

THE propeller Waverly, Capt. Pratt, wooded at Norwood Thursday.

A blacksmith shop will soon be in operation at Porter's Mills.

THE letter from Petoskey came too late for publication this week.

SEVERAL SCHOONS continue, but we believe the interest is lessening.

W. H. POWERS of Pine Lake, has a quantity of pine and hemlock lumber for sale.

THE propeller Susquenaw arrived at Torch Lake yesterday morning, from Milwaukee.

THE propeller Van Raalte left Detroit Tuesday afternoon, and is expected here to-day.

BARK.—Capt. P. Johnson & Co. wish it understood that they will pay the highest market price for bark.

We call attention to the business card of C. J Faulhaber, Attorney, of Petoskey in another column.

THE people of Emmet county have petitioned the Governor to remove Prosecuting Ford from office.

W. F. EGERY, of South Arm, is the authorized agent of Capt. P. Johnson & Co., with whom contracts for hemlock bark can be made.

A CREW in the hands of W. F. Empey, on the steamer Jessie, yesterday, was accidentally discharged, and two persons barely escaping injury.

THE new apportionment act, as finally passed, forms the counties of Charlevoix, Antrim, Emmet, Manitou and Otsego, into one Representative District.

THE Antrim County Board of Supervisors met at Torch Lake on Wednesday to discuss the question of buying a poor-farm. They propose to sell the one they already own.

THE Pole schooner Flora is down from South Arm with a cargo of 40,000 barrel hoops and a quantity of potatoes. She will proceed to Beaver harbor as soon as the wind changes.

THE editor of the Walkashkian, and the Sheriff of Kalkaska, were in town on Thursday. Don't know what Sweet had been doing. Didn't call on us for fear we would say something about it.

FINE BOAT.—The propeller Montgomery of the Sarnia line wooded here on Saturday morning, on her way up. She encountered large quantities of ice, and sustained some damage therefrom.

THE propeller Fountain City has gone into the dry dock at Buffalo, and has undertaken a thorough overhauling and calking of her hull. The schooner Allaheen will next take the dock.

CAPT. CORNEY, formerly the popular Commander of the propeller Mohawk, and last season in the Montana, is to come out in September in the Western Transportation Company's new 2,000 ton boat. He is now superintending her construction.

SCHOONERS.—The little schooner Jim, owned by Capt. Samuel Moore, was seized by Deputy Sheriff Johnson, at the head of South Arm, on Tuesday. Parties in South Arm claim they have a load of of hoops with Capt. Moore and have never yet got returns.

DR. LEWIS says that the rumor that he is going to remove to Boyne Falls, is a false one. He proposes to remain here and continue in his drug business and medical practice. He will have a fresh stock of drugs and medicines by propeller Van Raalte.

ONE FRIEND.—It has been made to appear that very little was done for us last winter by Congressman Hubbell and the Postoffice, and many unkind and impolitic criticisms have been indulged in by our citizens. Late developments have brought to light a fact that Mr. Hubbell spent nearly one hour before the House Committee on Commerce, endeavoring to induce them to include Charlevoix in the general River and Harbor Bill. Subsequently he made several vain efforts to obtain leave to introduce a special bill. Senator Chandler, in the Senate, made the same unavailing efforts.

OUR FOLD.

Three Years in the Service of the State!

The following correspondence explains itself:

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., April 16, 1875.

AGENT MICHIGAN STATE PATRON—

DEAR SIR.—Will you be pleased to inform me concerning the following:

Was one C. B. Ford, who was sent to prison for three years from Wabasseee the fraudulent, pardoned at any time before his discharge?

By informing us in this matter you will not only confer a favor upon me, but upon the public at large.

Respectfully yours,
W. A. SMITH.

REPLY.

MICHIGAN STATE PATRON, }
Ionia, April 19 '75. }

W. A. SMITH, Charlevoix—

Charles Raymond Ford, sent from Wabasseee Circuit Dec. 24, 1868, was discharged at the expiration of his time. No pardon

Very Respectfully,
JOHN MUNSIE, Agent.

Comment is unnecessary.

MR. K. Freeman, of Kasson, has a new and novel plan for raising peaches. He plants the trees at an angle of 45 degrees, says the Leelenau Tribune, trimming them in the shape of a fan. In the fall they lie bent to the ground and are covered by snow, which protects them through the winter.

COL. MANSFIELD writes Hon. John S. Dixon, of this place, that he recently ran, versed with Senator Ferry on the subject of our harbor improvement, and states that the Senator expressed a determination to take hold of the matter. Col. Mansfield will make Charlevoix a visit this summer. No official significance will be attached to the visit, however, as Charlevoix is not in his district.

THE CHANCES.—It may be some comfort to our people to know that during a recent interview with one of our citizens, Representative Hubbell spoke very encouragingly of the prospect of getting an appropriation next winter, and had little doubt as to a favorable result. Now let us commence early in agitating this matter. Our experience has shown us where we have been amiss, and we should profit by it. Let petitions be framed now, and the signature of every propeller and vessel captain who comes into this port be secured; and when Congress convenes let us present the prayer of every citizen of the Pine Lake region. Good must come of earnestness.

THE RIVER.—As we go to press, Mr. Morgan is dredging the lower river with his "scraper invention," of which we have spoken in a previous issue. It has proven a perfect success, and as enormous quantity of gravel has been taken from the bed of the river. They will complete the lower river this week, and will leave a uniform depth of nine feet of water. Mr. Morgan deserves great praise for what he has accomplished. It now remains with the people of the upper lake to say whether they will have the upper channel put in condition to allow loaded vessels to pass through it, or not. A depth of seven and one-half feet of water can be made and secured, if every man will do a little. Do not let your own inactivity in this matter be the cause of failure.

NEW ENTERPRISE.—We are pleased to announce that arrangements are on foot for the formation of a firm in Charlevoix, which will add a new impetus to our business interests, and undoubtedly prove a great benefit to the village and surrounding country. Capt. H. Francis, and Wm. Francis, Esq., of Canada, both men of capital have interested themselves with the business of Henry Morgan Esq. of this village, and propose to continue and enlarge the trade which he has so energetically commenced. Capt. Francis left on Thursday for Chicago, to purchase a vessel for the trade and proposes to buy one of light draft, which will carry about 150 cords of wood. If they are of the stamp of Mr. Morgan, they will make business here "rattle" or we are mistaken.

TORCH LAKE.—We visited Torch Lake on Monday, and were allowed time enough then to visit all parts of the village. It is no wonder that city people find here the enjoyment which they say is so "delightful." First the Lewis house—a model of comfort and neatness, with its beautiful surroundings and its genial landlord, constitutes the leading attractions—and it is no attraction. Then the beautiful Torch Lake—but we cannot describe it. Silkman & Co. are doing a thriving business and will cut 1,500,000 feet of hard wood lumber this season, besides shipping a large amount of wood. They have a handsome little steamer—The Jennie Silkman on the inland lakes, and the Susquehanna makes regular trips between Torch Lake and Milwaukee. Torch Lake is a promising point.

TOM SHAW.—Apropos of spring-time the village roosters are daily seen contesting for the championship; and apropos of this fact, their respective owners are loud in their expressions of willingness to bet their bottom dollar on their respective roosters A popular hotel-keeper, and an equally popular shoemaker of this village, each have a rooster which possesses the necessary requisites to "scoop any rooster that ever mounted a dung-heap." There has been considerable talk across the fence lately between these two gentleman and their friends, the loudest of it coming from across the river, and, as a result, matters were arranged for a "meeting." On Wednesday the landlord took his rooster under his arm and went over. Bob came on with his chicken, and the battle commenced, in the midst of an excited crowd of our citizens, including both sexes, and both denominations. Our reporter was present. The chickens fought, and feathers filled the air. The battle raged hot for a time, Wagers of beefsteak, cookwood, and new boots, were rapidly made and taken. But soon the rooster which belongs across the river began to hang out his tongue, and, indeed, took to his heels with the shoemaker's rooster after him. The battle was fought, and Bob mounted the fence and crowed with his chicken; while Moe took his vanquished bird under his arm and strode meekly homeward. Bob Holben's chicken rules the roost!

THE Charlevoix Sentinel has just entered upon its seventh year of unalloyed happiness.—Midland Times.

Petoskey Items.

Barber shops are on the increase.

Hotels in town are doing a thriving business.

MR. H. O. ROSE is increasing his facilities for manufacturing lime.

WE understand that a gentleman will be here soon to put in a flour and feed store. That is something needed in town.

THE ladies of our town will be glad to know that they will soon have a stock of millinery goods to select their spring bonnets from.

MR. JOHN CRISPE will be here to erect a building for a drug store. He will build a store and put in a stock that will do credit to our town.—Democrat.

☞ By the new liquor-tax law a tax of $40 per annum is imposed upon the business of retailing and $100 upon wholesaling beer and malt liquors; $150 upon retailing and $200 for wholesaling spirituous or intoxicating liquors; $50 upon manufacturing brewed or malt liquors, 1,500 barrels or less per annum, and $100 if more than 1,500 barrels per annum are made; and $200 upon the business of manufacturing for sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquors. Domestic wines and cider are free, if made from fruit grown in the State. Druggists are allowed to sell without tax for medicinal mechanical, chemical, and sacramental purposes only. All sellers are to be assessed by the supervisors or other usual assessing officers, and if the taxes imposed are not paid in the time prescribed by the law, the Sheriff is to proceed to collect them by distraint and sale of any property found on the premises of the seller, and a heavy penalty is prescribed for selling, without having paid the tax. If the law is rigidly enforced it will shut up many of the lower class of liquor shops, kept by irresponsible persons; and it will raise a large local revenue from a business which for the past twenty years has been free from taxation under the State laws.

☞ The German Minister of War has ordered a cannon of fourteen and one-half inches bore to be made from the block of steel, weighing more than fifty-one tons, which attracted so much attention at the Vienna Exposition. This gun will pierce a fifteen-inch plate at a distance of a mile and a quarter.

☞ Instructions have been sent to the provincial authorities of Canada to treat the collection of money for the priests who have been subjected to legal penalties as punishable offences.

NOTICE.

To Trespassers on Pine Lands:

We hereby warn all persons against cutting any timber on the lands belonging to the Company in the counties of Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim and Otsego, in the State of Michigan, except the pine and hemlock necessary for building purposes of one or two dwelling houses, barns, or other buildings not exceeding the value of $50, intended for the use and settlement of the cutter, and of such pine and hemlock as may be required for the use of mills, mill-yards or machinery connected with the same. Such timber must be used for the purposes aforesaid within the limits of the settlement of which it forms a part, and not be sold or removed therefrom. We also warn against cutting any timber on the lands of the Company in the counties of Kalkaska, Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Benzie, Manistee, Wexford, Missaukee, Roscommon, Crawford, Oscoda, Alcona, Iosco, Ogemaw, Arenac, Gladwin, Clare, Isabella, Midland, Bay, Saginaw, Tuscola, Huron, Sanilac, Lapeer, St. Clair, Macomb, Oakland, Wayne, Monroe, Lenawee, Hillsdale, Jackson, Washtenaw, Livingston, Ingham, Shiawassee, Genesee, Lapeer, Sanilac, Huron, Tuscola, Bay, Saginaw, Midland, Gratiot, Clinton, Eaton, Barry, Kent, Ionia, Montcalm, Mecosta, Osceola, Lake, Newaygo, Muskegon, Ottawa, Allegan, Van Buren, Berrien, Cass, St. Joseph, Branch, Calhoun, Kalamazoo, and Cass, and all other counties in which the Company owns lands.

All persons found cutting timber on the Company's lands will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Any information given to the undersigned will be thankfully received, and the informant will be liberally rewarded.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - MAY. 22 1875.

☞ John C. Breckenridge is dead.

☞ A white monkey has been trapped at New Buffalo.

☞ The Detroit Tribune orchestra is 20% lively. Apace!

☞ Twenty millions of horses are owned by the great military powers of Europe.

☞ William Bennett, a life convict from Hay county, died at the State Prison May 4th. His body was turned over to the State University for dissection.

☞ A blind couple were married at Ithaco, Hillsdale county, about two weeks ago. The Jackson Citizen says they were as happy as though they could see. Undoubtedly happier.

☞ A party of 41 persons will start for California this week from Albion Marshall Battle Creek, and other places. They meet in Chicago, and from there will have a car to themselves.

☞ They sell tickets for a spelling match in San Francisco, and when the guests are congregated two game roosters are put in the pit and allowed to spell away at each other as long as they like.

☞ Mr. Jefferson Davis, in his address to the Texas veterans of the Mexican war, entreated them to bear loyal now to the stars and stripes as they had been zealous and brave in the defense of their first flag.

☞ In the libel suit of William F. Hotler, a lawyer of Chicago, against the proprietor of the Chicago Times for slightly cutting him as a "shyster," the jury found for the defendant and assessed the damages at $300. The plaintiff asked for $50,000.

☞ New brew is something we don't believe. The lady sophomores of Ann Arbor College have the freshmen terribly. One young fellow is confined to his bed in consequence of an injury received by being grabbed by one of those girls as he was passing through a dark hall.

☞ Hon. Edwards Pierrepont, the newly-appointed Attorney General, was one of the leading counsel for the prosecution in the Stokes trial. He is a man of large wealth, and contributed $20,000 to the campaign fund at the last Presidential election.

☞ The performances given by the New York theaters for the Dan Bryant family united the afflicted ones over $25,000, which makes them no longer poor, but rich. In backing each other in trouble, Americans notoriously are unstable, admirable, affable and affectionate army.

☞ A London dispatch of the 4th says Mouldy and Buckley, the Chicago escaped lady, were listened to by over 200,000 persons every week. The Moderator of the British Presbyterian Synod, at its session in London on the 4th, expressed sincere and deep sympathy with their brother fellow-worker.

☞ The Detroit Post says that there is great indignation among small saloonists against Gov. Bagley because he signed the liquor tax bill, and mentions an instance where a saloon keeper drank a glass of Bagley's cigars and emptied them out and trampled through the mud. How bad that must make the governor feel.

☞ Seventy Indians have been captured by United States troops and are on their way, as prisoners, to Fort Leavenworth. Among these are Lone Wolf and other chiefs, distinguished for their many murders and cruel deeds. Kicking Bird when betrayed his comrades, was disposed of with poison by a fair but treacherous squaw.

☞ It is said that in the first week of June Gen. Phil Sheridan is to marry Miss Irene Rucker, daughter of Gen. D. H. Rucker, of Chicago. Phil. is 42, Irene 19. She is described as "a beautiful brunette, rather tall, of that willowy, drooping form considered essential to beauty of the Indian order; her expression is sometimes sprightly, with a slight touch of sadness in its expression, which is charmingly modified by languid coldness, and at every change of countenance the blush of a moment's consciousness lights up her lovely face; her complexion is creamy, with a faint rose tint; hands and hands; her eyes large and luminous, and occasionally soft, and her hair is a dark glossy brown."

From Petoskey.

May 20th, 1875.

EDITOR SENTINEL:—

Some weeks have elapsed since the appearance in your columns of any items from Petoskey, therefore I send the following:

A new impetus is given to every branch of business since by the rapid immigration of settlers, and locaters in business. Buildings are going up so rapidly that they have crowed to excite any notice, about six carloads of lumber are used every week in building.

One new organ, the Democrat, is out to full time. The office is located in Mr. Hickerson's building on Lake Street.

Six head of cattle were killed on the railroad about one mile south of here on the 7th by the incoming freight train. The cattle belonged to new comers.

Little Traverse has been tranquil of late owing to the absence from the county of C. R. Ford; and could the absence be continued, the people would be greatly relieved. To make himself more detestable in his diabolical plan of operations, he succeeded last spring, in acquiring the election of a very incapable man for a Justice, before whom he institutes all manner of proceedings—imposing upon individuals trouble and creating actions with a shade of law, and directing them to the Circuit Court to obtain the least imaginable right or justice. An instance occurred three weeks ago in which the Ford and his ready Sheriff Smith conducted themselves in a manner which incurs the abhorence of all civilized people. Ford put a small execution into the hands of the Smith to collect against Mr. and Mrs. Davis, of Little Traverse, and directed Smith to go in the night and seize property. Accordingly he went, accompanied by Ford, and forced themselves into Davis's house and commenced taking out goods. Mr. Davis was in his bed, sick, more dead, Mrs. Davis begged of them in behalf of her sick husband to desist until morning but without effect. This so affected Mr. Davis that his death was hastened—which event occurred but a few days afterward. Mr. Davis had plenty of property in his store house to execution, and this unwarrantably intrusion into this afflicted household is only characteristic of this Ford. The Deputy Sheriff had his appointment insand nasty manner, as his reward. The indignant people of Little Traverse got up a petition to the Governor to depose Ford from the office of Prosecuting Attorney, which he has so disgraced, and was largely signed and forwarded.

Mr. Davis' people were very much respected where they have lived. Mrs. Davis, after performing the last solemn rites to her deceased husband, left with her family for her father's in the State of New York.

Yours,

R. D.

☞ The croakers are calling to mind the fact that fifty years ago there was winter all the year around in Massachusetts and December was as pleasant as May. Snow, in that memorable year, persisted in falling in July and August. It is thought that the same thing might be repeated this summer. But patience! There is still time for the thermometer to run up, even in the Northern States, to one hundred degrees in the shade, and a possibility of having a summer so hot as to call forth a longing for the return of winter.

☞ A Berlin dispatch of the 15th says: The Czar arrived here yesterday. He was received at the station by the Kaiser and William, Gen. Von Moltke, Manteuffel and other distinguished personages. The Emperor's greeting was exceedingly cordial. An immense crowd was gathered around the station and cheered most enthusiastically. The city is decorated with flags. The Czar is accompanied by Prince Gortschakoff, who has visited Prince Bismarck.

☞ It is always better to pass a dozen incendiaries without recognition, than to take offense at a single unintentional neglect or reflection. Misunderstandings are fruitful of more unkindly feelings in society than ever result from deliberate illfeeling. Hundreds of friendships have been sundered, by that egotistical, sensitiveness which is ever looking for offense. We can't point to certain persons who are thus morbidly sensitive in a painful degree. They are disagreeable companions. We need not spare our own character. We are each inclined to take offense too easily. If we could remove this ever jealous watchfulness, society would gain a new charm or rather it would be relieved of a very disagreeable feature. Pass neglect, then, and personal reflections, as generally as possible, instead of taking the risk of taking offense where none is intended.

To Europe by Balloon.

William H. Belknap, of Cincinnati; George L. Beare of New York; Nathaniel Gorny Hadaway, of London; and Newton Pelletier, of Paris, the two last through their attorneys, have entered into an agreement with Washington H. Donaldson, the well known aeronaut, of reading, Pa., by which they pledge themselves to furnish $40,000 for the purpose of constructing a balloon and defraying the expenses incidental to a transatlantic balloon voyage, to be made by Donaldson between October 1st and November 15, of the present year. It has been further stipulated that Donaldson shall receive $10,000 in case he shall near the voyage in seventy-two hours, or $20,000 if he shall make it in forty-eight hours. The agreement was signed in this city on the 15th inst.—N. Y. World.

☞ Taking of salaries in the learned professions it is estimated that the receipts of great actors in our day will almost equal those of great lawyers. Edwin Booth has made as high as $12,000 a month. Jefferson has made even more. Roscoe, combining his royalty as dramatist and his percentage as star actor, is making two thousand dollars a week at Wallack's Theatre in New York. Great physicians, but only a few of these, make business that parallels to those made by great lawyers and actors. Mott, Parker and Hunt have made as high as one hundred thousand dollars each in the course of the year in comparison with those professions the divines and editors make but paltry compensation. Ten thousand a year is a salary paid to about four employed editors in the country, while Messrs. Beecher and Chapin are the only divines whose income reaches beyond twenty thousand dollars. Lord Brougham looked well after the main chance, not while at the bar made the enormous income of five hundred thousand a year.

Ancient Wonders.

Nineveh was fourteen miles long, eight miles wide, and forty-six miles around, with one hundred brazen gates. The Temple of Diana, at Ephesus, was four hundred and twenty feet to the support of the roof —it was one hundred years in building. The largest of the pyramids was four hundred and eighty-one feet in height, and eight hundred and fifty-five feet on the sides. The base covered eleven acres. The stones are about six feet in height, and the layers are two hundred and eighty-three. It employed 350,000 men in building. The labyrinth of Egypt contains three hundred chambers and twelve halls. Thebes, in Egypt, in circuit, runs twenty-seven miles around, contained 3,500,000 citizens and 400,000 slaves. The Temple of Delphos was so rich in donations that it was pillaged of 350,000,000, and the Emperor Nero carried away from it 1-00 hundred statues. The walls of Rome were thirteen miles around.

VIBRATOR THRESHER

The BRILLIANT SUCCESS of this Grain-Saving, Time-Saving Thresher, is unprecedented in the annals of Farm Machinery, in a brief period it has become widely known and fully established as the "Leading Threshing Machine."

GRAIN RAISERS BEWARE!

Call and examine the most extensive stock of Grain Threshers, which pretends to vie with us in quality, at this time, for saving grain, saving time, and doing fast, thorough and economical work.

Threshermen find it highly advantageous to run a machine that has no "Beaters," "Pickers," or "Agitators" that break the Straw, Long Straw, Heads, Flax, Timothy, Millet and all such difficult grain and seeds, with entire ease and effectiveness, threats to perform—same for its use has been laid by extra saving of grain, unless no "Clinging" grain ever was wasted with the usual Beaters, Pickers, Separate, and Riddle; caught? Of course you find fairer grain by cleaning and well for even at extra toil to get by with other machines are "out of joint."

Have orders made with 6, 8, 10 and 12 horse power Powers, now in the vicinity of Nicholas' Corner, ready for steam power, to install with a lower power.

We are now preparing an Abstract of Title of Emmet county. It will be completed in a few weeks, and we can then furnish Abstracts on short notice.

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable lots in the village, and Farming Lands which we offer at very low figures.

Nov. 1. 80 acres. First-rate farming land situated 21 miles from Traverse City; well timbered with beech and maple, and gently sandy loam; with no solid rock showing. 24 rod, all modern improvements; up in a body, or will sell separate. Well watered, and will be sold cheap for cash. This is one of the best chances in the county for a young settler to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many descriptions farming lands near Petoskey City, which I will sell at reasonable prices. Some of the best in have not fallen improvements, and will easily be made into farms.

Local News.

Something about dogs,—fleas.

THE VAN RAALTE'S time-table appears in this issue.

The soda fountains in this village are in active operation.

A vessel took a cargo of posts from Norwood on Thursday.

The Masons of Petoskey are going to organize a Lodge.

Rev. Geo. D. GILSE lectured at Cheboygan last evening.

Grand Rapids is feasting upon fresh strawberries at $1.15 a quart.

H. I. MILLER, Esq., sail-maker, arrived in town on Thursday.

Rev. Mr. WOODS will preach to-morrow both morning and evening.

A steam yacht is running between Petoskey and Little Traverse.

Dr. LEWIS has made a great reduction in prices of drugs at his store.

THE new Agnes arrived Thursday, and went up Pine Lake for a cargo of wood.

Lots of new goods expected at Carpenter & Bartholomew's next week.

THE propeller Van Raalte made her appearance on Saturday morning last.

The propeller Idaho was to have left Buffalo on Tuesday, and is expected here hourly.

By first boat from shores Fox, Rose & Buttars will receive an immense stock of new goods.

SEE the new advertisement of G. B Mills, the Boyne Falls store keeper, in another column.

ADVANCE (Porter's Mill) will soon have a carriage shop. The building is now being constructed.

THE trouting season is just opening, and anglers begin to enjoy themselves along the streams of the Grand Traverse region.

CARPENTER & BARNEY, of Boyne Falls, appear with a new advertisement this week. Read it, and ponder well its contents.

Don't forget that Wednesday is the day to get grinding done at Porter's Mill. The blacksmith will be at home ready for work the same day.

THE steamer Annie is making regular trips on her old time. A change of time is contemplated, after which her time-table will appear.

Our neighbor Gesherling, of the Progress, has gone to Albion after a wife. He won't have to get up cold mornings next winter and built the fires.

EXCURSION.—The steamer Van Raalte will give an excursion from Petoskey to Charlevoix to-morrow, and will come up the river into Round Lake.

WE see by the Tribune that three of the Barnia line of steamers, the Oneida, and probably another of the Western line, are to wood at Northport the present season.

THERE are now in the warehouse at Porter's Mill, 17 bags of flour which were returned by the Annie last fall. The owner can have the same by paying property and paying charges.

NEW PAPER.—We have received the first copy of the Otsego County Herald, a neat six column paper, to be published at Otsego Lake until further notice, by Charles L. Fuller. Success to it.

LAKE advices from Capt. Franck, who went to Chicago some time ago to purchase a schooner for this trade, state that he was unable to find one there to suit him, and had proceeded to Cleveland to look for one there.

THE L. WER RIVER.—The work on the lower river was completed on Wednesday, and the channel from Lake Michigan to Round Lake has a uniform depth of nine feet. Little difficulty will be experienced in keeping this depth.

THE spars were hoisted in the schooner W. A. Smith, on Monday, and on Tuesday she went up the lake under temporary canvas, after a cargo of potatoes. She will ship top-masts, rigging and canvas to-day, and will be ready to sail Tuesday.

CLAM Lake has been incorporated as a village with Gen. J. Shackleton as president and E. F. Sawyer clerk. This village is beautifully located and seems blessed with energetic public spirited inhabitants. They have made wonderful progress in building up a town.

PERSONAL.—Hon. A. B. Turner, P. M. of Grand Rapids, and proprietor of the Grand Rapids Eagle, arrived in town Wednesday. He is accompanied by Hon. Allen Potter, the new member of Congress from the Kalamazoo District. They are here with their fishpoles, of course.

THE new liquor law is causing many excuses in various parts of the State to shut up.

THE UPPER RIVER.—We are requested to announce that a report is wanted from each member of the Upper River Improvement Committee, to the Chairman, Mr. Morgan, on or before Wednesday next, and if the people do not take active and immediate steps toward assisting the movement, the work will be abandoned. This is a matter of vital interest: to every person who resides in the vicinity of Pine Lake, and we hope it will not be neglected.

MCMANUS BROTHERS, of Traverse City, who have a widely established reputation as Photographers, have pitched their tent opposite this office, and will remain a few days. These are the same artists who visited our village last summer, and whose work now graces so many albums in this vicinity. They are not picture-takers of the order that usually travel around among country villages, but artists, whose work ranks among the best produced in any of the city galleries. Their photographs are noted for being the most life-like, and best finished pictures produced in Northern Michigan. If you desire first class pictures of yourselves and little ones, an opportunity now presents itself. After remaining here a few days, they will remove their establishment to Petoskey.

The Charlevoix SENTINEL after seven years scrubbing and striving for the humble reputation it has at last obtained to reward, as an acknowledgement of its merits! A tribute in its high order of excellence, a tribute to its honor, and doubtless to its self esteem, has been rendered it by the editor of the Traverse Bay Eagle. That gentleman better known as "the man who can't spell properly, says that the Sentinel is one of the best of its local exchanges. All honor to whom honor is due. We congratulate the Sentinel upon its success, and upon its reward.—TRAVERSE BAY PIONEER.

The Progress, which is again temporarily under the management of Danbury, the prince of egotists, unconsciously pays the SENTINEL a compliment in the above; but it is only a portion of what he has to say. In the same article he relieves himself by another splenny and senseless tirade about something which a person of more sense would scorn to notice. But the poor fool must enjoy himself, and we shall cease to object.

EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS.—The workmen are still lustily engaged on the propeller Mouse getting her in readiness for summer travel. The amount to be expended will aggregate $17,000. Two new boilers and other machinery have been put in at an expense of $10,000. Each boiler is 24 feet shell by 14 feet in length; a steam dome 5 feet by 8½ feet, and her cylinders 36 inch bore by 20 inch stroke. She will also have her hull examined and recalked. The Mouse is a new boat, this being her second season. She will run between Petoskey and Mackinaw, in connection with the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, and will be appreciated by the public during the excursion season.—Detroit Tribune.

AN ALTERNATIVE.—We have been allowed one of two alternatives—purchase a box of cigars for our friends, or publish the following, from the Traverse Bay Eagle. Acting on the principle that the cheapest way out of a difficulty is the best, we avail ourself of the last named alternative:

HOW IT APPEARED HIM.—A friend at Charlevoix sends us the following:—"Smith of the Sentinel is another man. Since the schooner built by Campbell & Sce, and launched the other day has been called the Willard A Smith, our editor is assuming a new character. He looks very dignified and acts as though he had just found out that he was destined to be a great man, and that the time is not far distant when he may reasonably expect to be our minister to the Court of St. James, or even President of the United States. It has had a wonderful effect upon him. The night following the launch of the W. A. Smith, our editor had a dream. He became so agitated that he rose up in his bed in a sitting posture, with the bed clothes in his arms, and began to sing:

"I'm afloat, I'm afloat, on the fierce rolling tide,
A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep."

Again his wife called: "Willard, are you mad, drunk, or insane?"

At this he awoke to find that he was not afloat, like his namesake, the schooner and excused his actions by saying that was in consequence of his mind being absorbed in the business of the previous day—that he really thought he was commanding the schooner W. A. Smith. His wife excused him, but cautioned him never to do the like again, at such an unreasonable hour. Smith promised to try and behave himself in the future."

A Trip Northward and Eastward.

On Saturday of last week the propeller Van Raalte transported us from our quiet little town to the lively young village of PETOSKEY.

Like all railroad towns and especially railroad terminus, everything here is bustle and excitement. Buildings going up in all directions, car-loads of lumber upon the track, and the streets full of business and homestead seekers. We were show many comrades by Dr. Little and Mr. Cushman, the landlords, whose houses are crowded to overflowing—and deserve to be among a thousand, for they are well kept.

Our friend Rose of the Democrat is fairly afloat in his newspaper enterprise. He deserves success, and will gain it.

H. O. ROSE showed us through his lime manufactory, and we were pleased and astonished to note the perfection with which the kilns are managed, and the undeveloped wealth which lies in the immense quarry, which undoubtedly extends far back into the terrace, and is really inexhaustible.

We would like to speak of the pleasant visits enjoyed with our legal friends Joslyn and Fairbairn, and others, but want of space forbids.

While we do not share the opinion of many over-sanguine people as to the future greatness of Petoskey, we are of the opinion that it must be a point of considerable importance.

On Monday morning we took the train to very pleasantly situated in the eastern part of this County. We found things on the move here and evidences of growth and progress present themselves on all sides. Wm. Nelson has his mill and hotel in operation, one grinding out lumber for the market and the other lush for the hungry. Mr. Nelson, always courteous, enterprising, and public spirited, is just the man for the "king bee" of an embryo town.

Carpenter & Handy have a store well filled with goods, and seem to be doing a good trade.

G. B. Mills also has a small store on another street, and will undoubtedly build up a good business.

Dr. Lewis and Wm. A. Nelson are building a store building here which will soon be completed and filled up with a stock of drugs and groceries.

Inasmuch as Boyne Falls possesses a good water power and is surrounded by a good farming country, we look upon it as a promising point.

RAYNE.

Monday afternoon Mr. Nelson accompanied us over the loveliest, straightest and best road we ever saw, and passing through a perfect "wooded prairie," to the head of Pine Lake, where we enjoyed the hospitality of one old friend—Uncle Johnny" Miller until Tuesday morning, and then returned to our post of duty by steamer Annie.

☞ The defense in the Tilton-Beecher scandal has got through. A few weeks more or less, and the court will be known, the disagreement of the jury is a foregone conclusion.

Runaway.—M. J. Mathews, traveling agent for the Detroit Paper Company, was robbed of $260 on the 13th while sleeping in his room at the National Hotel at Reed City. The burglars gained an entrance by turning the key in the lock with nippers. Mr. Mathews is a brother of Mrs. E. H. Green of this place.

☞ Deerfield, Lapeer county, has a wild woman. April 18th a company of men searched the woods for her, and found her on the bank of a small stream, nearly destitute of clothing, what she had being torn to shreds by the briers. She had been wading in the water, and the lower portion of her limbs were badly frozen and raised with lice. She was frightened when discovered, and began to talk and act like a maniac. One of the party, a Mr. Smith, took her to his house, and she is becoming more rational, bitterly denouncing the Roman Catholics and Masons, who, she says, have driven her mad—but she will not tell how. She is about thirty years of age, and those who have seen her believe her to have more than ordinary intelligence and education.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - - MAY 29 1875.

☞ Judge Moreton and his family are about to take a trip to Europe.

☞ Mr. Hoglum, a great bee-keeper of Allegan County, lost 150 swarms of bees the past winter.

☞ Darwin's inherited income is $20,000 a year. That's what comes of having a monkey for your ancestor.

☞ The National debt was reduced Two and One-third Millions of dollars during the Month of April.

☞ Another constitutional amendment is to be submitted—to raise the salaries of Judges to $2,500 per annum.

☞ Last Sunday, Henry Ward Beecher received into Plymouth Church 105 new members; seventy-five on profession of faith and thirty by letter from sister churches.

☞ The grand master of Freemasons in Iowa has decided that dancing in the lodge room is inconsistent with the good of the craft. The Masons in the State are very much exercised about it.

☞ According to the Free Press, some of the Detroiters who rushed to California last fall, are writing home for money to rush back with. Let those who are tired of Michigan take warning.

☞ "Ah!" said a teacher, "ah, Caroline Jones, what do you think you would have been without your good father and pious mother?" "I suppose, soon," said Caroline, who was very much struck with the soft appeal, "I suppose, mum, as I should ha' been a hoopher."

☞ The great fire at Oshkosh, Wis., last week, was even more disastrous than at first reported. The total loss is about two and a quarter millions. Three hundred families were left homeless and a large number of business establishments will not be able to go on again.

☞ A bear weighing 500 pounds was killed at a lumber camp on Rifle river, Bruin had been in the habit of stealing the provisions of the men, and only the night before his capture he carried off half a barrel of beef.

☞ After a peaceful intermission of eight or nine years, the Mexicans are going to war again. And the coming conflict bids fair, because it is a religious one, to be the bloodiest and fiercest that has ever shaked the thirsty soil of Mexico.

☞ The long battle between the homeopaths and allopaths has been settled by a kind of compromise, in which the little pills obtain recognition from the large doses. The Legislature appropriates $6 000 for two years to establish a chair of homeopathy at Ann Arbor, under the direction of the Regent. The money cannot be diverted from that purpose.

☞ The Brooklyn bridge is to be beaten before it is finished. Its river abutment is to be constructed over the Frith of Forth, Scotland will-to the lengest in the world. The height will be 150 feet, and number of spans nearly one-hundred. The great span in the center is to be 1,500 feet or nearly one-third of a mile in width and the smaller spans 150 feet. It will cost about $10 000,000.

☞ A Southern paper states that the manufacture of alligator leather has now become an important branch of industry. The skins come chiefly from Florida and Louisiana, and the hunting and skinning of the animals for their hides is extensively pursued. About 20,000 skins are tanned every year. They are manufactured in various parts of the United States, and a number are exported to England and France. The French, owing to their superior methods of tanning, are formidable competitors.

☞ The Beecher-Tilton law suit is now near its close. Most people quietly await the result of the long, tedious and well fought investigation. But a few enterprising reporters take pride in getting by the nose and lead it in front of every one they meet. The editor of the New York Sun, which is in a row with Bonner against Beecher, and very zealous for Tilton, thinks a bad thing for Tilton that he should receive the testimony of the great minister to-day about noon-money. Respectable people everywhere who feel their judgment in favor the Cole will hesitate when they read the last report of the testimony of Beecher to-day.

☞ Newcastown Mercury Journal says that Lieut-Col Hon. H. Nye recently appointed commandant of cadets at West Point, is an old Irish gentleman. He was formerly in the service of the late Emperor Cury from 1850 to 1851, except the regular army at the beginning of the war and served with honor through the whole conflict.

☞ The State Swamp Land Board of Control have determined that they will let the contract for constructing the Mackinaw & Marquette railroad under the provisions of an act of the recent legislature approved April 19th, 1875. Sealed proposals may be sent to said Board, in the city of Lansing, until noon on Tuesday June 1st. A first class railroad must be built, and payment taken wholly in lands to be selected within the counties of Mackinac, Chippewa, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, at a ratio of not exceeding sixteen sections of State Swamp land for each mile to any company that shall construct and have it in running order by Dec ember 31st, 1877.

M Jenalt, of Paris, who knew Prince Louis Napoleon personally, has been writing a life of him. Of his personal appearance he says: "His movements were slovenly and awkward; his form was long, ungainly and angular, was three times out, he is bright; his shoulders were stooped, and at his sides dangled long, listless arms that might have belonged to a boatman and which terminated in hands of extraordinary size, not shapely nor graceful, but force in their perfect. He wore an ill fitting black coat that gave him the appearance of an undertaker, and a black cravat, fastened with a long bow, the ends of which hung carelessly over his coat flaps. Emerging from a quantity of ill worn black or just like a gnome of fire, was a face irrigated by attentive. It was animated at first by a haughty expression and emotionless eyes. I was soon fascinated by the long gazey, the small gaunt, dark hair of adventure, was that character and his physiognomy."

INFLAMMATORY DISEASES.

Dr. Trask has engaged for twenty years in a course of experiments upon the medicinal properties and power of vegetables, separate and combined. At the age of seventy years he succeeded in presenting to the world, as the result of his experiments, a preparation of vegetables which has the power of which in removing inflammation from any part of the human system.

His discovery consists in a combination of those powerful vegetables which will thoroughly and effectually cure all kinds of inflammation.

Certain, it is, that the most malignant and unprecedented cancers which has attended the use of this in the cure of diseases, simply by once or two greatest discovery of the age, and cure of a full and thorough investigation of its properties.

It never fails, when those remains subjected to receive a natural and healthy action to the capillary vessels of the body, and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most inflammatory diseases, and cures are effected in less time and other remedies failed.

Such is the power of its combination, that it penetrates to the very center of the human frame; every bone and muscle, sinew and ligament is reached, and each organ receives of its purifying and healing influence as much as nearly such material as is required.

Numerous instances are on record where this remedy has proved helpful to people in one day more than three months' powerful medicines failed to give relief. In fact, in many cases this has been the case in following up the treatment.

No patient ever used it but what would recommend it to their friends and neighbors.

For Inflammatory Rheumatism this Ointment is the most remedy ever prepared. For Dysentery it should be rubbed in warm.

In miscreative cases out of a hundred, not a single case failed to give satisfaction. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price.

For Nervous Diseases no remedy is equal to it.

Affections of the Spine, Rheumatism, Lameness, Stopped Joints, Bone pain, Pleurisy, Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Asthma, the Tumor Bone, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Swellings, Sore Eyes, Burns, Scalds, etc., will be relieved by the use of this Ointment.

The Ventilator is doing a good business this Spring.

The schooner Emma returned from Alpena Thursday with lath and shingles.

The small schooner Florah left Thursday with a load of potatoes for Alpena.

T. W. Nichols of the head of Pine Lake, gave us a call on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Bonsall, of this village, left on Thursday for Detroit, by propeller Idaho

From the Progress we learn that H. Sap Gillespie cultivated 20 persons at Elk Rapids, Sunday, May 9th.

Locals.—This is the off week; We don't know why it is, but there are no news and nothing to write about.

✓The editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel is puffed up because a schooner has been named after him.—Northport Tribune.

✓ Personal.—S. P. Phelps, M. D., of Big Rapids, arrived in town yesterday, to spend a few days.

Fire.—Two barns on the farm of W. S. Baker, in Norwood township, were destroyed by fire on the night of the 26th.

Married.—Brother Gemberling, of the Progress, has returned home with a wife. The happy couple have our sympathies.

The propeller City of Traverse is now making regular trips between Traverse City and Chicago.

—The Grand Traverse Congregational Conference will hold its next session in Burks, June 15—17, 1875.

The Idaho stopped here on her way up on the 21st and again Thursday on her way down. Capt Penny looks as natural as ever upon the pilot house.

Personal.—Hon. P. M Parks, of Northport, will preach at the school house in this village to-morrow at 10:30: Rev. J. W. Miller at the usual evening hour.

New goods! New goods! Piles of them just received at Carpenter & Bartholomew's. Call and see them. No trouble to show goods or give prices.

✓ Lake Michigan is about 50cms inches lower this season than last, and as a consequence, this effects the depth of water in the harbors along the shore.

The citizens of Alpena have put a dredge at work digging away the bar at the mouth of Thunder Bay River. They intend to have seven feet at low stage of water.

✓ The schooner W. A. Smith left on Thursday for Alpena and Saginaw with a half cargo of about 800 bushels of potatoes. She will return with a cargo of salt.

It is again stated on undoubted authority that the Northern Transportation Company's boats will not run this season. An appraiser has been appointed preparatory to sale of the stock.

The homestead entries were larger at the United States land Office at Traverse City during the month of April than ever before in a single month. They numbered 270.

✓ We understand that Hon. John Nichols, who formerly managed the affairs of Gen. W. Esterly & Co., of this place, has been appointed Superintendent of the Furniture Company's works at Whitewater, Wis.

New classes.—By Idaho Thursday, Fox Rose and Buttars received a full line of new goods of the latest styles and superior quality. The reputation of this house is widely established and the public know just what to expect without telling them.

Tariff.—Hon. A. H. Turner and Hon. Allen Potter returned from the Boyne river Wednesday, with a splendid lot of trout. Mr. Turner and partner Mr. Potter, will retrap later in the season.

Byron Sez feels so big that he won't speak to any of his old acquaintances On reason is that his brother owns a ship, and the other is that he has just received a large stock of groceries and dry goods. Don't see anything to feel big about.

✓ Say Sez one of the owners of the schooner W. A. Smith formerly followed the occupation of house carpenter,—and several buildings stand in this village, as evidences of his skill in this direction. He has abandoned his old calling and gone sailing. He can't go aloft to furl top sails as the office ought, and some one who knows says he has taken a ladder aboard so that he can go from the deck and not be compelled to climb the shrouds.

Gamblers.—"Peg leg Dave," the notorious gambler and his crowd were in town Sunday, and being unable to procure a room anywhere in town he went to "speculate" they appropriated a lumber pile in the mill yard, where considerable money is said to have changed hands in a short time.

The Charlevoix and Elk Rapids papers are both after that notorious individual Ford Home Interesting correspondence is published in the Sentinel relative to Ford's three years sojourn in the State Prison.—Northport Tribune.

Auction.—An auction store, selling prin cipally clothing, has been in operation during the latter part of the week. A boy with a bell has made the day and night hideous with his cries, and the reverbations of his bell.

The schooner Agnes took a cargo of 100 cords of wood from the head of Pine Lake this week, paying $3.00 per cord to enter. She experienced some difficulty in getting out with it, owing to her broad bottom and the narrow channel. She is expected back for another cargo.

Correction.—A horse in the possession of Rev. Mr. Cole, of this village, belonging to one of the Petoskey, came near losing his life at the hands of some villain at Petoskey, recently. Though some motive of spite toward Mr. Cole or the owner of the horse, the scoundrel undertook to sever the jugular vein of the animal but, failing to cut quite deep enough, the animal lived.

The Excursion.—The Fox Rambler, excursion from Petoskey to Charlevoix last Sunday, although not largely patronized, was a pleasant affair. Through with the notorious "Peg leg Dave," and his crowd, a select party of ladies and gentlemen came down, among whom were found et our fat and jolly friend Ross of the Democrat Mr. J. H. Kendell, Railroad conductor, Mr. Benson, proprietor of the McKinnon House, Cross Lake, Mr. Appleton, Ticket Agent at Petoskey, H. O. Rose and others. In the afternoon a small party chartered the schooner Alanson for a trip up the lake, which was greatly enjoyed. We hope there excursions will occur frequently.

Rev. W. Wood,

The Prosecuting Attorney of Emmet County.

After regarding the man who fills a position which ought naturally to imply honor and worth, we are led to inquire what manner of people live in the county of Emmet, that they should elect such a thing as Charles Raymond Ford, to such a position?

The impression on the public mind is that he is an unmitigated scoundrel and social impostor. We learn from the authorities of the States Prison at Jackson that he has served a term of three years penal servitude for the crime of forgery Such being the case, we believe that he is debarred from holding any office under the laws of the State, and also by virtue of his crime, deprived of the right of voting. We should not have considered it worth while to have noticed the matter, but the fact that he has been elected by his associates in the county is of itself a reflection upon the community in general. Such things ought not to be. We believe the office in question should be suppressed. Such a thing as to have the morals of a community at the mercy of any scum of honor or decency (—) and who may become the law of repute, is another proof of the assertion—we practice, now universally admitted, that he has but little regard for the preservation for property by the Board of Auditing Attorney.—Progress

Cheap Schools.

There is no doubt that the chief reason why the most need to do away with the Country Superintendence of Schools is, that there was a desire to cheapen the cost of common Schools. It was alleged that the salaries of County Superintendents were too high, and that every township could appoint its own Superintendent and have the business done cheaper. Many townships have done so, and the result is, that in the majority of cases the schools have been ruined. Inspectors were appointed by the Boards of Education in many townships, who had no qualifications for the position, and who were not required to attend any meetings of inspectors. Another cause was the appointment of inspectors who were not competent to judge the qualifications of teachers. Many townships have done away with the system of inspection altogether, and have left the whole matter of examining teachers in the hands of the Director. Under this system good teachers are driven out of the schools, and poor ones are employed. Under this system good teachers are driven out of the schools, and poor ones are employed.—Grand Rapids Herald.

Rather the unnecessary absence of the writer has the matter went from Shipland to inform the Progress. Of course every body can see through our forgetting either the Gentleman's Sentinel or the Traverse City Eagle. By the way, we are pleased to notice the young man does not spell home with a "u" any more—knowing that he has attended "spelling schools" within the past few weeks.—Eagle.

Gleesons as a monopolist is proud of $14,750.00 as bonds! Individualism, below a floating debt of $4,672,949. Per otherwise last year footed $197,400,000, while the number of lives that yielded up their existence to the ravishing hooves forced up 1,820,621 only 46,423 less than all the hungerers of Cincinnati, St. Louis, Louisville and Milwaukee combined. And they don't kill off her hogs.

✓ The Charlevoix Sentinel intend upon its fourth year a few days since. No paper ever worked more earnestly and faithfully for the development of the region in which it established than the Sentinel has done. It has been successful and seems to be winning it.—Herald.

MORTGAGE SALE.

By which default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage bearing date the 1st day of March, A. D. 1873, executed by Elias Pratt, of Bay Township, Antrim county, Michigan, party of the first part, to Charles H. Parker, of Grand Traverse County, Michigan, party of the second part, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for said county of Antrim, on the 1st day of March, A. D. 1873, in Liber 15 of Mortgages, on page 200, which said mortgage was duly assigned by said Charles H. Parker, party of the second part, to Jacob Hoffman, of Grand Traverse County, Michigan, party of the third part, by an assignment dated the 1st day of March, A. D. 1873, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds aforesaid, in Liber 15 of Mortgages, on page 201, on which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Three Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars and Fifty-two Cents, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, and the whole thereof remaining unpaid, and the power of sale contained in said mortgage having become operative by reason of such default, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, and all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the County of Antrim, and State of Michigan, known and described as follows, to-wit: The South West quarter of the North East quarter of Section Thirty-three (33), in Township Thirty-two (32) North, Range Five (5) West, containing forty acres of land more or less, which said premises will be sold at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the County Court House in the village of Bellaire, in said county of Antrim, (that being the place of holding the Circuit Court for said county of Antrim) on Monday, the 3rd day of May, A. D. 1875, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and costs of sale as provided by statute and in said mortgage agreed.

Mr. Lincoln is Postmaster.

Springfield Illinois Journal:

Mr. Lincoln before he moved to Springfield Illinois, was Postmaster in a small Western town. The office was poor and Lincoln was poorer than the office. It was known that he was hard up, and it was soon found that he would accept any position. A friend thinking like others, that Lincoln could do more with the office than the business required, went to Washington and got the appointment for him. Mr. Lincoln thanked his friend and went home and told his wife that now they had the old cooking—and he did the cooking in the family. It was soon found that the General received more letters than all the rest of the town. When any one wanted to know if there was any thing for him he would call and ask Mr. Lincoln, and he would look over the letters, and if there was any for the man who called he would hand it to him. If there was none he would say so. He was not long in finding out that the people were paying the postage on the letters, and he soon found out that the postage was due on most of the letters. He would look at the letter, and if it was from a friend he would say, "Here is a letter from my friend Jones, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Smith, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Brown, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Johnson, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Thompson, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Williams, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Wilson, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Young, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it." Or, "Here is a letter from my friend Zimmerman, I will keep it until he comes in and pays the postage on it."

Cheaper to the Sea.

Last week we called attention to the fact that the surplus of railroad power was merely passing sentiment. We showed that the control of the Canal States from all has already gone for beyond the Alleghanies and at the present state of affairs must, in the life time of those now living, cross the Mississippi.

To-day we present a proof of significant railway news demonstrating that for cheap commerce of the country with an outpour the immense superiority on its westward journey, it is soon one presents itself.

The Illinois Central railway, for the spring and summer, advertises through lines to Havana and return for $60. And also from Chicago to the city of Mexico and return for $164. In both cases the steps are New Orleans. This is the first step toward making New Orleans the outlet of the Mississippi Valley and the great North and West, and Chicago their great commercial center or entrepot. It is the first result coming of the Act of Congress granting to a railway the right of way through the public lands of our great continental domain.

The reservation which this land monopoly makes in favor of the city of New Orleans as a cheap and convenient local port, already the coast-wise trade of Philadelphia and New York is gone or at least we cannot see how for the whole country but only for that of the Mississippi Valley and the great North and West, and Chicago must be the commercial center or entrepot of the Eastern trade, carrying off the Atlantic coast and in making it a port of call for the vessels of our great continental trade

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - - JUNE 5, 1875.

☞ Jeff. Davis is swinging about among the friends of the lost cause utter ing his old treasonable sentiments.

☞ L. S. Trott, of Muskegon, who is well known as a lumberman, eased Identlow Hall for insulting his (Trott's) wife. So the telegraph reports

☞ General Sanchez is going to the plains with his bride for a wedding tour and then. Custer with 1 200 bold cavalry men will accompany him.

☞ The Pope's last birthday anniversary was celebrated with unusual joy Pio None, of all the Popes, alone surpasses the years of St. Peter in the chair.

☞ When the Beecher trial commenced, the report told how the parties thereto were their clerks and furs. Now the reports relate how they wag their fins, and the end is not yet.

☞ According to Rowell's new Newspaper directory, over 1,000 newspapers have failed during the year, bringing a loss to subscribers, publishers and advertisers of over $8,000,000. Not a very good year for newspapers either.

☞ In the British House of Commons, Mr. Bourke, the under Foreign Secretary, in response to an inquiry of Sir Charles Dilke as to the continental situation, said the government has received the most satisfactory assurances from Berlin of the maintenance of the peace of Europe.

☞ Among the great men who are to ride in the procession with the Detroit Knights Templar in New York, to morrow, is Gen. Tom Thumb. As it is becoming so great a man, he will have a carriage and four all to himself, but Tom has taken thirty-two of the degrees and is reaching for the thirty-third.

☞ Vice-President Henry Wilson is said to have met his old friend, Mrs. Jefferson Davis, on the street at Memphis, and report says they wandered hand-in-hand into an icecream saloon, and three cocoanut-custards and ice, recalled the tender recollections of the past. Report prefers lively lies, but the story is touching and and tomthaume even for fiction.

☞ Governor Coke, of Texas, says Jeff Davis is the greatest of Southern men No one will quarrel with Coke about that after reflecting upon what a condition Southern greatness as exemplified within the last fifteen years. Since Davis made that speech at Houston, they have actually begun talking about giving him the Democratic nomination for the Presidency !

☞ Reports in the Detroit Tribune from 20 counties on the Lower Peninsula, some of them among the best wheat producing counties in the State, show that the prospects for a fair crop of wheat are more promising owing to late rains, than a few weeks since. The grass crop in some counties promises well. The season, from all reports, will be from 10 days to two weeks later than usual.

☞ Ex-Senator Carl Schurz was to have sailed for Europe in the illustrated steamer Scuthler, the Captain being an old friend of his. He was detained in New York, however, to attend the dinner given in his honor at Delmonico's and he left in the Pomerania, two days after the sailing of the Schiller. It stated that a passenger gave up his cabin in the Pomerania to him and took another in the Schiller.

☞ Miss Anna Semmes, a daughter of the so-called Admiral, was lately married at the residence of her father in Mobile. The bride and groom stood under a rebel flag, which was presented to the so-called Admiral when he was Captain of the Alabama by London ladies. The position may be ominous for the married couple. There is no reason why a union like should be celebrated under a symbol of disunion.

☞ The condition of affairs in Nevada county, Iowa, is not very reassuring Gov. K. Keekman, a resident of Nevada county, was accused of burning his son-in-law's barn. The people of Nevada council thought he deserved death. They warned him to leave the county. Keekman had recourse to law, and prosecuted the arrest of several of the men who threatened his life. The cases remained undecided by taking him out of his bed and hanging him. If they have a man in Nevada county, simply up on suspicion of burning a barn, what would be the fate of a man caught in the act.

☞ Zach Chandler, private citizen formerly of Detroit, Michigan, is intending to give up his Washington residence and go home to Detroit. In order to prove that he is not sore over his past political defeat, he will return to the bosom of his friends, and there forget the cares and annoyances of ambition. He starts next Monday or Tuesday, most of his furniture and other personal effects having been shipped already.

☞ The latest invention in the life-boat line is a boat with a broad line of corks at the load-line, so constructed that it sails equally well either side up. It will not upset easily; but if it does upset, the bottom and keel fall down through the center and lower it in, just as it was before, a perfect boat only what was the bottom has become the top. With this invention, and an army of lifesaving guard after the Paul Boyton fashion, the United States might become a great naval power without any ships.

☞ The sad news that Mrs. Lincoln has been declared insane, and her attempt at self-destruction upon being formerly discharged of an unsound mind, and came pre-famed regret, and will serve as an excuse for many acts of that unhappy lady which have been very unchariably commented upon both by the press and the public at large. We hope that many will find cause to recall their harsh judgements Our high respect for the noble and illustrious statesman of whom she is the relict, should inspire the deepest sympathy of every true American.

☞ The friends of thorough education in the important branches of natural history will learn with regret that the Jefferson School on Detroit Island (with the early history of which Agassiz's name was connected) will be closed this year through lack of funds. The institution was one of admirable promise, and has done remarkably good work. Some men of wealth should at once provide for it an adequate endowment, as the closing of its halls of instruction is a very decided calamity to the cause of advanced education on this continent.

☞ Mr. S. H. Long, a Chicago merchant has in his possession a rare curiosity in the shape of a petrified rattlesnake measuring ten feet in length, and showing distinctly the formation of twenty five rattles and a button. The formation is perfect, and represents a snake in the act of creeping. Should this be the serpent which played the dance with our first parents in the garden of Eden its value would be untold but it is more probable that it is a counterfeit manufactured since. It was taken from a cave in the vicinity of Alton, Ill., some thirty feet under the ground.

THE THIRD TERM.

President Grant Writes a Letter on the Subject.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—President Grant has written the following letter to Gen Harry White, president of the recent Pennsylvania Republican State Convention:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D. C., May 26, 1875.

DEAR SIR—A short time subsequent to the Presidential election of 1872, the press, a portion of it hostile to the Republican party, and particularly to the administration, started the cry of Cæsarism and the third term calling loudly for me to define my position on the latter subject. I believed I sustained the dignity of the office which I have been twice called upon to fill to answer such a question before the subject should be approached by a competent authority to make a nomination, or by a body of such dignity and authority as not to make the reply a fair subject of ridicule. In fact I have been surprised that so many sensible people in the Republican party should permit their enemy to force upon them and their party an issue which cannot add strength to the party no matter how met. But a body of the dignity and party authority of a convention to make nominations for the State officers of the second State in the Union having considered this question, I deem it not improper that I should now speak.

In the first place, I never sought office for a second or even a first nomination. To the first I was called from a life position, one created by Congress expressly for me for supposed services rendered to the Republic. The position vacated I prized. It would have been most agreeable to me to have resided it until such time as Congress might have consented to my retirement with the rank and a portion of the emoluments which so much needed, to a home where the balance of my days might be spent in peace and the enjoyment of domestic quiet, released from the cares which have oppressed me so constantly for the past fourteen years. But I was made to believe that the public good called for sacrifice.

Without seeking office for the "second term," the nomination was tendered me by an unanimous vote of the delegates of all the States and Territories, selected by the Republicans of each to represent their whole number for the purpose of making their nomination. I cannot say that I was not pleased at this and at the overwhelming endorsement which their action received at the election following. But it must be remembered that all the sacrifices, except that of comfort had been made in accepting the first term. Then, too, such a fire of personal abuse and slander had been kept up for four years, notwithstanding the conscientious performance of my duties to the best of my understanding, though I admit, in the light of subsequent events, many times subject to fair criticism, no enforcement from the people, who alone govern republics, was a gratification and enjoyed.

Now for the third term. I don't want it any more than I did the first. I would not write or utter a word to change the will of the people in expressing and having their choice. The question of the number of terms allowed to any one executive can only come up fairly in the shape of a proposition to amend the Constitution—a proposition which all political parties can participate, fixing the length of the time, or the number of terms, for which any one person shall be eligible for the office of President. Until such an amendment is adopted, the people cannot be restricted in their choice by resolutions further than they are now restricted, as to age, nationality, etc. It may happen in the future history of this country that to change an Executive because he has been eight years in office will prove unfortunate, if not disastrous. He often that any man could elect himself President, or even renominate himself as president. It lies entirely upon the intelligence and patriotism of the people to suppress such a thing possible. Any man can destroy his chances for office, but no one can force an election or even a nomination.

To recapitulate: I am not, nor have I been a candidate for renomination. I would not accept a renomination if it were tendered, unless it should come under such circumstances as to make it an imperative duty—no circumstance not likely to occur.

I appreciate the confidence over which has prompted for the honorary which position I have been very unchariably commented upon both by the press and the public at large. We hope that many will find cause to recall their harsh judgements Our high respect for the noble and illustrious statesman of whom she is the relict, should inspire the deepest sympathy of every true American.

Very truly yours,
U. S. GRANT.

Charges Reasonable.

We have some of the most desirable lots of Indian selections of Petoskey Lands which we offer at very low figures.

No. 1. 80 acres. First rate farming land situated in section from Little Traverse city; well timbered with hardwood and pine; also a good orchard; will be sold cheap. E. ½ of S. of section 30, Town 36 North, Range 8 west.

No. 2. 40 acres. S. ½ of N. E. ¼ of section 24 North of Range 8 west 31 miles from Petoskey City, with 10 acres cleared and under cultivation; will be sold at a bargain.

No. 3. 160 acres. N. E. ¼ of sec. 1, and the N. ½ of N. W. ¼ of sec. 22. Will be sold in parcels to suit purchasers as it is a large creek running through the whole length, with good water power. Will be sold cheap and will be sold on time if desired. This is one of the best locations in the county for a person wishing to engage in the milling business.

We have also a great many desirable farming lands near Petoskey, Bay View, which I will sell at reasonable prices. Some of the Lands have old bearing fruit orchards, and will readily be made into farms.

SWEET BUTTER at Byron Rice's.

THE Idaho arrived yesterday afternoon from Buffalo.

HUNGARIAN grass seed at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

THE propeller Oneida worded at Norwood on Monday.

THE schooner City of Chicago took a cargo of wood from Norwood this week.

✓ TELEGRAPH.—The Charlevoix telegraph office is commencing to do a good business.

IF you want a good appetizer try some of that pure horse radish at Carpenter & Bartholomew's

DIED.—In Hacks, Antrim County, on the 20th, Mrs. Nancy R. Bliss, wife of W. R. Bliss, aged 63 years.

We call attent on to the business card of Chas. W. Ingalls & Son, of Little Traverse, in another column.

PROF. Winchell has been employed by the G. R. & I. R. R. Co. to make a geological survey of their lands.

THE Republi says: Last Friday Mr. D. D. Campbell and Captain Allen, of Elkhart, Ind., caught 250 trout in Acme.

EXCURSIONS.—The schooner Emma Capt. Way, is taking on a cargo of young evergreens for the Milwaukee and Chicago markets.

DAM BROKE AWAY.—The saw mill dam belonging to Bernard Barns, in Manton, in this county, broke away on Thursday Loss about $200.

CARPENTER & Bartholomew have just received another invoice of plows. Including shovel plows, cultivators, etc., also a stock of furniture.

THE propeller Mohawk wooded here Tuesday evening, on her way up. She wooded at Norwood Monday morning on her way down.

THE steam barge Pilot, from Frankfort, was at our dock on Saturday last. She was on her way to Petoskey after lime stone for the furnace.

SECOND editor of the Chicago Times, is one of the owners of the Elk Rapids Iron Works. Will the Progress please correct us if we are wrong.

IF you are fond of pumpkin pies go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's and buy a can of their pumpkin flour. It makes better pies than fresh pumpkin.

TRAINS.—The G. R. & I. R. R. are running two trains to Petoskey now. One train leaves at 8 o'clock every evening and one every morning.

THE liquor tax law takes immediate effect and the supervisors have been provided with the necessary blanks and the saloons are being assessed.

THE Progress says: About 200 cords of wood belonging to the Elk Rapids Iron Company were destroyed by fire this week at the head of Torch Lake.

WHAT are we to have here in the shape of a celebration the coming Fourth? We would like to hear the sentiments of some of our readers on the subject.

MILLINERY.—Mrs. H. L. Miller has received a full line of new millinery goods of latest styles, and the prices of which cannot fail to give satisfaction.

THE schooner Stanton took a cargo of posts at Norwood yesterday. Capt. Johnson came to this village and called on us, also Andrews on short notice.

NOTICE.—Byron See has received a fresh supply of groceries and dry goods, and will not be undersold. Call and examine goods and learn prices. No trouble to show goods.

AN exchange, published out a thousand miles from here, gives the particulars of a supposed fatal murder. We have always supposed murder was "necessarily fatal" in most cases.

NEW ADVERTISEMENT.—The new advertisement of Fox, Rose & Buttars appears in this issue. People who desire to get the worth of their money cannot do better than to call at their establishment.

GEORGE I. Bells, Michigan Indian agent is gone to Lake Superior to distribute goods and farming implements to the Chippewas of Houghton county. He will also deliver them patents for their lands.

THE scow Agnes arrived back from Milwaukee on Thursday, and went up the lake for a cargo of wood. In passing through the bridge under sail, she made a large rent in her foresail, and also did some damage to the rigging of the schooner Sweepstakes, which vessel was lying near the bridge.

THE propeller Fountain City arrived up from Buffalo on the 26th, and wooded here on Thursday morning that on her way down. Capt. James Gibson, the same genial gentleman who has commanded her for the past six seasons, is still at the helm

EXTENSION.—On Saturday last we visited the store of T. W. Nichols, at the head of Pine Lake and found a building well stocked with merchandise. Mr. Nichols believes in liberal advertising, and we have the copy for his advertisement, which will appear next week. Look out for it.

MR. PATTERSON.—Mr. Patterson, formerly first mate of the propeller Oneida, commands the propeller Plymouth this season. When Capt. Patterson is in his room, or upon the after guard bridge, the steamer is always "down by the head." He only weighs about 300 pounds.

THE editor of the Clam Lake News finds consolation in the rumor that the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad Company intend paying their taxes, which will put some money in the Treasury of Wexford county and liquidate some of the outstanding county orders.

HOME.—The people of the new county of Otsego have elected the editor of their paper County Clerk and Register of Deeds, and have made his salary $1,200. They demonstrate by this act that they appreciate the benefits of a paper in the development of a new region. It was a wise and economical movement.

FISH.—The Progress says, concerning the manual of all contemptible, sneaking villians: "Ford needs a new suit of clothes. We'll furnish the feathers if you'll furnish the tar, brother Smith." The matter is settled then; come on with your feathers, neighbor. The chances are, however, that the people of Emmet county will get in ahead of us.

HAZE.—The snow Fleetwood took out a cargo of lumber, wood, etc., on Wednesday. We understand the Captain offered $4 per cord for hemlock bark. This is all the better for the people, but, at present prices of bark at the tanneries, we fail to see how any thing can be made at it by paying that price.

✓ ARRIVED.—A. Eastman, Esq., of this village, arrived home from Detroit yesterday, whither he had been to put his wife under medical treatment. She is under the care of an eminent physician, who reports her case critical, but not without hope. Her many friends in Charlevoix unite in earnest hopes for her speedy recovery.

LECTURE.—Rev. A. J. Wheeler, lecturer at Northville, on the 17th inst., on Tuesday evening his subject was "Solomon's Temple," and on Wednesday evening "The Tabernacle," was the subject. Mr. Wheeler is a very fine model of the temple, which makes his lectures much more entertaining. Will he come to Charlevoix?

✓ TRADE.—No region in Michigan can boast of such rich resources as can be found in this county. Excellent facilities for transit, and beautiful scenery, and good hotel accommodations together with our aggressive commercial with the outside world, constitute this the pleasantest summer resort of the North.

✓ THE UPPER PENN.—Although we learn that the people in some localities are subscribing quite liberally toward the upper river improvement, no steps are being taken toward commencing the work. Again we take occasion to urge the people into prompt action in this matter. Hot little is required of each if all take hold.

THE ANNIE.—By reference to the advertisement of the steamer Annie it will be seen that her time of running has been changed. An arrangement has been entered into with Wm. Nelson, of Boyne Falls, whereby a daily stage is to be run from the head of Pine Lake to the railroad, connecting with trains from both ways. This will open out a direct route of travel for the large number of pleasure-seekers who visit this locality, and will prove a profitable plan for our steamer.

✓ EDUCATIONAL.—We learn that Miss Jessie E. Martin, a graduate of the Normal School at Whitewater, Wis., has been engaged to teach in District No 2 (the Penn neighborhood) in this Township. This is a movement in the right direction. If we are to have our schools upon a proper basis, we must employ professional teachers—those who not only have a competent knowledge of the branches to be taught, but have been trained to teach, and have special preparation and fitness for their important duties. Some of our School Districts are putting up a better class of school buildings, furnishing them with better appointments, and increasing their teachers' salaries. These should command a higher grade of service; and we heartily congratulate School District No. 2 upon their good fortune in being able to secure a first-class teacher for their first school in their new school house.

THE MUSKEGON SCANDAL.

Lieut. Gov. Holt's Explanation of His Share in the Matter.

The account in Lieut. Gov. Henry H. Holt, at St. Ignace, on Sunday last by a citizen of that town named Trott, who charged Mr. Holt with insulting his wife, was reported in our columns on Tuesday morning. Mr. Holt was quite severely beaten by Trott, and Mr. Trott subsequently received upon violent measures and rambled about town with a revolver, threatening to shoot Holt. He was finally calmed down, however, and the original cause compelled "trouble" there. He is unfortunately blind. Mr. Holt gave cause for the charge made against him. His own statement in regard to the matter is published in the Muskegon News, which believes that it is the correct one. We quote it, as follows:

That there is two sides to every story is always true, and although the statement that truth compels me to make is not entirely complimentary to myself, still I think the public should have an opportunity to know what I have to say before pass judgement upon the late occurrence with which my name has been so prominently connected.

I have been acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Trott for a long time. My first acquaintance with her dating back some fifteen years when she came before the Board of School Inspectors for the township of Muskegon for examination as a teacher, I then being a member of the Board. I have known her since that time, and have always regarded her as a person against whom no reflection could justly be spoken, and have always respected her and her husband as my friends. Mr. Trott for several years has been employed by Messrs. Davis & Co., whose office is in the same building and on the same floor with mine, and on leaving for meals as she sometimes has, on passing my office, if the door was open or I met her in the hall she would occasionally stop and chat a moment. This occurred last Friday; my office door at the time being open. During conversation I called her attention to a large vase filled with plants, saying her that it had been standing there through the winter, and that they had not grown, although there had been no fire in the office, excepting occasionally, since the 1st of January. While standing there talking about the plants I leaned forward as if to kiss her, at the same time putting my hand upon her shoulder. She said something in the way of refusal, and then I left the office without any effort to detain her. I made no remark and did nothing further than I have stated that could by any means be construed as impropriety. I regarded the matter at the time as a joke, and intended and thought nothing further.

This is all there is out of which these occurrences have arisen, and no one can regret more than I do that so much has been stated by them.

HENRY H. HOLT.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, - - JUNE 12, 1875.

☞ The Emperors of Germany and Russia have had a meeting, and drank each others health, and acted generally like men.

☞ The Methodist church at Huron Harbor was struck by lightning at six o'clock on the 2d and destroyed. The loss is $15,000no insurance.

☞ Cardinal McCloskey received a magnificent present from the ladies at Mount St. Vincent, in the form of a diamond cross, valued at $20,000.

☞ Gen. Sheridan, after forty-two years of "single blessedness" has fallen in to the snares of Cupid at last. His marriage took place on Thursday evening.

☞ The Catholic Bishops of Prussia have decided to dissolve the religious orders which the State tolerates rather than see them subjected to governmental supervision.

☞ A $1,000 diamond was stolen from the hilt of a sword of Gen. Sheridan's at his house in Chicago, the other day, and he suspects a man pretending to be a New York graphic artist of the crime.

☞ Cornelius Vanderbilt entered upon his eighty-second year the 27th of May; although so far advanced, he is as keen for business in the stock market as ever and still rules that body.

☞ The late John C. Breckinridge was one of three of the most exalted Masons in the United States—Gen. Albert Pike of Arkansas, and Col. De Saussure, of South Carolina, holding equal rank.

☞ The daughter of Chief Justice Waite is about to marry Surgeon Roth of the United States Navy. And Roth said, entreat me not to leave thee; for whither thou goest I will go, where thou Waitest, I will Waite, etc.

☞ An old gentleman arrived from Europe on Friday, and he had no sooner entered his hotel than some one spoke to him about the Beecher trial. "What," said he, "ain't that thing over yet?" And he spied for Europe on Saturday.

☞ Steam fog horns are to be put up at Milwaukee and Grand Haven the present season. They are a great convenience to navigation, and it is openly asserted that had the Scilly Islands contained one, the Schiller disaster could never have occurred.

☞ The plague of the fat west—the grasshoppers—according to all reports have not been as devastating in their ravages this year as last, for which all feel thankful. Had their devouring trip been taken this year, they would have bankrupted that portion of the country.

☞ Shrewd frontiersmen who have been watching the Black Hills negotiations, predict that the Sioux, the troops and the miners are likely to soon exchange shots. If plain talking will excite Indian wrath, the Sioux have heard enough of it.

☞ The salary of the district attorney of the city of New York is $12,000 only, but he has assistant district attorneys who are paid $37,500 each. If anybody asks you why this great difference exists between the salary of the principal and that of the assistants, tell them you don't know.

☞ Detroit proposes to compromise with the saloonists and allow them to keep their places open from 5 o'clock Sunday until the statutory hours for closing, 11 p. m. This is a kind of compromise which we do not believe in. Saloons and liquor can do such enough for the devil on the six week days and the Sabbath should be left to the Lord and be surrounded by as good influences as possible.

☞ The Pope has addressed a letter to M. Depoloup, the Bishop of Orleans, on the Freemasons. Pius refers to the notorious character of the Order, which, he says, originated the boasted liberties of conscience, of public worship, and of the press. What a wicked set of fellows those Freemasons are!

☞ Hon. H. Wilson, Vice-President of the United States, arrived in Chicago from the West on the 2d, and says expected to spend a day or two there. During his western trip he has visited Ohio, Ky., Tennessee, Missouri Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska and Iowa. Report says his health is greatly improved.

☞ The President presented Sitting Bull with a fine ride, nicely mounted, and inclosed in a leather case on brass mountings. Surrounding the lock is engraved Sitting Bull. From the President, for bravery and friendship."

☞ "Yes, boys," said Nancy Bell, a female blacksmith of Iowa, as she straddled a horse's leg and yanked off a shoe, "I was brought up to this business and so was my mother; and there ain't no Beecher scandals in our family, for a fact."

☞ One of the crew of the ill-fated Schiller was arrested in Hoboken for being drunk, a few days before the vessel sailed, and sent to jail for five days. His time expired the day after the Schiller sailed, and he escaped the fate of his companions. This statement is made as a matter of news, and not to encourage bibulous persons in the habit of getting drunk in the hope of thereby escaping marine disasters.

An Awkward Question to Answer.

The Rev. Hugh Hart ministered for many years to a shore handful of hearers in Aberdeen. His reminiscities probably impaired his usefulness; for the many stories are told, but doubtless they were magnified by the story tellers. He "held forth" one sabbath evening on the nonsense of contradicting a person who tells extravagant or improbable stories by the blunt interruption of "that's a lee!" or "you're losing me!" "It is sufficient," said he "when we shut the word o' ye brither, to just gie a whistle, and cry 'end,' to his ken ye're not to be imposed on."

A few minutes afterward enlarging on another topic, he reminded his hearers of their origin by saying that the "first man was made o' clay, an' laid down on the dyke-side to dry." Instantly a loud whistle and the monosyllable "end" greeted the preacher from the gallery, who passed rather awkwardly to inquire "who dared to ca' him a leer?" "Nobody, mester," cried the same voice, evidently that of an attentive and dauntless listener, "but tell me fa' biggit the dyke?" The preacher's answer is not recorded.

Couldn't be Bluffed.

A couple of horsemen coming into the city the other day from the interior, overtook an old man and his wife seated in the bottom of a mule cart. Feeling in high spirits, one of the men called out:

"Hello, uncle, how much will you take for your wife, cash down?"

"Oh, I dunno," he slowly replied.

"Well, name your price."

"How much'll ye give?" he asked.

"Ten dollars."

"Take her."

The horsemen didn't know what to say, and were gathering up the reins, when the old woman jumped to the ground and exclaimed:

"Paw over the dacats, mister; I like the old man and he likes me; but we are a family which can't be bluffed by no man on horseback."

The "bluffers" got out of the scrape by riding off at full speed.—Vicksburg Herald

"SHTOP A LEETLE!"

Spring Harbor,

HEAD OF PINE LAKE.

The Secret of Wonderful Growth and Success.

Way up in the north is a very smart town,
In the country all over it is gaining renown,
It's in Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.
The soil is so rich if you plant a small nail,
To give a big yield it never will fail.
It surely is so for the people all say,
That nail is a crowbar the very next day.
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.

There are the merchants who're up to their trade,
Will sell you fine goods before they are made,
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town;
They don't stay a story so low as to sell you small rate,
But their secret of trade is they all are cash,
And their efforts are crowned by millions of wealth,
While they all do enjoy the most perfect health,
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.

There there are the doctors they'll cure you a dime,
With syrups and drugs and various pills—
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.

If they on you once make a professional call,
Again in your life you'll be ill not at all,
If they call once or twice you'll then feel so clever,
You'll not die at all, but live on forever—
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.

Then there is the "Journal" the sheet of the age,
To give all the news it doth always engage,
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.

And the editor knows his business so well,
Believe what I say, for the truth I do tell
If a man is murdered and left in his gore,
It will give you the news two or three days before,
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.

Now I suppose you'll be glad to all know,
How strangely it happens that to be so—
In Charlevoix county and Spring Harbor Town.
When the cause I do give, you all will confess,
The secret that leads to perfect success
They get their goods cheaper than ever before,
For they buy all they use at Nichols's store.

YOU'RE CRAZY

TO PAY SUCH TERRIBLE PRICES FOR GOODS, WHEN BY CALLING AT THE "REGULATOR"

You can purchase them at least THIRTY PER CENT. less than at any other place in this part of Charlevoix County. That is what we say at the "REGULATOR" We have lots of

NEW GOODS,

And more coming daily. We have Boots and Shoes for men; We have all kinds of Shoes for Ladies; we have Boots and Shoes and all kinds of nice things for the little ones. We have all kinds of DRESS GOODS; we have all kinds of CLOTH to make clothes for the men and boys. We have

PORK AND FLOUR,

And all kinds of Groceries such as

SUGARS,
TEAS,
COFFEES,
SPICES,
OILS.

WE ALSO HAVE A LARGE ASSORTMENT OF

Farming Implements,

SUCH AS PLOWS, SHOVEL-PLOWS, SCYTHES, SNATHS, RAKES, FORKS, HOES, CULTIVATORS AND DRAGS.
ALSO AN ASSORTMENT OF TINWARE.

So, if you'd buy cheaper than ever before, go to NICHOLS' Store, on Pine Lake store, where the water doth roar, and all people, and more, say, that never before, in the country all over, did they see people pour into the door of a store, where they buy lots of goods and then buy some more; for they say he sells lower by thirty per cent. or perhaps more, than ever before, at any man's store; so after reading this o'er, if still you'd know more, Tommie will TURN THE CRANK TO THE MACHINE.

And tell you if you wish to astonish yourself with low prices, that you must go to 99999 Gold Dust Avenue, nearly opposite to the Second National Bank, and directly opposite to the Metropolitan Hotel, Spring Harbor.

BARK peeling has commenced.

WE want 100 more subscribers.

THE Idaho wooded here Thursday morning.

THE propeller Nebraska stopped here on Tuesday

NORWOOD will soon have their telegraph line in operation.

MCLEAN has just put in a new billiard table at his house.

THE little schooner Flora arrived back from Alpena Thursday evening.

CIRCUS.—Sadler's American circus exhibits at Petoskey June 15th.

BROTHER LEACH, of the Herald, in his last issue, gives us a sly poke about our grammar.

MR. CROSIER is plastering and otherwise improving the upper portion of his drug building.

THE scow Agnes arrived here yesterday from Milwaukee, after wood and posts for Henry Morgan.

MR. RICE and family, of Mackinaw, were passengers on the Idaho Thursday. They were on their way home.

BEAR KILLED.—Ammon Beers, of Royaline township, in this county, killed a monstrous bear on Monday last.

√ FOURTH OF JULY.—Again we urge the people to take some steps toward celebrating the Fourth of July.

√ THREE hundred dollars have been subscribed by the denizens of Big Rapids, with which to celebrate the Fourth of July.

GARDEN.—We learn with pleasure that Mrs. A Butters, who is in Detroit under medical treatment, is rapidly gaining strength.

NOTICE.—The public are notified that A. Stover's grist mill will be closed from July 1st until further notice, for the purpose of repairing.

FOR WOOD.—The schooner Florette took a cargo of lumber from Norwood dock on Thursday. This makes the eighth vessel that has loaded at that point this season.

√ URGE RIVER.—The work of digging the sand from the channel of the upper river is in successful progress, and we shall soon have a uniform depth of eight feet of water therein.

TRAVERSE CITY Odd Fellows contemplate erecting a hall of their own, this season. It will be 50x33, with ante-rooms 17x33. The lower portion will be rented for stores.

REAL ESTATE.—L. D. Bartholomew has bought of J. S. Dixon, a lot on south side of Round Lake; also a lot of Mrs. H. L. Clifford, making good dockage for shipping purposes.

SOME fountain owners are not feeling in high spirits. They silently crave Old Sol to shower down his rays and force the thermometer up in the 100. They have an eye to business.

√ FISHING.—Two gentlemen from abroad have commenced fishing at this point, and have erected buildings at the mouth of the river. They propose to stay here during the season.

LAND Office business for May was as follows: Homestead entries, 69, covering 7,550 acres. Final proofs, 34, covering 3,501 acres. Homestead declarations, 88, covering 13,200 acres.—Herald.

√ I. O. OF M. B.—It is announced that the Independent Order of Moss Backs will have a public parade on the streets of Charlevoix July Fourth. A meeting of the society is called for to-night, at the Town Hall

EXCURSIONS.—The propeller Van Raalte gave an excursion to Cross Village last Sunday, which was well patronized. Next Sunday she gives another excursion from Petoskey to Charlevoix, and a large crowd is expected.

PERSONAL.—Rev. Geo. L. Cole and lady left here on Tuesday for Albion, where the Elder delivers an address before one of the college societies next week. Mrs. Cole will not return to Charlevoix, owing to the near approach of Conference time.

√ WANTED.—Four girls at the Lewis House, Torch Lake. One must cook; one pastry cook; one chambermaid, and one dining-room girl. High wages will be paid for good, smart girls. Address P. J. Lewis, Torch Lake, Mich.

ENLARGED.—The Elk Rapids Progress comes out enlarged to a forty column quarto form. Gemberling gets up a good readable local journal, and the people of Antrim County should show their appreciation by giving him a liberal support.

Announcement.

The proprietor of the SENTINEL is making arrangements for its enlargement to a forty-eight column quarto, and will carry the plan into operation during the month of July, if no serious discouragements arise. In order that the enterprise shall result in permanent improvement, it is necessary that the people should extend their hearty encouragement, friendship and support. We propose to center all our pecuniary resources in, and devote all our energies to the work, and if we do not succeed it will be the people's fault, not ours. In view of these plans and circumstances it must become evident that all amounts due us are greatly needed.

NEWSIES.—Of course everybody will notice the new advertisement of T. W. Nichols in another column. We have visited his store and were pleased with the appearance of things. He is bound to succeed, because he knows how to advertise.

A gale on Lake Michigan, May 19, wrecked the schooner D. G. Wright 10 miles north of South Haven, where she now lies bottom side up. Capt. Hanson and five other men were lost. Two of their bodies have been washed ashore.

THE Manistee Times & Standard says:—"The Charlevoix Sentinel has passed the seventh mile stone, and its proprietor has no hesitancy in saying, and saying it boldly, that it is on a sound foundation. It is ready, newsy, and a good local paper, and has earned its prosperity.

SUMMER RESORTS.—"Northern Michigan Summer Resorts," is the title of a neat little pamphlet just published by the passenger department of the G. R. & I. R. R. road. It does Charlevoix ample justice, and, indeed, is an excellent guide to all the pleasure resorts of Northern Michigan.

MEDICAL.—We call attention to the business card of of W. Lawrence Kellogg, M. D., in another column. The Doctor has located at at Petoskey, but will not confine his practice to that locality. He is a graduate of New York University, a physician of experience, and is well recommended.

OPPOSITION.—The steam yacht M. F. Sutton, from Grand Haven, arrived here Tuesday, and has been making trips up the lake during the week—her owners expressing a determination to stay and run opposition to the Annie. She left yesterday, however, for Port Huron, to ply on the route between that point and Sarnia

RETURNED.—Hon. E. H. Green, who has been absent from his home in this village for the past six months, returned yesterday. Since the close of the Legislative session Major Green, accompanied by his family, has been visiting friends at Ann Arbor, Mich., and Lancaster, Pa. He visited Philadelphia during his sojourn in that State.

FASHIONABLE.—On Wednesday we visited the millinery and dress-making establishment of Miss A. M. Sackett, in this village. Her store is really cozy and pleasant, and the ladies can find there an establishment fully equal to the task of rendering them pretty and becoming—as a nice dress and jaunty hat will render the homeliest woman on earth. Advertisement next week.

THE schooner W. A. Smith arrived home from Cheboygan on Sunday last, with part of a cargo of salt. She left here yesterday for a cruise to Cheboygan, Alpena and Saginaw, via Beaver Harbor. She had two lady passengers for the last named port. Capt. Campbell speaks in high terms of his vessel, which, on her maiden trip, showed excellent qualities both as a carrier and sailer. He expresses the opinion that, with all her canvas set, she is the "boss vessel."

The Opposition Boat.

Charlevoix, June 9, 1875.

FRIEND SMITH:—

"To be or not to be" seems to be the the question with some of our friends,—that is they cannot really make up their minds whether to continue to patronize the Annie, or, as the saying is, "go back on her" and give their patronage and influence to and in favor of the Sutton. That the Sutton is a fine little boat, and will make the round trip in less time than the Annie is a fact greatly in her favor, but with me and I think with every other candid man, there are other things than speed to be taken into consideration. The Annie came when we were greatly in need of such a boat, and has now become one of the prominent boats on our lake and her owner has become a resident of the place and will so remain if the people will but accord to him the proper support. That the Annie may have been run so as not to please and give perfect satisfaction to all the inhabitants around the lake is undoubtedly true; but that the owner has at all times done his best to accommodate and make it pleasant and comfortable for his passengers is a fact that all who have ever taken a trip with him will bear willing testimony. Such being the case, shall we now, because some seem to think the Annie too slow for these fast times, desert her that has been our favorite for one that will probably be fast enough to leave us when they find the stumps do not come in as fast as a fast boat ought to accommodate. Any one that is all acquainted with the business on the lake knows that there is not enough for one boat, and why any man of common sense should desire to see it divided so that perhaps both will be obliged to leave is something beyond my comprehension. Perhaps they want to ride a good deal this summer, and would like to pay according to their estimate of liberality. It is my candid opinion that the people around the Lake will consult their interest by conferring to patronize the Annie which I believe under the circumstances is their duty.

Should she be obliged to leave she will be sadly missed when the heavy storms of the fall come on, the very time when a boat is most needed on our beautiful lake.

Let us not discard a tried and true friend for one that has but our merit to recommend itself to our favor, while the old one has others that are lacking in the new.

BROOMSTICK.

☞ A Brooklyn correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial has the following gossip with regard to the expenses of the Beecher trial:

Some of the papers have been anxious to find out how the Beecher people got money to meet the expenses of the trial, which are very heavy on the Beecher side. I presume that Beecher's church would meet all the expenses in a moment, if they were ten times greater than they are. It may be taken for granted that Beecher himself will never be allowed to pay a cent. Beecher has had a large income for twenty years, but he has never been able to take care of money, even with the aid of his watchful wife, and I doubt if all the property he has in the world, including Peekskill farm and his Brooklyn house, would bring $50,000. Perhaps a hint on the subject may be got from Porter's speech. Porter spoke of the wealthy friends who had closed around Beecher, and mentioned several of them by name, including the great merchant Claflin, who (said Porter) was ready to sacrifice half his fortune in behalf of his friend Beecher. Now, when it is considered that Claflin is worth over fairly fifteen, it is easy to see that it would not take a hundredth part of his fortune, much less a half of it, to meet all the expenses incurred in behalf of Beecher during the trial. I think I could name a dozen other men in Beecher's church, each of whom would be ready to put down fifty thousand or a hundred thousand dollars for their pastor at this time. There will be no trouble about money on the Beecher side, and Beecher himself will not need to take the least trouble about it.

But on the Tilton side there has been a woful lack of means throughout. Tilton himself has little money to his name. By mortgaging his home and things, he may have raised a few thousand dollars for his counsel; he has a small income from the publisher of his novel; perhaps one of his friends has helped him to the extent of a couple of thousand dollars, and perhaps one of his lawyers, Mr. Morris may be out of pocket as much as $3,000 for expenses. When Moulton was on the stand he swore that he had not paid anything or promised to pay anything toward the trial or to Tilton's lawyers; and it may be safely affirmed that Moulton is not now likely to spend any money that way. The Tilton side has been conducted economically and like in consequence, but many advantages. His lawyers have worked well; but they have not the spur that is enjoyed by the Beecher lawyers in their enormous remuneration. It is beyond doubt that Tilton's lawyers have sacrificed a great deal on account of the case, for both Beach and Fullerton are men who have a fat practice. In taking up the case they did not expect to make sacrifices, for they thought they had a good case which would not last long. But when once in they had to go on. Even if any one of them had been disposed to throw up he could not since none so without blasting his professional reputation.

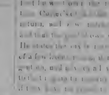
THE SENTINEL.
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.
WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.



SATURDAY, - - JUNE 19, 1875

Mr. Ard now resides on Bay St. Mr. Brown says he has engaged a session of Court there, and invites all who attend the Court, Bar and witnesses, to attend the grand ball to come off during Court week. He says he will have the large Hall owned by him Christened for the occasion, and will furnish plenty of music, and a supper that will make the mouth water. He states the city is already the scene of a few cases that will be tried, and, generally, and expects a full house. He says he intends to commence work this week, and will have the Hall ready for the ball by the time Court opens.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the people of Detroit have a right to vote on the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $300,000 to aid in the construction of the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee Railway. The decision was rendered on appeal from the State Court of Michigan, to which the case was carried from the Circuit Court of the United States. The Detroit people are elated over the decision, and will now proceed to vote on the question of issuing the bonds.

At the last Court, Lucy Campbell obtained a divorce from Wm. M. Campbell, on the ground of desertion. The parties were married in Detroit, in 1866, and lived together about two years, when Campbell left his wife and went to Chicago, where he has since resided. He has never contributed anything to the support of his wife, and she has been compelled to support herself by her own exertions. Mrs. Campbell is a very estimable lady, and has the sympathy of all who know her in her misfortune.

Mr. Ard has commenced the erection of a fine residence on the corner of Bridge and Mason streets, which will be completed in the fall. Mr. Ard is a carpenter by trade, and has been engaged in building in Charlevoix for the past two years. He has done a good deal of work in this city, and has proved himself a thorough mechanic. He is a worthy citizen, and we are glad to see him prosper.

The Detroit Tribune says that Mr. Brooks will make a desperate effort to secure the gold fields. He has determined to try for some treasures, and will have a full force of men at work in the spring. Some of the boys say they would like to go with him.

"Yer got any more apples to sell, Sandy, to-day, Hugh?" said one Scotchman to another. "What is it, Mac? Have I gotten you pant?" In reply, as he said it, was a kick. "Ye didn't need be. The answer he required. "Shut your face and don't waste one of those apples on your head." Sandy then looked at the apples, and, finding he had been cheated, said he would not.

The gentleman in a carriage over whom he had stood. The Jacksonian (Miss.) Champion calls upon the editors to "help the poor out of debt. The Chicago says that, from the mood of things we see, we wonder who is looking for tomorrow event, worse than bankers of dead indigence were taken out last Monday. And the same is true in many other countries.

The Detroit Post says that a peculiarly expert set of robbers is at Marquette county, and that some of the best travelers from place to place to rob the interior of the state of less than $5 per day. He says $2 when on duty, neither can afford to do that much for which he was elected on the ground that "men who live and $2 a day can't be paid for."

It is a strong comment on our Centennial and the boast for the luxury of the postal service, that over the list of July's newspaper can be sent from Brooklyn to Constantinople for two cents, while it would require four cents to carry it from Brooklyn to New York. The rate of postage on newspapers and almanacs is only 1 mill to two cents in quantities the aggregate weight more than four ounces, while at letter the rate is one cent an ounce.

A matter of peace was recently concluded at Fort Benton, M. T., by and between the Assiniboine, Gros Ventres and Mandan, at Fort Berthold on the one part, and the Dominion and Upper and Lower Yanktonais on the other, all of the principal Chiefs and head men of these tribes joining in the treaty. About 4,000 Sioux braves and part of the allied tribes were present, and these people who have hereto now been very hostile, mingled together in friendly and brotherly.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

SATURDAY, - - JUNE 26, 1875.

☞ Fort Fenny was the Democratic city of the Border last.

☞ Add non. Jeff Davis objects to the arrests resulting on account of the levels of that southern. Jeff is quite saucy and threatens to make a break.

☞ A Mason could not be found in Concord for calling a meeting the legislature on the 4th. Lodge turned out as freely doubled the school on the 4th" appear on the Road.

☞ The Governor of Detroit has authorized the issuing of the law prohibiting the opening of shows on the Sabbath day, and are notified of finding a meeting with that object in view.

☞ Spain must be an exciting country to rule over. With her various civil feuds, no commerce, no credit, and a debt of over $1,500,000,000 the winner in the present struggle will be a fit subject for pity.

☞ An experienced mason informs us that the best way to clean up after plastering is to rub the wood-work with newspaper, and go on the floor with dry sand instead of water, using a short stiff of a broom.

☞ The Duke of Edinburgh is the only son of Queen Victoria's sons who is not a member of the Masonic order, and the father-in-law, the Emperor of Russia, is one of the two sovereigns of Europe who oppose Masonry.

☞ Hon. Marsh Giddings formerly a prominent politician of Michigan, and more recently governor of the territory of New Mexico is dead. He was well known and highly esteemed in this State.

☞ News has been received by way of St. Thomas, of a terrible earth quake in New Grenada. The destruction was greatest in the valley of Cucuta on the Venezuela frontier. It is reported that 16,000 lives were destroyed by the calamity.

☞ Postmaster-General Jewell was in Detroit early in the week, looking after the interests of the post office department. He is making a tour of inspection personally, to acquaint himself with the workings of the department, and also of the free delivery system.

☞ After thirteen years, and repeated fruitless efforts the iron safe of the U. S. ship of war Cumberland, which was sunk in Hampton Roads by the Rebel iron Virginia in 1862 has been recovered by a party of divers. The safe is supposed to contain about $100,000 in gold.

☞ A dispatch from Tucson, Arizona, says the Citizen is informed that Brigham Young is anxious to form a colony in Sonora, his great desire being to get away from the influence of the public school system of the United States thinking, with the assistance of the Catholic priests, to establish the public school system now being established in Mexico.

☞ Prospective candidates for the Democratic nomination for President are becoming so plenty and clamorous as the fabled potato bug. Ten men of Ohio can be prevented votes. We would suggest Tweed. He is now at liberty and an enthusiast in making and dividing the spoils of office, the cardinal precept of that party.

☞ The farmers of Minnesota have adopted a plan for routing themselves of that troublesome pest the grasshopper. The counties pay a bounty for every bushel of grasshoppers killed, and thus furnish employment which yields remuneration as well as rid the country of the plague. It is estimated that 5,000 bushels have been already destroyed by this plan.

☞ A curious and severe (to operation was performed lately at the surgical clinic of Wellington University, by which Prof. John N. Mommester resected the left elbow joint of a young lady, for a condition known as "anchylosis," of permanent stiffness—the joint of "ancresis," or the crook bone. The operation consists in cutting out the original joint and making a new one, so as to give the patient the power of flexing and extending the forearm, which previously was immovable for many months. Bonnefin's bloodless method was used and not a drop of blood flowed during the operation.

New Goods cheap at Fox, Rose & Buttars'.

That wedding cake came to hand from Cousin Jonas yesterday.

Two logs, Jones took a load of lumber from the Mill company's yard on yesterday.

Hon. E. H. Gould is to deliver the oration at the head of Pine Lake on the 5th of July.

Notice.—The schooners Florida and California were wood and lumber from Norwood on Tuesday.

Hon. A. B. Turner of Grand Rapids called at the office on Wednesday. He is on a visit of a few weeks.

The steamer New Jersey arrived down on Monday morning on her way inland from Chicago to Boyne Falls.

The steamer Stanton arrived here yesterday and went up the lake for a cargo. Dr. Worthington was a passenger.

The schooner Ellen Stevenson, from Menominee, Wis., took on a cargo of wood and lumber for Henry Mosier yesterday.

Big Day's Work.—The mill of F. J. Meech & Co., of Norwood, in this county, cut 35,500 feet of lumber in ten hours, beating all work.

Drowned.—A boy named Fiel Knappenberger of age, was drowned in Bear Lake, at Traverse City, yesterday, while playing on the logs.

Improved.—At Petoskey Mill you can buy lumber as low as at any place in the Pine Lake region. Lumber delivered on the dock free of charge.

The payment of the railroad land tax exchange was $1,000 into the treasury of the township of Xenophon. The township is in good shape.

Fire, Rescue and her brother-in-law, both of Kansas City, sought on Monday and Tuesday last in the afternoon around Traverse Lake, but returned home.

Mr. Hemingway.—The contract for carrying the mail on the route between Petoskey and Charlevoix has been let to E. J. Lemmy, of Charlevoix, Dan and county.

The season of work along this shore, as now having a "full set" with Dan on hand, at Grand Rapids as regards his party to accompany the brethren.—Lud Eagle Herald.

The reason that Judge Giddings has not come to bail by his appeals, as promised last week, is because he has been detained in Chicago.

Fire at Grand Rapids.—A terrible conflagration occurred at Grand Rapids on the 19th. Sixty-three buildings were destroyed at a loss of nearly a quarter of a million dollars.

The Traverse City Herald has authority for stating that Maj. W. B. Nichols, who some time in January last married Miss L. Ella Gaston, of that village, died in Washington, D. C., on Sunday last.

More of that Boss Tea for 50 cts at Fox, Rose & Buttars'.

Personal.—Hon. P. R. L. Pierce, Mayor of Grand Rapids, and Secretary of the H. P. & I. Railroad Land Department, called at our office yesterday. He was in town for the purpose of paying the Company's taxes in this county, which will amount to the sum of nearly $4,000.

To Cultivators.—The people of Charlevoix will celebrate Monday, the 5th day of July, in true Yankee style, means the fundamental descendants. There will be the parade of the "Mess Backs"—which, according to present rumors, will be equal to Dewey's Hundreds—and the usual oration, prayer, song and basket picnic. And the interesting sugar racing, wheelbarrow racing, horse racing, greased pig, and a balloon ascension. A general good time is expected.

A Warning.—Of late several depredations have been committed between this place and Torch Lake, on the wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company. The Superintendent has instructed the Manager here to prosecute to the full extent of the law "any person who may wilfully or maliciously tear down or obstruct the wire," and notice is hereby given that his instructions will be carried out. When it is known that the penalty for this offense is $1,000 fine, or one year in State Prison, or both, perhaps some of the lawless youths of the country will pause before they again touch the w o

A party of distinguished Pennsylvanians, John H. Hoopes, Minister of the Penn Central Railroad; John A. Harper, merchant, Meadville; J. Miller, John H. Hewitt, merchants, Jersey Shore; and Alonzo F. Howard, gun manufacturer, all of Pittsburgh, Pa., passed through this city yesterday in a special car over the G. R. & I. R. R. to Traverse City. The party intends to spend a week or ten days in hunting and fishing.—Grand Rapids Eagle.

The above named gentlemen in company with Hon. A. B. Turner, of Grand Rapids are camped on the Jordan, and the sprinkled locations are being peopled on in great numbers—no suppose.

Buy your school books and stationery at Fox, Rose & Buttars'.

A charter has been issued after W. A. Smith, editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel, and we exchange states that he has become "spelled up" in consequence.—Otsego Herald.

We get the same modest, unobtrusive and lively Smith that we always have been since we were sold for $10 by C. E. Ford. Don't let the blasted exchanges deceive you brother Peter.

Rose' sewed Oxford ties for $1 50 at Fox, Rose & Buttars.

The Latest Post.—The Union Steamboat and Anchor Line have agreed to run their lines together. The propellers St. Louis and Toledo, of the former line, have been transferred from the Buffalo and Green Bay route to the route between Buffalo, Erie and Chicago.

Customers will find goods cheap at Fox, Rose & Buttars'.

Beaver Hunting.—We were one of the excursion party that visited Beaver Harbor last Sunday on the steamer Fox Rambler. The land remained at the harbor only an hour, but that hour was spent very pleasantly indeed, among our old acquaintances and friends. Hon. Chas R. Wright and John Hennery allowed us favors for which they have our thanks. We visited the "Point," and found Mr. Brower at busy as ever. This gentleman handles enormous quantities of fish, and it is said that he sends the Buffalo fish markets as at which place the queen loves to banquet. We hope to visit Beaver Harbor again ere long.

Horse Stealing Affair.—Our correspondent at Torch Lake writes us as follows:—"A very serious affair happened over and at Clam River Monday morning. The horse of Simon Pleadley was harnessed with all the contents, and two little children, one and three years of age. Mr. Pleadley was on the look, also, and heard the noise of the fore in the next room, and on opening the door found it all in a blaze. She rushed through the fire and out of doors, screaming for Mr. P., who was working about sixty rods from the house. He ran to the house, and, jumping through the low fence window, got hold of them in his little arms. The room was now so full of fire and smoke that he had to feel her way back to the window, as just as he got one leg out, the window down on him and fastened him in. In small and excitable language and shrieking of the children and they present in the flames. Mr. and Mrs. P. are much badly burned. It is supposed that the fire caught in the floor under the stove.

Marriage.—The following are newly elected officers of Charlevoix Lodge No. 252, F. & A. M. were publicly installed on Thursday evening, by Past Master Hon. E. H. Gould:

W. M.—A. Rollins.
S. W.—W. A. Smith.
J. W.—O. B. Wentworth.
Sec.—M. J. Boardman.
Treas.—A. Fox.
S. D.—L. W. Sidnette.
J. D.—John W. Miller.
Stewards—A. B. Dwright, A. McNeil.
Chaplain—Rev. Geo. L. Cole.
Tyler—N. A. Balch.

Gen Sheridan and his bride made a model bridal tour. They went in a carriage from her father's home to his own. As a substitute for the wearying, ostentatious, and more or less vulgar journey under the usual, possible conditions for testing the qualities and temperament of two people living in endlessly into such an intimate relation, the worthy pair of Sheridan and his wife ought to be imitated.

Hitch the spelling bee at 10 o'clock, and stepped at a saloon on his way home. Here he met several friends who "set 'em up," and he reached home about midnight with a confused brain and a demoralized pair of legs. Then he swore that somebody had stolen his key hole, but his wife with a fearful scowl on her brow, and a lamp in her hand admitted him.

"Drunk!" she exclaimed.

"Drunk (hic) drunk. That cayouff."

"Brute!"

"Brute (hic) thief gives a harder one."

"Idiot!"

"That harder, (hic) but I can spellum 1-2—1-d-i-o-t, idiot. Now give us er simmer (hic)."

She picked up a poker and gave him a simmer, and the spelling school adjourned.

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO.'S

VIBRATOR THRESHER

The BRILLIANT SUCCESS of this Unrivaled, time-saving Thresher, is unprecedented in the annals of Farm Machinery. In a brief period it has become widely known and fully established as the "Leading Threshing Machine."

GRAIN RAISERS REFUSE to subscribe to the most liberal terms for any other Threshers, when placed on the market by responsible parties, for saving grain, saving time, and doing fast, thorough and economical work.

Threshermen find it highly advantageous to run a machine that has such Beaters, "Pickers," or "Aprons," that twaddles Damp Grain, Long straw, Heedless Flax, Timothy, Millet and all such difficult grain and grass, without extra care and effectiveness, (Beaters or pickers) as the Beater has the usual Bolts, Boxes, Journals, and Gears; easily managed; less repairs; one that runs as easily in rough and Tall Grain, even as unusual prices, while other machines are out of joint.

Four sizes made, with 6, 8, 10 and 12 inches "Improved" Powers, also a specialty of Separators, adapted expressly for steam power and to match other horse powers.

If interested in grain saving, or threshing, write for Illustrated Circulars (send free) with full particulars and prices, terms, terms, etc.

Boots—Lazy Jones, you seem to have been having lots of groceries; where do you trade, Jones?

Jones—Why, I bought at

BYRON SEE'S

Boots—Is it? Has others do as well? I guess you can bargain. I know we always do it easier.

Jones—O, yes, of course you can. He sells as cheap as any one. I like a reliable house to deal with. Besides, he pays cash for butter, eggs, etc.

Boots—Well, I guess I'll call and see him. I have been buying lots of groceries, and am sick of paying such high prices. Good morning, Jones.

Boys for the Navy.

Probably very few persons outside of the navy are aware of how small a personal matter of manner are Americans. Not more than one tenth are ever born and the other nine-tenths are of every nation under the sun. Many simply make a prominent of our shipmates have to be rejected wherever found, since there is no regular source from which a supply of trained seamen can be drawn. The consequent addition of new recruits to the crew nothing very much against the efficiency of the whole. The recruits for the navy to-day are reported as placed in the same company with well-drilled soldiers. Strenuous efforts have been made in past years to induce native-born youth to have proved failures and the Government is now about to make one more effort to supply its navy with trained seamen.

The station at Coaster Mercantile terms being fitted up at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard and in a short time will be anchored off the battery in New York Harbor. The Minnesota is one of the largest and finest wooden ships in the world. On board of her is to assemble a training school for boys. They will be enlisted between the ages of sixteen and seventeen years, to serve until twenty-one years of age. They will be entered as second-class boys at the rate of $10 to $15 per month. They must be five feet one inch in height, and measure thirty inches around the chest, and be able to read and write. No deserters will be made from the rule as to age and age, but in cases where the boy may appear desirable, it may be possible to waive the rule as to education. In order to bolster a respectable class of boys to enter it is intended as far as possible, only to enlist boys of good character, and as a result a private or reformatory institution boys are not desired whose parents can do nothing with them at home. No boys have been received of any crime on who have been inmates of a reformatory school or house of correction will be enlisted. To guard against improper persons it will be necessary that every boy shall come accompanied by his legal guardian, who will be obliged to testify under oath to the boy's age, and to sign the shipping articles giving consent to the boy's enlistment. It will thus appear that it is useless for any runaways to engage.

The boys will receive under instruction on board the Minnesota until they are eighteen years of age. They will be taught the various branches of a seaman's education and all the duties of a seaman on board of a man-of-war. On reaching the age of eighteen they will be sent to sea in a cruising vessel and be absent three years, returning about the time they will be twenty-one years old. Any boy of average intelligence would probably be rated a seaman by the time he reached that age. There are, no doubt, many lads in the country who would be glad to go to sea if their knew just how to get there. To any such active lad this is an excellent opportunity. Only a limited number will be taken, and there are no vacancies at present for about sixty more.

It is to be distinctly understood that no bounty or promise of advancement to the position of officers are held out. None will only enter to be made sailors and fit for another purpose. The intention is to send a class of boys from the training ship every year and then to enter a new class. It is hoped that a large number of them will stay in the service and make it their home. The lads send from the service every year will keep up the supply, and in a few years there will be a body of men service except those who entered on the training ships and no end of efforts will be made to secure other men. A proper class of sailor to the has been in use for a long time in England for a number of years and to it it in a great measure may be attributed the splendid condition of the personnel of her navy. Let us hope that the service under the impression that he is to lead a life of ease and jollity. The monotony life is fair of landsmen and not. But it has its pleasant scenes as well as its disagreeable ones.—Albany Journal.

Anecdote of Napoleon III.

Successful men, even though their success has been lucky, and who do their best brilliant, have generally been those who have labored one purpose, stuck to it through all fortunes.

In 1857 a dinner party was given in New York city, at Chevalier Kyle's. Some of the most distinguished men of the city sat down at the table.

Among them was a young and rather unknown Frenchman.

"To the cousin of the evening."

Professor Morse who was one of the guests, and drew the attention of Mr. Wallace to the stranger, observing that his forehead indicated great intellect.

"Yes," replied Mr. Gallatin, touching his own forehead with his finger, "there is a great deal in that head of his; but he has a strange fancy that you believe it? he has the idea that he will be the Emperor of the French. Can you conceive of anything so absurd?"

It was that idea, persistently reflected in spite and imprisonment, and despite disaster, that made him fourteen years after, Emperor of the French. Lucky man! Not at all. It is not lucky men that achieve, but plucky men.—Boston Statesman.

"Lord make us truly thankful for what we are about to receive—them biscuits ain't fitten for a dog to eat," is the way a certain Montana, La., man asks a blessing.

Paroling as a Profitable Business.

Whether farming as a business is or profitable as some other branches of business is a question unwilling of many minds but that it is fairly remunerative besides being less subject to those fluctuations which bring disastrous results in other callings has long been settled beyond question. Of course we are not at this time talking into consideration those persons unable to secure themselves or in any business, or to whom indeed the better portions of this country are a sealed province a stable well-established portion.

The principal cause of complaint among poor persons in the small amount to come from any one crop, and the consequent inability to obtain from the sale of the product of their labor, in other words, the amount of cash they have the pleasure of handling during the year. They feel upon the merchants of our cities, or even the clerks in stores and various offices, whose salaries appear to be entirely out of proportion to work performed, and seem to regard as proof of unjust discrimination made in remunerating labor. Various grievs at the prices paid for labor in city and in the country would certainly lead one to believe that the former was overly compensated high, or the latter entirely too low. It is this seeming difference which makes so many young men and women in the country strive to get into the cities; it also makes their parents feel that they, too are cheated out of their rights in selling the products of their farms at less than city retail prices. There are, however, two sides to this question, and it is well worth a little study to get to the point to which is the most favorable with our seeming inequality of both.

If wages are higher in cities than in the country, the cost of living is in proportion and there is no way of escaping it. In any small very well for a carpenter or mason to receive four dollars per day, but if he has to pay two of it for house rent he is no better off than the country mechanic who receives only two dollars and pays one for an equally good and perhaps a better house. Then, again, where rents are so high other necessaries of life are usually in proportion; consequently it is the most unusual economy a man receives for his labor must be used in order to bring a competence. Now, if we take the figures of Judge Pound, mechanics and other laborers of our cities, and the larger class of farmers, will inquire naturally into the circumstances of each. The latter will find for the most independent of the two. A farmer who can actually save one hundred dollars per annum above providing for the support of his family is doing better than two-thirds of the residents of our cities who have an income of from three to five thousand dollars per annum. Then, again, a farmer who works upon his own land is constantly accumulating wealth, even if he cannot show a bank account at the end of the year, because every tree planted, shrub set, fence built, or field cleared enhances the value of his real estate. These are no small capital into notice for the future, which if rightfully managed, will bring as good returns as though invested in Government bonds.

We have only to take the proportions of men in both city and country who are in such independent circumstances, that is capable of supporting themselves and family without fear of want starting them in the same should anything happen to provide, from whatever source, or attending to business, in order to see how much superior the latter portion of the country is. Out of about 5 per cent. of those who attempt business in cities succeed; ten in a hundred of those are the farmers in a business who fail to make a good living, provided they are careful and industrious.—N. Y. News.

Race for a Corpse.

Two Troy Dressers, Burkhell and Swenson (more spendthrifts none) that the dead body of a man had been found in a field, where it lay for a week or more. They started hastily for the spot, which was 25 miles out of town, in a sled over good sleighing. On the other would make a wholly new for the fee resident to be supplied. They took different roads, and when half-way from the place that had been described to them, and where wagons had to be abandoned, they caught sight of each other. The start on foot across the rough fields was about even.

☞ The Grand Rapids Enquirer says the work of rebuilding the burnt district has already commenced.

☞ Lady Franklin is dangerously ill in London, and requests the clairvoyants in America to offer prayers for her recovery.

☞ The effort to attack Gen. Sherman's "Memoirs" is Sergeant Bates. He says he is perfectly ignorant in the work.

☞ It looks very much as if great Britian was drifting into a financial crash. Heavy failures in commercial and manufacturing circles are becoming frequent.

☞ The Chicago Tribune threatens, if St. Louis does not quit boasting about that bridge, to build one across Lake Michigan.

☞ The weight of the new steam fog whistle to be placed at the entrance to the harbor at Grand Haven is nearly 3,000 pounds. It will be placed on the south pier, back of the pier-light.

☞ There is said to be lost one day lottery in Michigan, and the owner of that South R. Wooley, of Detroit, in absconding. His indebtedness amounts to $50,000. There was a meeting of his creditors a short time since.

☞ The next material contest in Michigan promises to be as lively as the one of last fall. Z Chandler and Gov. Begley aspire to Mr. Ferry's seat, and Mr. F is in the hands of his friends and an all wise Providence for another term.—Chicago Tribune.

☞ Portions of the States of Ohio and Indiana were visited Friday by an earthquake. The shock was severe in many points although no casualties are reported other than the cracking of the walls of a few buildings. The people in the different towns shaken were, however, greatly frightened and are still uneasy lest the oscillation already felt be but the premonition of others to follow.

☞ The Insane Asylum at Kalamazoo has about 550 patients—290 in the old building, or female department, and 260 in the new or male department. It can accomodate about 50 more in each department, but will rapidly filling up. The new Asylum at Pontiac is likely to be needed long before it is completed.

☞ The grasshopper news from the Western frontier continues to be to the effect that the insects like riches, "take wings and fly away." The sky is literally clouded with vast swarms moving northward, and there is a general feeling of relief in the districts which were so recently afflicted by them.

☞ Mr. Beecher refers to journalism: "If there is a man on earth that ought to be just man, and a man of honor, it is a man that conducts a newspaper." And the Detroit News remarks that "It wouldn't do any particular hurt for the clergy to be just a little more circumspect as to their ways and utterances."

☞ Professor Donaldson, just for a change in aeronautic experiences made a balloon discension on Thursday. He went up, in company with three newspaper men from Toronto and came down in Lake Ontario, where they were picked up by a passing vessel after five hours of bulliing by the waves.

☞ Two persons were once disputing seriously on the subject of religion that they awoke a big dog which had been sleeping on a hearth before them, and he forthwith barked most furiously. An old divine present, who had been quietly sipping his tea while the disputants were talking, gave the dog a kick and exclaim ed: "Hold your tongue, you silly brute, you know no more about it than they do."

☞ A dispatch from Minneapolis of June 12, says: Parties just down from the Lake Superior coast, bring most enthusiastic reports of the amount of silver to be found there. One man who was on the eve yesterday says the whole region north of Lake Superior and west of the national boundary line at Pigeon River is being overrun with exploring parties, who are as eager as the Black Hills explorers. The latest information from these parties is that some thirty-five miles from the lake there is a valuable silver ledge, whose external show ens rivals that of Nevada's great mines.

☞ The parishioners of a clergyman in Scotland, in expressing to him their aversion to the use of manuscript sermons urged: "What gars ye take up your bit papers to the pulpit?" He replied that it was good, for really he could not remember a sermon, and must have his paper. "Weel, weel, minister, if ye canna remember the sermon then dinna expect that we can."

☞ Judge Spencer, Assistant Attorney General for the Post-office Department, has furnished an opinion to the Postmaster General, taking the ground that postmasters are liable on their bond for losses of Government property, mine in their possession. The occasion of the decision was the loss of a registered package containing $230 worth of stamps in transit through the Boston post-office. It is the first time an opinion has been given holding postmasters thus responsible.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

THERE are 700 kitchens in Boston, all of whom are at each railway station on the arrival of every train.

THE orchards of this country are estimated to contain over 20,000,000 fruit trees.

NEW YORK city consumes during the berry season about 200,000 quarts of strawberries daily.

IT took 1,500 columns of the New York Tribune to contain all of the proceedings of the Beecher trial.

BOSTON has a tenement population of 65,000 persons, representing 18,000 families, crowded into 42,000 rooms in 2,028 houses.

THE exports of cotton from all United States ports since Sept. 1, 1874, to June 15, 1875, are 2,562,978 bales, against 2,721,745 bales for the same time in 1874.

THE total rental of the St. Louis bridge is but little less than $7,000,000. Its gross receipts in the last year were $780,000, and its expenses $38,000, leaving $180,000 to pay the interest on the $7,000,000.

A FARMER named Andrew Wiseman, who lives in Hancock County, Pa., has destroyed 100 sheep killed by dogs within a few weeks. There are reported to be 1,000 dogs in that county.

IT costs $13,000,000 a year to run the city of New York. She pays 13,000 servants, of high and low degree, every one drawing pay to every three who pay taxes.

THE importation of American sheep into Canada has caused the discharge of about 2,000 workmen from the wool and shoe manufactories of Montreal.

IT is estimated by competent authority that the accidental deaths occurring annually around the Comstock mines will average one every day in every week in the year, while the serious accidents will average one for each day in the week.

THE stories that mining was successfully carried on at Newbury, Mass., 100 years ago have been confirmed by the fact that a party, in an old shaft first feet deep, of the original workings, found a number of silver relics, together with some good specimens of silver and lead.

THE National Bank of New York with a capital of $300,000, declares a dividend every two months, the last on the 1st inst., July 15 per cent; par value of shares $100, while $1,600 a share is bid for the stock, and none for sale.

IT is intended to build, at the great steel works in Ewen, Penna., a gun of unusual size, capable of working a mass of steel 100 tons in weight. It is estimated that this machine, when with the last improvements in the world, will cost $1,000,000.

TOBACCO has been exported from New York since the 1st of January to foreign countries $40,787,760 in gold and from the great bulk of which was manufactured gold and silver, the former in coin and the latter in bullion and bars.

THE exports for the same time in 1874 were $35,685,396.

THE funeral from which the two coal "pickles" are made is obtained from a deposit near Pine Gap, Lancaster County, Pa., which is considered the largest in the world yet discovered, and the only deposit of the sort worked in America. The ore has a gray color, is very heavy, and so hard that it is attacked entirely by steel. From out in fields 60 tons of the ore are taken from the pulverizing mill, and the grinding and working of this requires the labor of 175 hands.

THE new coining press which has just been erected at the Carson (Nev.) Mint is much smaller than the old one, and is designed for making dimes, twenty-cent pieces and quarters. Its capacity is 125 pieces per minute, and it will be kept going day, so 200,000 dimes are to be coined right away. In another room of this department seventy tons of silver ingots of the United States standard, waiting to be turned into coin.

A PERILOUS BALLOON VOYAGE.

Prof. Donaldson's Recent Ascension from Toronto: A Night Over Lake Ontario—The Basket Four Hours Submerged—The Rescue.

In our last issue we presented a brief statement concerning the thrilling but perilous voyage over Lake Ontario made by the Hippodrom balloon with Prof. W. H. Donaldson and three Toronto gentlemen representatives. The Toronto Leader of yesterday morning chronicles the safe return to that city of the heroes of the rough experience and affords a graphic account of the voyage as given by their crowns, who was one of the party.

From the time of the ascension, half past seven o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the balloon was driven in an easterly direction, and when in the vicinity of Scarboro was driven some miles out over the lake. Donaldson comprehended the situation and advised the passengers that they might find it a night over the lake, and that the danger to despite the cold outlines and danger which were apparent to the experienced mind was unfelt by those of the wind carried them within a mile of the town of Whitby and hopes were entertained that they would be driven there, but these expectations were speedily dissipated when the wind, which had carried the balloon far out over the waters, so that the land could not be reached. The last supply of the ingredients, the wind again changed and they neared the north shore, soon arriving within sight of the land, probably in the neighborhood of Cobourg. Here the wind again changed and they neared the north shore. At times, while no wind was blowing, the balloon was driven by the current at a 5 the drag rope touched the water. The ballast now became nearly exhausted, and second after second the balloon would rise, only to be lowered again by the drag after bag of sand was thrown out, and the water was in close embrace, and at the same time most interesting to those who were being carried through the air.

The balloon began to descend in the afternoon, and by the explanation of the passengers, they found that the was caused by the motion of the waves in the lake. Every perceptible difference was to be discovered in the downward motion of the balloon. In half a minute the car would be lifted on the crest of the wave, and the next moment the car was submerged in the trough of the sea. At this time the balloon touched toward the head of the lake, and for every one that was driven

THE British Government appointed a commission to investigate the causes and circumstances attending the loss of the Schiller off the Scilly Islands. They have recently published their report, in which the disaster is said to have been caused by the failure of the officers in charge to use the lead as directed in thick weather.

THE great international shooting match between the Irish and American teams came off near Dublin, Ireland, on the 29th ult. At 800 yards range the Irish team was successful by a single point in a score of 675. At 1,000 yards the Americans won by several points. The entire match was won by the American team by a score of 967 to 929. The Irishmen frankly acknowledged their defeat and congratulated the Americansson their brilliant victory.

MCDANIELS, the man who, some months ago, was concerned in the robbery of a railroad train near Muncie, Mo., lately escaped from the Lawrence (Kans.) jail with three of his companions. An alarm was quickly given and a posse of men, a large posse started to effect his recapture. They came up with the fleeing prisoners about five miles from the city and as they opened fire just as they were taking to the brush. McDaniels was mortally wounded and subsequently died. The smaller game was allowed to escape.

THE New York Tribune of the 25th contains the affidavit of Mrs. Tilton, in which she denies the truth of the statements made by the alleged new witnesses upon whose evidence an attempt to reopen the Beecher case was made by the plaintiff's counsel. She also solemnly declares that she is innocent of all the offenses charged against her in connection with Mr. Beecher, except that admitted in the case of her husband she had made charges against him which were false and unfounded, and which her husband knew to be so.

THE agricultural editor of the Chicago Times, in an essay on grasshoppers, says: "While a healthy crop may be a very good thing for the multitude, there is no comparison between the sheer outstanding promise of an early spring-time and the quiet, chronic, stomachic machinery of the speedy and vora-lous grasshopper. A small vigil number of this nomadic family of glutinous can eat, digest and otherwise dispose his own weight in green corn, four times in bulk, in twenty minutes without sugar or cream, six times his stature in raw turnips, four pounds of green tobacco and a pack of onions every twenty four hours. All rabbits, which are quite trying on the ordinary human digestion, the grasshopper digests as a calf does milk."

AN exchange suggests that if you want to see a man struggling to the several things at once, and struggling valiantly, he is not the coolest and calmest and yet keeping his head level, while the onlooker is perhaps nothing the beautician.

THERE is said to be a distressing scarcity of provisions in Owsley County, Ky., many people being obliged to subsist upon weeds and roots.

A PERILOUS BALLOON VOYAGE.

Prof. Donaldson's Recent Ascension from Toronto—A Night Over Lake Ontario—The Basket Four Hours Submerged—The Rescue.

IN our last issue we presented a brief statement concerning the thrillingly fascinating voyage our Lake Ontario made by the Hippodrom balloon with Prof. W. H. Donaldson and our Toronto bosom-pet representatives. The Toronto Globe, Saturday, gives a more extended account of the return to that city of the heroes of the rough experience alluded to, and publishes a graphic account of the voyage as given by their reporter, who was one of the party.

From the time of the ascension, half past seven o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the balloon was driven in an easterly direction, and when in the vicinity of Scarboro was driven some inches out over the lake. Donaldson comprehended the situation and ordered the passengers into the basket until some place at night over the lake, and perhaps a hundred miles distant. The night came on and the rest remained on enough to show to attempt a risk of sailing across the lake in the water, in the hopes of swimming to land or being picked up by some passing vessel. Which course would have been taken by the balloon in the event of the basket being cut away from the bag of gas is a question which the excitement became most intense, and the suspense was relieved by the aeronauts who were being carried through the air.

The balloon began to oscillate in the most violent manner, and by the movements of the professor, they found that this was caused by the motion of the waves on the lake below. No perceptible difference in the motion of the balloon in the direction of the balloon in half a minute from the time the cooking of the basket was first observed the car was submerged to the extent of about two feet. At the same time the balloon kept the same perfect equilibrium. There was then no danger being apprehended, and the car was sound, and all was thrown out with the exception of the ballast. Two sacks were reserved in the event of a still greater emergency. For out into the lake they were driven by the fierce gale, and the nearest shore was as near as that which had been left. It was a fearful appearance, rather a thing that Elsie never was known to do. Deep down in the waters of Lake Ontario they were driven, and for the first time in their lives they knew what it was to be in danger. They were in the middle of the lake, and they were driven by the fierce gale, and they were driven by the fierce gale, and they were driven by the fierce gale

THE SENTINEL.
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.
WILLARD S. SALLEE,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, ... JULY 10 1875.

The Beecher Case.

It will be remembered that the Beecher-Tilton scandal was brought to a crisis a few days ago by the finding of the jury in the case of Theodore Tilton against Henry Ward Beecher for criminal conversation with the plaintiff's wife. The jury disagreed, standing nine for a verdict for the defendant and three for the plaintiff. The case was then brought to a close, and the counsel on both sides addressed the court and jury. The speech of Mr. Beecher's counsel, Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, was a masterly effort, and was listened to with the closest attention by the court, jury and audience. Mr. Evarts is a man of commanding presence, and his voice is clear and distinct. He is a ready speaker, and his words flow from his lips in a steady stream, without hesitation or apparent effort. He is a man of great learning, and his speech was full of classical allusions and quotations from the poets. He is a lawyer of the old school, and his manner of addressing the court and jury is very different from that of the average lawyer of the present day. He is courteous and dignified, and his speech was a model of forensic eloquence. He spoke for about three hours, and at the close of his speech the court adjourned until Monday morning, when Mr. Fullerton, counsel for Mr. Tilton, addressed the court and jury. His speech was also a very able one, and was listened to with the closest attention. He spoke for about two hours, and at the close of his speech the court adjourned until Tuesday morning, when Judge Neilson delivered his charge to the jury. He reviewed the testimony at length, and charged the jury that they must find a verdict for the defendant unless they believed from the evidence that the defendant had been guilty of adultery with the plaintiff's wife. The jury retired, and after being out about two hours returned a verdict for the defendant. The verdict was received with applause by the audience, which was promptly suppressed by the court officers. The verdict is not considered as settling the question of Mr. Beecher's guilt or innocence, but as simply meaning that the jury did not believe the evidence sufficient to convict him. The case will probably be tried again, and it is thought that the next jury will disagree. The public mind is divided on the question of Mr. Beecher's guilt or innocence, and the verdict will not change the opinion of many persons.

Jeff Davis and His Last Fortune.

A correspondent of the Baltimore and Ohio tells a long story of the efforts of Jeff Davis's friends to find the $2,000 that he had dropped the day before his downfall. He came out of the great struggle with barely enough to settle his own comfortably for six months or more, but we are told friends came to his assistance from every Southern State in large sums, and in a very short time he was reported to have a fortune of $200,000 in gold. He was said to have invested it in Canadian bonds, and to have left it there. Then he went to Europe. He stayed a year or two and then came up the river. He stopped at Memphis for a time, and then went to Mexico. He was said to have had $100,000 in gold with him. He was said to have invested it in Mexican

Is Light a Mechanical Force?

We ought within a few years to be able to speak decisively now under review in its supreme power over colors at the outset the two antithetical and value of the ether by which it vibrates. It appears almost needless to say that, in spite of the striking, latent, of mind, begins with the rudiments of human intelligence and continues with unintelligent amount of activity, although the ages, such a truth as that now enunciated should have as long remained unrevealed, and that, with our knowledge of the so-called physical forces and the laws which govern their action, we should have until this late day, remained in ignorance regarding the true nature of the familiar phenomenon of light. That, in many of its properties, light is a force has been clearly demonstrated and, to the aid of certain chemical agencies, it has been fully proved that the latter exercised by the light waves is not another manifestation of that which, as electricity, makes the magnet powerful, or, as heat, results in combustion and the consequent generation of mechanical motion, but that light possesses a motive power in itself that is, that those light waves in several them, exercise a direct mechanical force upon matter. We may do the same of the sun as they have upon the earth, and the globe and its remotest planets, when encountered by the light and by this means the light only was transmitted. Still the same result followed. Again, thinking that there might possibly be some electrical conditions about the path which I wanted it to action, these rays were removed, and those of this platinum substituted, and, to cover the possible effects of disengaged moisture in causing the so-close those same rocks were tested to redness, and the globe put in a powerful non-electrical condition. All these changes were made in obedience to suggestions received by doubters, and yet the little simple still, obedient to the motive force of the light-rays exercised against the dark sides of the disk, moved the same as before. We are informed that, with one of the instruments, the arms revolved once in 182 seconds, when a candle-flame was placed at a distance of twenty inches, when this distance was decreased to ten inches, the time occupied for one revolution was forty-five seconds, and at five inches the revolution was made in eleven seconds. By this it will be seen that the motive force of light seems to obey the same law as that governing its intensity—that is, it varies inversely as the square of the distance. It is the approach to exactness in these results which affords the strongest proof, we think, that Mr. Crookes' conclusions, and it also appears that in the instrument we have a new and exact method of making actinometrical measurements. When it has been suggested, we have no intention of reviewing at greater length the practical effect of this discovery upon established theories, astronomical and physical, yet there can be no doubt that, when the new force is shall have been sufficiently verified to justify its adoption, the result will be materially found in a modification of certain established notions regarding the character of centrifugal force, the influence of light upon the celestial waves, the true nature of cometary tails, etc. President Barnard, in an extended review of this discovery, does not hesitate to affirm that "it may give rise to much more important discoveries perhaps than any contribution to celestial mechanics since the law of gravitation was demonstrated by Newton." And, so far as the inscrutable ways are concerned, we learn that "much eminent men as Profs. Stokes and Huxley, Dr. Carpenter, Mr. Norman Lockyer and others agree that the demonstration was perfect." At present the chief opponent of the theory is Prof. Osborne Reynolds, and when the full report of this gentlemen's views is received we shall again return to the discussion of the subject. Indeed, it may not be necessary to await this greatest since should the facts as they now stand be indorsed by chemical experts, our readers may expect to become as familiar with the new forces as they are now with that of gravitation. Regarding the possible effects of this discovery upon the present views, a recent and valuable reviewer closes the report of his observations as follows:

"It seems impossible that our modern inventions, calculating from the small surface of the sails, and the surface force of sun light, may soon fill us pretty accurately what is the aggregate power which the luminous rays of the sun command, and nothing of this, by the law of forces, can finally be wasted. Let these be light, and their was light," seems to derive a new majesty of meaning from the discovery which shows metals subtle something, no mere embodiment in muscle of motion, but a sailing force as old as Eden. Illumination out into use. It does appear as if a dawning force as well as of knowledge is about to open a new realm of those delicate epic threads."—Appendix Lancet.

Lace Sacques and Mantles.

LACE sacques will be the regular and elegant for midsummer. The favorite shape now is the basque, fitted in the back, loose in front, of equal length all round, and with half-fleeing pockets. It is safer to buy this shape than those with cut-away fronts, and it is more graceful shape that is conspicuous when the fashion changes. Guipure lace sacques will be more elegant than all-over lace, and the guipures in fine and striped patterns of the most fashionable. Black guipure sacques will be worn as much as ever, and will cost from $25 and upward. Those with black grounds are the only ones subject to wear out soon, as beads are not seen on white laces. Lower-priced jackets have Insertions of lace between the rows of guipure, and are bordered with the same lace, and are bordered with the same lace, and are bordered with the same lace

Encourage your Home Paper, Even SENTINEL.—

It is with much pleasure I learn that the SENTINEL is enlarged to double its size; and as a matter of course, greatly increasing the amount of valuable and interesting reading matter.

This certainly ought to bring in many new subscribers, for it will remove the only objection I have heard made—that the paper was so small and did not contain enough of reading matter for the family where no other paper was taken.

The fact is that all over our country we find many who take but one newspaper—and very often it is a paper published in one of the great cities—this we believe to be a mistake, for there is no better paper for a family than the home local paper which gives like the details of town and county affairs, one which alone must be invaluable.

I would therefore, most earnestly recommend to every head of a family in the county to use his best endeavors to encourage first your own paper, containing the local news of your own neighborhood. No person who is in the least interested in any portion of the county either in business or otherwise, should be without the newspaper printed in his county.

Where families are only able to take but one paper, it seems to me to be a grand mistake to send their money away for the fragments of some daily thrown together and advertised as "The Great Family Weekly."

Every family, especially where there are children growing up, should be furnished with reliable reading matter, and certainly nothing is more interesting and and instructive to the family circle than the home newspaper, which from its relative position constitutes the mouthpiece of the section of country to which it is published, while at the same time it gives the news of a general character from all parts of the world.

Any good citizen of Charlevoix county, who stops to think will see at once that it is his duty to sustain the Charlevoix Sentinel—we will thus encourage home enterprise and home industry; and at the same time his own and his town's interests are placed before the world in such a manner that could not be effected by any other means

Let every reader of the Sentinel who is not now a subscriber think of this and give to the paper establishment at home to promote your interest and happiness (and which is now one of the large weeklies) a welcome by subscribing for it yourself and asking your neighbor to do likewise.

Mr. Editor if you think this communication worthy of a place in your columns put it in—I have written it because I learned that some of the readers of the Sentinel had not considered their relations to their home paper, and that perhaps these thoughts might set them right.

Sabath School Convetion.

The Sabath School Association of Antrim and Charlevoix Counties met in the school house at Norwood Tuesday evening June 29, the president, Rev. C. S. Coulter, in the chair. Rev. H Worthington of Traverse City preached from Is. 2:3.

Wednesday and Thursday the association remained in session, discussing the questions published in the Sentinel a few weeks ago. Wednesday forenoon Rev. James M. Edgerton of Port Huron, N. Y., delivered an excesis of Luke 18:16. He taught that children, until they have "sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression," belong in Christ's church and there need not be any interval between the states of infant salvation, and that of salvation through the exercise of faith. Parents and teachers should labor for the early conversion of their children.

Rev. F. M. Dells of Northport, and Rev. N. E. Preston of Spencer Creek, read carefully written essays on the themes which had been assigned them, for which they received the thanks of the association. A box was passed to receive questions from the audience, and some were handed in, which occasioned as much debate as any on the programme. Some of the discussions revealed important differences of opinion, and became quite animated, but further good humor was maintained.

Norwood was chosen again as the place, and Rev. N. E. Preston as the preacher for the next meeting, on the last Tuesday in January. The following resolution was passed.

Resolved that this association cannot meet with any school which is not represented by delegate, or which does not extend an invitation by a majority vote.

The thanks of the convention were extended to the people of Norwood for their hospitality to delegates and kindly interest in the meeting.

The closing session, Thursday evening, was devoted to the children. The president addressed them and Mr. Edgerton taught them a beautiful hymn.

'VIBRATOR' THRESHER

The BRILLIANT SUCCESS of this Grain-Saving, Cleaning Thresher is unprecedented in the annals of Farm Machinery. It is now proved to it has become widely known and fully established as the "Leading Threshing Machine."

GRAIN RAISERS REFUSE to submit to the wasteful and imperfect work of other Machines, when they can secure the superiority of this one, for saving grain, saving time, and doing perfect work, in all kinds of seed work.

Threshermen find it highly advantageous to run a machine that has no "Beaters," "Pickers," or "Aprons," but handles Damp Grain, Long Straw, Headings, Flax, Timothy, Millet and all such difficult grain and seeds, with entire ease and effectiveness. Clean to perfection; saves the farmer his thresh bill by extra saving of grain; makes no "clinkering" requires LESS THAN ONE HALF the usual Belts, Boxes, Journals, and Gears; easier managed, less repairs; runs the Apron feeder by engine and was for over SIX-TEEN prizes, while other machines are "out of jobs."

Four sizes made with 6, 8, 10 and 12 horse "mounted" Powers, also a specialty of Separator "clubs," engines, for steam power and to match other horse powers.

If interested in grain raising or Threshing, write for Illustrated Circulars (sent free) with full particulars of sizes, styles, prices, terms, etc.

Special Dispatch to the Sentinel.

TOWN LAKE July 16.—A man named Beo, Turner, of Central Lake was taken down yesterday, and put into a boat and put out into Torch Lake. Fearing that he might do some mischief, several were present, but he pelted them with stones with which he had previously filled his pockets. They finally overtook him however, but before they could capture him he jumped overboard and was drowned. His body lies in three hundred feet of water. He had no family.

An injunction was lately served upon the parties who first seized the property of John Wagley, at Cross Village, by others of his creditors, to restrain them from selling, and, accordingly the sale has been postponed—to what date we have not learned. An effort is now being made to throw him into bankruptcy.

We are encouraged by the expressions of satisfaction and good will which greet us since our enlargement; and already the accruing commercial income is, and not a few names have been added to our list of subscribers. We are now printing a paper which is a credit and honor to the county, and we intend to keep it so. Will the public assist us?

Jesse Rasmussen's presence here during this week reminds us that this is the last time to officiate in this county as Judge of this circuit.—Judge Hatch taking his seat before our return. Judge Hatch's private record is without a blemish, and his record of judicial decisions stands as high as that of any Judge in the State. May his success at the bar, to which he returns, be as marked as his success has been upon the bench.

Personal.—Levi Blanchard, Esq., of Albion, father of Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew of this village, and his brother, are spending a few days in town.

—W. S. Johnson, of the firm of Johnson, Hines & Co., of Northport, called upon us on Wednesday.

—Mr. Parkinson, now a member of a Jackson Law firm, but formerly of the firm of Williams & Parkinson, of Elk Rapids, was in attendance at the Charlevoix Circuit Court this week.

—Hon. S. C. Moffat, and Judge Ramsdell of Traverse City, called upon us Wednesday.

—Rev. O. H. Spoor and lady, of Traverse City, were in town on Tuesday.

—Obas Dixon Esq. of Independence, Iowa, and a son of Hon John R. Dixon, of this place, arrived here Thursday, on a visit to the scenes of his childhood.

—Rev. HeWitt C. Durgin, D. D., President of Hillsdale College; Rev. A. A. Smith, of Hillsdale; Rev. J. Malvern, of Chicago; Rev. L. B. Potter, of Lansing; L. P. Reynolds, Treasurer and Secretary of Hillsdale College; H. Harris, M. D., of Hillsdale; and Master C. C. Durgin, of Hillsdale; constitute a party of pleasure and front seekers which arrived by Van Raalte Saturday last. They are a happy crowd, in spite of their sectional sun titles, and if they don't make the woods ring and the front hunt their holes, we are no geneer.

—Mr. Benjamin Walt, general agent of the Lumberman's Gazette of Bay City, called on us one day this week. He is here for trout and the whereas and the trezzes." Mr. Walt's history is one of peculiar interest especially to Canadians, of whom not a few reside in this section. He was a Colonel in the rebellion of 1837 under McKenzie, and getting into the hands of the irritineers was sentenced to capital punishment. Through the energy and heroic efforts of his noble wife his sentence was commuted, and Mr. W. was sent to Van Diemen's Land for life. He, however, managed to escape, and found his way to the States, where most of his days since have been spent.

The Hardwood Harbors of Northern Michigan.

We express the opinion that within the lapse of ten years on interior navigable harbor, that have any connection with the waters of Lakes Michigan or Huron capable of being improved, will be outside of the list of Government harbors.

Reasons for this conclusion are many and obvious to The artificial harbors on these lakes that have been opened and fostered by Congress, have been in the main, created in the interest, and under the influence of lumber capitalists. It is an existing fact that on these shores this branch of commerce has long since reached the highest point of its importance and profit, and is at the present time declining. While on the hand numerous harbors been glutted, and building carried to an excess, on the other the depletion of the pine forests has been so rapid and complete during the said decade, that the business has become less lucrative than in former years.

While these facts combine to "shut up" one side of the commercial balances, the same facts are potent in weighing down the other side, which is fast coming into view as the hardwood interests. Public attention is being drawn to the hitherto unrecognized fact that great wealth lies in the hardwood forests of the North and the rapid settlement of the Northern country calls attention to the fact that immense quantities of just what the Western country needs for its demand to cut destruction within a few years if agencies for rapid interiorizes are not at once brought into action. The great treeless West, which is becoming peopled with thousands of husbandmen, needs agricultural implements as greatly as it needs homes and lands; and while the supply of pine is abundant, that of hardwood is not. The demand from this direction increases yearly. The cities of the West need fuel, and where can it be found in greater abundance or in a more accessible locality than in Northern Michigan?

Looking at these facts as they appear to us in the light of reason, we appeal that the ultimate but thorough improvement of every point of the nature and locality of which we speak, must be the inevitable result of the force of circumstances and the agitation which is being inaugurated by the people and press of the North. And first among those sections which are considered important feeders of this division of commerce, the Pine Lake region stands prominently forth. We are so certain of its rapid and full development as we ever were, and expect a no distant day in seeing here a thrifty commerce as certainly as we expect that the waters of Pine Lake will continue to flow downward and mingle with the waters of Lake Michigan.

Religious.—Methodist services at the school house to-morrow both morning and evening.
